We sat down to play chess. I don't know how long we were at it, but this I do know, that if the entrance of Mr. Levi had not disturbed us, it would have continued probably to the present day. There was at first a move. Then a long conversation. Then a pause, during which the blue eyes seemed to be intently studying the board, and mine were intently studying the blue eyes. Then another move. Then more conversation, until the rival forces on the Rajah's ivory battle-field got into such a state of confusion that I believe Morphy would have become a lunatic at the first glance he cast upon them.

As for me I thought of nothing but the simple, beautiful young creature who sat opposite me, and, in spite of myself, visions of such a being moving about my lonely chambers, making the gloom gay, and causing the bachelor's barren life to bourgeon and bloom like the dry rod of the high priest.

In the midst of all this in came Mr. Levi with my five dollars and a duplicate for the chess-board. He seemed rather astonished at the quiet intimacy which had so suddenly been established between myself and his deposit.

"Mr. Levi," said I to him, "I had no idea that you lent money on this species of personal property. I have a rich old uncle, who won't die without leaving me my share of his property, that I would be very glad to raise something on. How much will you give me on him. He's in an excellent state or preservation, and has served in the last war!"

"Oh!" he replied, laughing, without paying any attention to my proposed avuncular exchange. "Nellie Lee is a capital girl, and it's sometimes as well that she should be away from her father. He—" and here he made an expressive pantomime, suggestive of rum. I looked at Nellie. Her large eyes were filled with tears,

"Don't be angry with me, Nellie," continued the pawnbroker, kindly. "You know that he has very bad habits or you would not be here. My wife is very fond of her, Mr. Papillotte, and for that matter her father adores her, and as he will never finish any of his pictures without the spur of some terrible necessity, we contrive to put Nellie in what we call pawn, and then he is sure to work to get the money to redeem her. Nellie, child, don't cry."

I went up to the poor child, and took her hand gently in my own.

"Nellie Lee," I said, "You love your father very much."

She nodded her head, and shook off a tear or two that fell upon her hand.

"It is but right you should do so. But you are in a strange position here. Your father is not fit to be your guardian, and you will not always meet with pawnbrokers as kind as Mr. Levi. Now, what you ought to do is to intrust yourself to the care of some man who is young and strong, and who, with your fair face and good influences to stimulate him, will work for you day and night, and love you as dearly as your father did."

She shook her head gently, and still the tears fell.

"You think such a one cannot be found? You are wrong. If you could bring yourself to accept his protection; if you could persuade yourself that a love suddenly born could be as vigorous and lasting as one that takes years to mature, you never could repent of it; I swear it!"

"And where is there such a one?" demanded Levi, with a mingled incredulity and curiosity twinkling in his black eyes.

"Here!" I answered. "I want but such an object as this to become industrious. I have abilities if I turn them to account—of that I am convinced; and, after all, if the worst should come, nothing under heaven can keep me from inheriting a portion of my uncle's estate. If Nellie Lee will take me for her husband, I call God to witness that I will cherish and love her until death."

The little head shook no longer, and I felt a slight pressure from the small hand in mine. It may have been a tremor, however.

"Her father would never consent," said Levi, reflectively.

"Never," echoed Nellie, in a low murmur, "he loves me so."

I could have said, "What love is this that puts its idol into a pawnbroker's shop?" but I dared not insult the pure heart beside me, and I remained silent. There was a long pause. No one seemed to know what to say, and Nellie's hand still remained in mine. Then we all heard a sudden, violent ring at the door bell. Levi started and left the room, and still Nellie and I remained silent. But involuntarily I drew her close to my side, my arms stole gently round her small waist. I felt the throbbing of her little heart, and our lips met. The compact I knew was sealed.

In a few seconds Levi re-entered, pale and agitated. He stopped on the threshold when he saw us locked in the embrace, and, leaning against the edge of the door, he said:

"I am glad of it. She has no guardian now but you."

"My father!" and with a shriek Nellie slipped from my clasp and fled toward Levi,

"Poor child!" he said, laying his hand reverently on her head, as if misfortune had rendered her sacred, "It is so. He has left you alone."

There was a wild burst of grief in that dingy pawnbroker's parlor, and poor little Nellie Lee sobbed and fluttered like a bird vainly beating against the iron wires of its cage. The old artist was dead; the wretched man, unable to resist temptation, had expended the money he had obtained from Levi in drink and was found by the police in Washington Park, stretched on one of the walks. He had killed himself with rum.

For many hours my poor child was distracted with her sorrow, and good Mrs. Levi came down stairs, adorned with unredeemed jewelry, and black-eyed Miss Esther her daughter, was also there, smelling of patchouli, and Levi himself was continually coming in and out of the shop with bottles of cologne for the child's temples, and vinaigrettes to hold to her nose. They were all so kind and so gentle to my Nellie in this her great sorrow that I made a vow on the spot never to speak ill of a pawnbroker again as long as I lived.

But in time the tempest wore itself away. Nellie came at last to listen to the few words of consolation I cared to utter; for I am an unbeliever in verbal anodynes; and late that evening I might have been seen sitting on the hair bottomed sofa with a fair, round face somewhat flushed with weeping nestling on my bosom, while Mr. Levi and Miss Esther sat round the fire, and occasionally turned round to admire us.

Need I go much further? Need I describe the quiet wedding where I vowed to be a true husband to Nellie Lee. It would not interest you very much for there were no orange blossoms or bridesmaids, and no receptions and German cotillion afterward.

But I may as well inform you that all I predicted has come to pass. I am now industrious and independent. Nellie is the dearest wife that ever wore a ring; and when I visit Mr. Levi, which I do often, for old friendship's sake, I walk boldly into the house, and have no pecuniary object in doing so.

On an inlaid table in my drawing-room stands an ivory chess-board. It belonged to the Rajah of Gundarcool, and was taken from the royal table by a relative of mine in the Albicore Fencibles, after the siege of that place. It is the very identical chess-board which led to my finding Nellie in pawn.

Finances at the West.

The Chicago Tribune is informed by one well acquainted with the German press of the northwest, that all the German papers in that section, without regard to party politics, are opposed to inflation and support the veto of the President, and it publishes a list of these papers, published in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin and Missouri, as evidence of the fact. The Keokuk Gate City says that every weekly paper in McGary's district, of both parties, is opposed to inflation, and that in Keokuk and Burlington, the two chief commercial points of the district, public opinion is ten to one against inflation. The western country banks are full of money; Iowa and Illinois banks have offered to one bank in Chicago, $75,000; another bank has been offered $20,000 from the county; and one Iowa bank has $50,000 to loan in Chicago. With these offers comes the assurance, hardly needed, that money is plenty; the farmers have had large crops, and they have been sold at fair prices; the shipments of grain have been going all winter. The farmers are economizing. They have learned the way to get a currency which is worth what it pretends to be, is to provide something which people need. And that is the whole secret. Anybody can get money now and at all times, who has something to give for it which ministers to the necessities and comforts of life; and nobody else ought to have any, except by way of charity in cases of deserving penury. If the west is as sound as it seems to be, there need be no fear of further inflation. Even were there no presidential veto, the voice of the people would soon be heard and obeyed by the mistaken members of Congress.

Things Generally.

[Max Adeler.]

The deadliest thing that has been done lately by the "intelligent compositor" was his attempt to give lucidity to a lecture delivered in Philadelphia, by Prof. Smith. The Professor, in his discourse, urged that "Filteration is sometimes assisted by the use of albumen;" but the compositor got the remark into shape in this runious fashion: "Flirtation is sometimes arrested by the use of aldermen." A figure bearing singularly close resemblance to Professor Smith, has been hovering around that newspaper office at night lately with a solemn looking shot gun; but the compositor has gone West in search of fresh victims.

"Is that an esculent?" inquired Prof. Hotchkiss, the other day, of a huckster who displayed in the market a mammoth and very old looking vegetable. The man's face assumed a scornful smile, and after he had studied the professor's form contemptuously for a moment, he answered: "Esculent! thunder and lightning, no! that's a blue nose potato."

Our new steam fire engine, the first we ever had, arrived in New Castle the other day, and of course the entire population of the village turned out to witness the trial of the machine. Mr. Bob Parker secured the post of honor as holder of the service-pipe; and he was mighty proud of it. The engine was down at the wharf getting ready to pump water from the river, and Parker stood almost four hundred yards off at the end of a line of hose, waiting for the stream to come, so that he could squirt it over the court house steeple.

There was a great deal of delay while the men were fixing the engine, and Parker incautiously held the muzzle of the pipe toward his waistcoat while he discussed the question of a third term for Grant with Rev. Dr. Hopkins. At the most interesting moment of the debate the engine suddenly began to work, and the next instant a two-inch stream struck Parker in the stomach with terrific force, and rolled him over in the gutter. He felt as if the gulf stream had been shot through him from front to back. Then the pipe gave a few eccentric jerks, smashed Dr. Hopkins' hat into black silk chaos and emptied a hogshead of water into his open mouth. It concluded the exercises by getting into such a position that it could play a million gallons a minute up the left trowsers leg of the prostrate Mr. Parker. Parker seemed to lose all interest in the capacity of that engine. He went home for his Sunday clothes, and he has since intimated to his confidential friends that if Grant should spend the whole of his third term squirting a stream fifty thousand feet high with that diabolical fire extinguisher, he, Parker, would not go round the corner to witness the spectacle.

My friend Dr. McGinnis has been engaged in some very interesting experiments with projectiles. He saw it stated in a scientific journal which he was reading the other evening, that, "If a tallow candle be placed in a gun and shot at a door, it will go through without sustaining any injury." This struck him as being very curious, and as he had his doubts about its truth, he determined to test the thing by firing a candle at the door of his smoke house. Accordingly he seized his gun, which was standing in the corner, loaded, and at the same time he picked up the candle from the table. The doctor is a little absent minded; and his thoughts at this particular juncture were so intently engaged in considering whether the candle actually would bore a hole in the door of the smoke house that he forgot to extinguish it. As there was deep darkness in the room the moment he dropped the tallow into the right hand barrel, his attention was instantly called to the circumstance that he had made a mistake. Before he could rectify it, however, the charge exploded, and terrific screams were heard issuing from the room above. The doctor flew up stairs, and found Mrs. McGinnis fainting upon the floor, while a hugh gob of grease clung to the ceiling above her, surrounded by holes made by a handful of duck shot. Mrs. McGinnis was only frightened. Presently she revived and—but no; there are some domestic scenes which are too sacred to be unveiled to a cold and unsympathetic world. However, the docter is convinced that a candle may be shot through a ceiling and a floor, but will not be able to demonstrate the fact to his friends. Mrs. McGinnis has sold his gun.

Magruder's oldest boy came staggering through the door of the kitchen the other day with his face as white as the reputation of one of the early martyrs. When his mother, in great alarm, asked what was the matter, he said he thought he must have caught cold some how. But as he proceeded to the window the next moment and began to permit his breakfast to come to light, the answer was not regarded as perfectly satisfactory, and the old lady instituted an investigation upon her own account. In the first pocket that she explored she discovered a plug of tobacco from which a mouthful had been removed; and then as the cause of Henry's illness was evident she proceeded to hunt up Henry's father for the purpose of getting him to remonstrate with the culprit. When Magruder arrived he went to the closet and selected a favorite bed-slat, and approaching Henry, he sternly asked:

"What d' mean by chawin' torbacker? Haven't I told you often enough to let that ornary stuff alone? I've half a mind to bang thunder out o' you. What d' you mean, say?"

"I was only trying to scare off the cannibals," blubbered Henry. "I don't want to chew tobacco. I only to wanted to keep 'em from eatin' me. I'll cross my heart to it."

"Cannibals! cannibals!" exclaimed Magruder, "what are you talkin' about? Commere to me this minute! Harriet, this boy's crazy. Tell me what you mean, quick, or I'll shake the sawdust out o' you."

"I saw it in the paper," said Henry, "and I thought maybe they'd kotch me some time and I'd better get ready for 'em. I was tryin' to chew so I'd get soaked with tobacco. If you don't believe me read that," and he fumbled in his pockets until he produced the following extract from a health journal:

"It is said of the cannibals that they will not eat the flesh of a tobacco chewer because it is so highly charged with the taste and odor of tobacco."

When Magruder finished the paragraph he said: "Well, I'll let you off this time, but, mind me, don't you chaw that stuff agin. No canibal is goin' to eat you any way, and if any o'em come foolin' around here, you call me and I'll smash 'em with this yer bed-slat."

Then Henry rose from his couch and went out to hunt for the plug of tobacco which his mother had tossed through the window. It seems to me that those health journal are demoralizing things.

The Foremost Tonic of the Age.

A new path to health was provided for the sick, a new shield against disease was secured to the healthy, when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters became the standard tonic of America. For nearly a quarter of a century this powerful and genial antidote to disease and the causes which produce it, has been on its mission, building up the feeble, helping nature to fight down every variety of ailment, soothing pain, promoting digestion, regulating the secretions, increasing the nervous vigor of the system, cheering the spirits, arresting premature decay, and not only prolonging life, but adding value to it by putting thousands of invalids in a condition to enjoy its prolonged existence. Publicity would be large enough to contain a history of the cases of dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, intermittent fever, nervous debility, and mental and physical prostration cured by this great vegetable invigorant, which not only restores health, but protects it from danger in the most unhealthy districts.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Reader, if you must have physic, why not the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as goods are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs

NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

CURING

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

Local Matters.

Laconics.

Schooner George, of Bangor, from Boston bound to Portland, light, went ashore on Sea Point, Gerrish's Island, at 3 o'clock Thursday morning. She is badly bilged and will probably be a total wreck.

A petition to the Board of Mayor and Aldermen for the widening of a portion of Hanover street, is now in circulation. This street has been much used since Fleet street was widened, and the improvement asked for will be absolutely necessary some day; and it can be done now much cheaper than ever again.

The May term of the U. S. Circuit Court opens in this city to-day. Judge Clifford of the U. S. Supreme Court will preside, making the Rockingham House his home during his stay here.

Dr. Hebbard's third lecture will be given in Congress Hall this (Friday) evening. Admission 25 cents. See advertisement.

The Senate has confirmed Stephen Rand, Jr., to be Passed Assistant Paymaster.

"Old Mut," of the Concord Monitor, has finally seen the Biddeford Journal containing the item we copied from it, and now is smitten with the idea that the editor of the Journal does not write his own editorial paragraphs and that the one we copied was "smuggled" into the Journal without Bro. Butler's knowledge. "Old Mut" pretends to believe that the Journal editor would not write such a paragraph, inasmuch as he has "enjoyed a pleasant acquaintance" with him for years. The latter fact probably accounts for our Biddeford neighbor's remarks; and shows that he has spoken advisedly of the Massachusetts-Concord-second-hand-idea-d chap, knowing him too well to honor his impudence or defend his egotism and folly. We congratulate ourselves that we have thus far escaped personal "acquaintance" with our contemptible Concord contemporary, as judging the sapling by its fruit a more intimate connection might lead us to despise his friendship as much as we enjoy his enmity.

Parlor Science.

Simple experiments in chemistry, natural philosophy, etc., which can be easily performed by children or non-scientific adults, are often described in the papers, some of which regularly devote a portion of their space to such things, under the head of "Parlor Science." We saw a very interesting and satisfactory experiment of this kind tried a few evenings since, a pound of the best tea (purchased for $1.40, of a grocer who has a justly-earned reputation for selling only the very best goods,) being stirred up with a common toy magnet. When the magnet was removed it was thickly encrusted with minute bristles of iron or steel, evidently filings; and the experiment was several times repeated with a like result, until the lady of the house took the tea away for fear the magnet would use it all up. Rasberry leaves were not hunted for. The reputation of the dealer from whom this pound of cast-iron tea was obtained is a bar to any suspicion that was "doctored" after coming into his hands, and the flavor of the beverage made from it was excellent; so we are forced to believe the stories of the extensive adulteration of even the best and highest-priced articles of food and luxury, particularly tea,—of which (as some positively assert) there is not a pound in the market absolutely pure. So far as we know there is nothing harmful to the health in this iron alloy of tea, the main objection being the high price charged for the metal,—in this instance $2800 per ton of 2000 lbs., when any respectable iron merchant will supply the best Norway dimension iron at $150 a ton or less, and be glad of the chance.

The first scientific experiment having resulted in so much innocent amusement, it was concluded to try another, so a pound of cheap yellow sugar was procured and dissolved in warm water. The sugar all dissolved, and was voted genuine and good; but there was a goodly debris of sand and small rocks, which wouldn't dissolve but obstinately remained unchanged in the bottom of the dish, and must have amounted to between one and two ounces' weight. This gravel was of very good quality,—nothing deleterious about it; it was just the kind that is bought at a dollar a cart-load to mix with lime to make mortar, or to mend streets with. And this experiment also was considered highly satisfactory by the embryo analysts, who propose to pursue their investigations into the mysteries of nature as improved by art.

Car Thieves.

[Portland Advertiser.]

When the freight train over the Eastern Road, due here at 6 A. M., left Portsmouth Wednesday A. M. the freight cars were all securely fastened. Conductor Winn soon after heard a noise in one of the cars and discovered that, at one of the way stations, it had been broken into. The doors were secured and when the train arrived here three young men were discovered in the car who were evidently intending to rob it. They were arrested.

Hints to Mothers.

Women who are nursing babies should never drink tea. If I had time, I could tell you in plain terms the reason for this assertion. I do not believe in tea for any one outside the countries where it is raised; and I have no doubt that there it is a national blessing. Americans need no such astringents, no such nerve quickeners. The tea drinking is one great cause of nervousness among women. I believe every thinking man and woman will agree, oatmeal, Indian meal gruel, cocoa, or chocolate, are the beverages to be taken of by women who nurse their babies. They insure quality, as well as quantity, and, made of good rich milk, can be freely partaken of. There is no need of an ordinarily healthy woman growing thin because she is nursing. Then, again, infants should be held as little as possible; and trotted and rocked, never. Accustom your baby at once to the bed and crib, and insist, whatever your nurse may say to the contrary, upon its sleeping alone. Then feed your baby regularly, and disabuse your mind of the impression that it is hungry every time it makes a noise. No woman should nurse her infant oftener than twice in the night, and at six months this should be stopped entirely, in order to guard the mother against the exhaustion which follows inevitably upon the keeping up of this unnatural night drag. Once in two or three hours during the day is also quite often enough. Bear in mind, also, that your baby wants, and must have, cold water to drink daily. Begin first, and immediately, with a teaspoonful, allowing the child to be its own judge as to the quantity. Give your babies room enough to breathe, and plenty of sunshine, and my word on it, you will have no trouble; and mothers can only do this by taking proper care of themselves. The present system of bringing up children is an abomination; but what more can be expected with so little preparation for life and its duties on the part of our women?

Planetary Display.

There are now two of the brightest and most conspicuous planets, evening stars. Venus, in the fore part of May, will not set till toward nine o'clock, and all through the month will shine with peculiar beauty, it will be evening star all the season till Dec. 8, when the long expected and important transit, so far as some scientific knowledge is concerned, will take place.

Jupiter is also evening star, and will be till Oct. 5. During May it will be seen when the sky is not cloudy, from twilight till sometime past midnight. It is bright and glorious to the sight.

Jupiter has four moons. Of course eclipses and transits are somewhat frequent. In the last month there were some of great interest to astronomers. April 7, there was an eclipse of its fourth satellite or moon, and before it ended, its first made a transit. On the 15th, its second and fourth moons made transits at the same time. Without the aid of glasses we have been in ecstasy in drawing a diagram of the situation of the nearest planets at that time and of the paths of Jupiter's moons with the two in transit. But what must have been the ecstatic wonder and delight of those intelligences that may live on that great orb in witnessing these great wonders!

Jupiter, in May, is in the constellation Leo, (the Lion,) in which is what is called the sickle, stars being much in the shape of that implement.

Mars is evening star. It is a red, fiery planet, but not so brilliant this time as at some other. It was in Aries a few nights ago, but has passed rapidly into Taurus. It is not far (in appearance) from Venus.

Morning stars are not much at this time. We advise early rising, but while the stars will be wonders to contemplate, planets will not be much. Saturn, the planet that has eight moons and marvelous rings, is morning star, slowly wending its way in Capricornus. It is far south and without close scrutiny cannot be distinguished from stars around it. UNCLE JOSEPH.

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

SPRING OPENING

—OF—

Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

Facts for Farmers.

If you invest money in tools, and then leave them exposed to the weather, it is the same as loaning money to a spendthrift without security, — a dead loss in both cases.

If you invest money in books, and never read them, it is the same as putting your money into a bank but never drawing either principal or interest.

If you invest money in fine stock, and do not feed and protect them and properly care for them, it is the same as dressing your wife in silk to do kitchen work.

If you invest your money in choice fruits, and do not guard and give them a chance to grow and prove their value, it is the same as putting a good hand into the field with poor tools to work with.

If you invest your money in a good farm, and do not cultivate it well, it is the same as marrying a good wife and so abusing and enslaving her as to crush her energies and break her heart.

If you invest your money in a fine house, and do not cultivate your mind and taste so as to adorn it with intelligence and refinement, it is as if you was to wear broadcloth and a silk hat to the mill.

If you invest your money in fine clothes, and do not wear them with dignity and ease, it is as if a plowman were to sit at a jeweler's table to make and adjust hair-springs.

If you invest money in strong drink, it is the same as turning hungry hogs into a corn-field,—ruin will follow in both cases.

If you invest your money in every new wonder that flaming circulars proclaim, it is the same as buying tickets at a lottery office, where there are ten blanks to one prize.

If you invest your money in the last novel, it is the same as employing a tailor's dandy to dig potatoes.

PEYSER & KENNEDY,

The liberal settlement of the Eastern Railroad Company for our losses for Damage by Fire and Water at the East Boston Freight Depot, enables us to throw a few cases more of

FINE WOOLENS, DOESKINS,
DIAGONALS, MELTONS,
KERSEYS, CASSIMERES, and
SILK AND WOOL MIXTURES,

into the market at a low appraisal. The price is marked in plain figures on each piece, and in comparison with the quality will be found to be

ASTONISHINGLY LOW!

Ask your friends and neighbors who have availed themselves of this

GREAT CHANCE,

or come and see for yourselves after examining other stocks, that this is no fancy-drawn or fiction, but a palpable fact, that you can buy CLOTH FOR GARMENTS of all qualities at so low a figure that EVERYBODY can afford to clothe themselves. Those of a limited means will find it a comfort to their children and themselves without exhausting their stamps. We lose no money by it, assisting others to PRACTICE ECONOMY these hard times. Every sensible Man, Woman and Boy will at once see that we can sell any of our READY-MADE

DRESS UP

Custom Clothing!

AT LOW PRICES, when we have had the chance to make them up of fine First-Class Materials at half price. This is so plain to everybody that it would be disparaging to the intelligence of our customers to argue the point. Our assortment of is extensive and varied and made up to wear, and those who buy of us will get their money's worth.

We sell no Bankrupt Stock or shop-worn, old faded goods. We do not wish to shock the sensibilities of our customers with fancy tales of dire distress of some (let us hope imaginary) unfortunate trader and his losses. We do not take stock in it. Our Stock and Goods are

NEW, NICE, WELL-MADE AND TRIMMED,

Cost no less than exacted, and we sell them so cheap that our customers are our best friends and at our success in business. We make a specialty of Tom's Foolishness.

"Another girl! and girls are of no earthly use in France without a dowry;" and Monsieur Marillac stalked out of his house in a rage.

The little new comer, who was named Marie, was the fifth daughter come to vex the paternal committee of ways and means. As matrimony is the chief end of a French girl's existence, it was no wonder that poor Monsieur received the congratulations of his friends with his heart wrong side out.

But little Marie throve in spite of the frowns, and at sixteen had developed into a fine, handsome, and brave girl, so that her father was wont to stroke her long brown hair, and say, "True, you are a girl, Marie, but you have all the qualities of a man. That is a great comfort."

At that time Marie had two lovers—one old, rich, and whose suit her father favored; the other, young, not rich, whom Marie married without her father's blessing. Her husband had just completed a medical education. He was tall and handsome, and his name was Pierre Marquerat. A week after their marriage Pierre found himself nearly penniless, and the young husband and wife soon bade good bye to France, to seek a home and fortune in America. They landed in New York, beginning the work of home-making with empty hands, but strong hearts full of love. Pierre gradually won a place for himself and his profession, which added to Marie's excellent management, furnished them with all the real comforts of home. But every year or two brought a baby, until there were seven, all boys. "Ah! if my father could only see my seven boys, he would adore me, and quite forgive me for being a girl myself," Marie would proudly say.

When the youngest was three years old, almost the entire family were stricken down with fever. From days and nights of watching, Pierre, who was less strong than Marie, became prostrate—from fatigue, his physician said; but he would be quite well after a little rest. In two hours he was dead, and the eldest son lay dying.

From that day Marie was broken-hearted. She had loved her husband with the whole force and strength of her intense nature. From the day she married him until he lay dead at her side no other man had seemed to her so large souled, so noble-hearted, so devoted and true. She did not weep—her grief was too deep for that. Her heart, if she had one, was stone. Nothing moved her. All sorrows fell so far short of her own as to seem not worthy the name of sorrow. She was still so young, barely thirty-three, and she already had drank to the very dregs the sweetest and saddest of life's wine. For her woman's heart there was nothing left. For her mother's heart there were six boys, and for her brains and her hands the care and support of them. She had her home, but no income now. What could she do? Teach French, and take a few boarders. So in a few week's time saw the happy, bright-eyed, vivacious Marie changed into a pale, sad, black-robed woman, with her handsome boys, gathered about her like a constellation, and half a dozen gentlemen to sit at her table and learn French. Most of them were professional men, while one or two were own countrymen. The first to come was Tom Sigismond, partner in a down-town teahouse and the pet of a bachelor coterie, many of whom had been classmates in college, and led the usual life of well-to-do fellows who have no "incumbrances." Some one in the firm was wanted who understood French, and why not learn it himself? A Franco-American friend gave him Madame Marquerat's address. The artlessness of madame's broken-hearted face, made the formal business matter a foregone conclusion. And so it happened that being the first by a day on the carpet, Tom was given the late doctor's place at the table, "if he would be good as to carve." Carving was as new and untried a business as speaking French. But he was a fellow to do anything for a woman except marry her. He would carve if he amputated his hands in the operation. And then those six distracting boys with their interminable French chatter, with their "maman, maman, maman," kissing her, hugging her, rubbing their heads against her, overwhelming her with their devotion, and trying her patience to the utmost! How could he ever expect to learn all their pretty French names, much less abide in the midst of such a bedlam?

And so each and all of the gentlemen thought, but had their wonderings answered by the nameless graces of the widowed madame. Day by day only enhanced their admiration, and astonished them with their capabilities. From morning until evening neither her hands nor her feet seemed to find rest. There were always the boys to be sent to school, the market, her French pupils, her household to superintend; and yet she seemed always so incapable of fatigue, always so tidy, and always courteous, and ready to talk, but always so very, very sad.

One day Gustave, the third boy, was brought in from the street with the blood streaming from a wound in his head. It had been nearly a year since Pierre had died, and until now Marie had thought she had no heart. But the sight of her bleeding child showed her that she had, and she gave way to a flood of tears. After that she was quite like the impulsive, vivacious, and warm-hearted Marie of old. She was a Frenchwoman in a thousand ingenious ways—so rich in tact, in expediency, in helpfulness; but had it not been for all those boys, one might never have known what a character she had. One day it was teaching little Pierre never to lie; another, Louis the beauty of unselfishness; another, courteous manners to Colet, generosity to Claude, or patience to Paul. She was certainly the most wonderful mother these men ever had seen; and neither had they forgotten their own. The sight of her and her boys day after day developed their own fatherly instincts and longings for a home and fireside and a madame of their own. But where could such another Marie be found? None of them asked himself that question oftener than old handsome Tom Sigismond. Women were so tremendously deceitful! He could count up a score of "perfect beauties" he had flirted with, who smiled sweetly, sang and talked like seraphs, and made bewildering toilets; but he declared he knew them to be perfect Xantippes in temper. (That was before Xantippe's amiability had been exonerated.) If he married, and he certainly never should, but if he did, he wanted to know the woman. Calling now and then, seeing her in the parlor, going to the opera and concert, riding in Central Park, and the like, furnished no real clew to her character. Moreover, there was no way to find out, unless one interviewed her maid, or engaged in her employ under the guise of coachman. Even if they were angels, he was afraid of angels, unless it was this French one with her six cherubs.

Of course he learned French with a vengeance. It was a wonderfully courteous language, seeming fitted for only lords and ladies. He was astonished that he had not learned it before. It was "Voulez-vous quelque chose, madame?" in the morning and at night. He charged himself with commissions, and finally grew to taking the boys out by twos for a walk or ride. At the end of two or three years he was the only original boarder left. He had conjugated the verb aimer through all its moods and tenses, and instead of looking further for a Marie, decided to sue for this one, including the satellites, Louis, Colet, Gustave, etc.

One day he fell in with a pair of his bachelor friends.

"Where do you keep yourself?" Tom, inquired one. "I haven't seen you for six months. In love, eh, old fellow?"

"Yes, I believe I am," said Tom, seriously.

"One more unfortunate!" doled out the other. "Young, rich, and pretty, I suppose?"

"Yes, young, rich, and beautiful," answered Tom. "No money, a widow and six boys."

"Oh, that—excuse me—but that's too thin."

"But it's a fact," said Tom; and the friends sobered.

"Hey! are you crazy, old boy?"

"Never less so, old fellow."

"Six boys! the dickens! That's beginning life at the top end, I should say."

"Very likely; but if there were twelve, it would be all the same. There isn't another woman in the world like her! She's French. I've been learning French."

"Y-e-s, I should say so—by heart. Did you propose en Francais, à la Francais?"

"Haven't come to that yet."

"Ah, then you're not hopelessly lost."

"Yes, I am. It's a gone case. If she says no, I'm her's all the same."

Of course they had abundant reason to think he was a fool. Anybody would, when he could marry any one of the twenty "splendid girls," but instead chose a widow dowered with half a dozen boys! But then he had got beyond public opinion. But what would Marie think? and what would Louis and Gustave and Colet and all those other graded thinkers think? It was no small thing to attack a heart surrounded by such a home-guard. But faint heart, etc., including six boys.

One day Marie seemed unusually sad and perplexed. "Some of those horrible bills to meet," Tom suspicioned, and he couldn't offer her a cent beyond his board, which he made as high as possible. Next day found her face no brighter, and after the boys were all in bed he knocked at madame's little sitting-room, saying he would like to come in for a while. Marie blushed, and putting her fingers to her lips, pointed to little Pierre asleep on a sofa. A low tone suited what Tom had to say, and so he begun, after drawing a chair vis-a-vis to her own.

"Madame, you are the only woman in the world I know, and the only woman I love. I wish to marry you."

Marie threw up her hands in true French horror.

"Marry me! Pourquoi?"

"For yourself."

"But my six boys! what can you think?"

"I think they need a father. You are wearing you life out to care for them. Moreover, as they grow older they will need advice and guidance that you can scarcely give. That I want to marry you and the six boys is a proof that I love you six times as much as is necessary to love a woman without children."

"Oh, but you will think different to-morrow."

"No; I made up my mind to this six months ago. I have only waited hoping that time and circumstances would make you need me as much as I need you. I hope I am not wholly indifferent to you?"

"You have been very, very good. But no one can be to me what my Pierre was. I cannot allow you to sacrifice yourself, and I cannot marry again. I must give myself to my children—les pauvres garcons!" and the tears streamed down her cheeks.

"But it breaks my heart to see you distressed, and have no right to help you," exclaimed Tom, seizing the fair white hand, that bore only a wedding-ring, and kissing it in a desperate way.

"Ah, then you must go away," sighed Marie.

"And never see you again?"

"Only as a friend."

"And you have no other answer?"

"None other, Monsieur."

"Promise me one thing. If you can at any future time give me a different answer, grant me the honor of telling you again how entirely my life is yours, and yours only."

She smiled sadly. "There is always hope in such promises, and I will not deceive you. You will thank me for this some day, if you do not now."

"Of course Tom protested that he never would, and avowed his loyalty and devotion, and then, packing his traps, went to a hotel without a word to anybody.

When the fact of his departure became known in the house the boys were furious, and overwhelmed Marie with questionings. Each one missed him in his own peculiar way, and, "I wish, I do, that Monsieur Sigismond would come back!" greeted Marie's ears many times a day. And she, poor thing! missed him a thousand times more and more as the days went on, until it was no longer any use for her to deny to herself that she loved him almost as much as she had Pierre. And was she quite sure that she ought not to have said "Yes" for the boys' sake?

One day Colet came dancing in like a wild boy. "Oh, mamma, I met Monsieur Sigismond to-day, and he asked how the dear, beautiful mamma was, and all about the boys; and I asked him why he went away, and he said he didn't want to, and that he was just going to come back, but you wouldn't let him. Say, mamma, is that so? Mayn't I tell him he may come back?"

"No, no, Colet; mother thinks he is very good, and hopes that some day he will come back without mother's saying so." But he did not come; and although Marie devoted herself to the boys, her heart ached all the day.

Her old friend, Dr. Lauson, who had known her and her husband for many years, and who had always been very fond of Marie, came in nearly every evening, with the kind intention of cheering her. True, she would rather a hundred times have been alone, but she was too kind to appear otherwise than glad to see him. On one of these visits the doctor surprised her with an offer of his hand and heart; a very sensible, appropriate, and worthy husband, the world would have said. When he had finished, Marie pointed to the door.

"Never come through that again with such a thought or wish in your heart," she said, almost passionately. "I do not love you; I can not love you; I never can love you. You are my friend; I will be frank with you; I love Mr. Sigismond."

The doctor bowed an adieu, and passed out. He was a generous soul. He knew Sigismond. He went straight to the hotel, and sent up his card to Tom.

"Glad to see you doctor," greeted Tom, giving his hand a cordial clasp.

"I've just been and offered myself to Madame Marquerat," blurted out the doctor, sinking into an easy-chair.

"Ah, and am I to offer congratulations?" said Tom in a forced way.

"Yes, I think you are, Mr. Sigismond. I certainly should if I stood in your boots."

"Yes? Well, and when is the happy event to come off?"

"Any time you say, I reckon;" and the doctor ran his fingers through his spare locks.

"I say?—that's clever. You speak in riddles. I hope the event has not affected—clouded—disturbed—your—your—"

"Yes. I think it has. Madame showed me the door. She loves another man, Sir—another man."

"Her poor Pierre," suggested Tom.

"No, it's a live man, and his name is Tom—Tom Sigismond."

"What!" shouted Tom, springing up.

"E-h-h?" responded the doctor slowly. "It's best not to be excited over it. You can't see her to-night; but if you go around to-morrow, I think you can fix the matter up; and I advise you to rush matters. I know Marie. She loves you, my boy—she loves you; but she is a proud piece, and if you give her a chance, she will keep postponing the matter to the hurt of you all. God bless you!"

"And you too, my dear man!" added Tom, fairly taking the good doctor in his arms.

Tom went around "to-morrow." The boys were all home from school, and Marie stood in their midst, adjusting some difficulty.

"I saw Dr. Lauson last night, Madame Marquerat," began Tom, putting his arm about her, while the boys looked on in silent wonder. "We will be married to-morrow." He spoke as if an appeal was an utter impossibility. "Boys, what do you say to having me for a father?"

"Oh, jolly! splendid!" they all shouted: and seeing the doubtful look on Marie's face, which by intuition they interpreted, began to plead. "Yes, mamma; do, please!" while Louis, drawing back and folding his arms, said, with grave dignity,

"I tell you what, Mr. Sigismond, we think you're a first rate fellow, but you'll have to be awful good to mother. I'm nearly as tall as you now, and I'm well up in gymnastics."

"Hush, hush, Louis!" laughed Marie, waving the entire corps from the room. What happened afterward has happened a great many times and the oftener it happens the more it baffles description.

Next day there was a quiet wedding in the little home parlor, with only Dr. Lauson, one or two lady friends, and the boys to witness the ceremony. Tom's friends declared the fellow was a fool. But his mode of reconciling them to his fate was most effectual. He invited them to dine with him, to show off his boys, make them envy him his Marie, and enjoy the most delicious dinners in New York: and they invariably went away confessing that Tom was not such a very great fool after all. That was five years ago, and as an illustration of the power of example, three out of the five bachelors have married widows with daughters, whom they laughingly declare shall marry the Marquerat boys.

The Arkansas War.

A Little Rock despatch and also a written statement signed by Judges Searle and Bennett, give details of their capture by and escape from the Baxterites, from which it appears that a lieutenant in whose charge the judges were placed, hearing that the regulars were in pursuit, and he having received orders not to let the judges be rescued alive, concluded that he would himself release them. While en route to Little Rock from Benton, the regulars were met, but it being dark, Judge Bennett fled to the woods. Judge Searle was taken to Little Rock, and the next morning, while he and Chief Justice McClure were in consultation, Judge Bennett came in, having been cared for by a colored man during the night.

Cremation.

[London Cor. Cincinnati Commercial.]

Cremation, which may now be regarded as one of the established agitations of England, was first proposed in this country by a woman—Mrs. Rose M. Crawshay. This lady comes of an old family of Oxfordshire, where her ancestors have long enjoyed magisterial position. She is the wife of the famous Iron King of Wales, Robert Crawshay, Esq., who recently sold his iron establishment at Merthyr Tydvil for one and a quarter millions sterling. His wealth may new be estimated at about three millions sterling. Mrs. Crawshay, therefore, occupies a position of some advantage for the aid of movements in which she is interested. She resides in a magnificent castle which has long been known for its grand hospitality to men of advanced opinions. There have been entertained the Lyells, Grovers, Huxleys, and other scientific notabilities, and when Mr. Emerson was in this country he was entertained there. Mrs. Crawshay is an active heretic in religious matters, and a sore trouble to the bishops, rectors, and vicars of her region by reason of her fondness for writing and printing telling pamphlets calculated to unsettle people's minds on important subjects. Moreover, she is the President of the School Board of Merthyr, and joins with the Unitarian preacher there (elected by her influence) in successfully resisting the efforts of the clergy to carry out their educational schemes. It was this extraordinary lady who began the agitation in favor of "euthanasia," and it is she, as I have said, who started the later discussion by putting out more than a year ago a pamphlet in favor of burning the bodies of the dead. Having met Sir Henry Thompson at a dinner in London, where she resides with her family a part of every season, she interested him in the subject, and the result was the celebrated paper in the Contemporary Review, which has been translated into all European languages. A society to promote "cremation" has now been formed, in which Sir Henry Thompson and Mrs. Crawshao are the leading officers, and which is gaining new and able adherents every day. Yesterday the organ of the Government (the Standard) had an editorial in its favor, and intimates that permission may soon be given for the furnace, as in Dresden and Leipsig. It is remarkable that the project has met with so little religious opposition. Even the Catholics have offered no important resistance. The Bishop of Manchester has gone so far as to preach in favor of it. He argued to his hearers that it was not at all necessary to the "resurrection of the body" that one's dust should be all kept together until judgment day; when that day arrived God could recall the atoms together from the four quarters of the world.

—A haggard-looking person put his head in at the door yesterday morning, and said: "Beautiful sn——," when a paper weight took him between the eyes, and he rolled on down stairs, saying "O-o-o-h!" every bump.

—The quickest way we know of to make a man believe that there's nothing in the world worth living for is to excite him into chasing a cat across a yard where two or three clothes lines are innocently swaying in the evening breeze.

—The new rolling mill of the Phœnix Iron Company, at Phœnixville, Penn., is the largest single mill building under one roof in the country. It covers six and a quarter acres, and will cost $280,000. The furnaces, engines and machinery will cost nearly a million dollars.

—A saloonist attempted to bluff a woman of Dayton, O., with the challenge; "Madam, Christ drank wine; why can't we?" Instantly the reply was given: "Yes sir; and if you will sell wine made from water, you may do so." Bickham gives the moral: "Don't quote Scripture to these women."

—The Advertiser of Portland, Me., says that recently a person visiting one of the cemeteries, overheard a thrice-made widow, not yet old nor homely, who was standing beside three mounds, remark to a gentleman who is known to have been attentive to the widow in her youth: "Joe, you might have been in that row had you possessed a little more courage."

The Foremost Tonic of the Age.

A new path to health was provided for the sick, a new shield against disease was secured to the healthy, when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters became the standard tonic of America. For nearly a quarter of a century this powerful and genial medicine has disease and the causes which produce it, has been on its sanitary march, building up the feeble, helping nature to fight down every variety of ailment, soothing pain, promoting digestion, regulating the secretions, increasing the nervous vigor of the sye, tem, cheering the spirits, arresting premature decay, and not only prolonging life, but adding value to it by putting thousands of invalids in a condition to enjoy it. No volume ever published would be large enough to contain a history of the cases of dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, intermittent fever, nervous debility, and mental and physical prostration cured by this great vegetable invigorant, which not only restores health, but protects it from danger in the most unhealthy districts.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

No use of any longer taking the large, repulsive, griping, drastic and nauseous pills, composed of crude and bulky ingredients, and put up in cheap wood or paste-board boxes, when we can by a careful application of chemical science, extract all the cathartic and other medicinal properties from the most valuable roots and herbs, and concentrate them into a minute Granule, scarcely larger than a mustard seed, that can be easily swallowed by those of the most sensitive stomachs and fastidious tastes. Each of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets represents, in a most concentrated form, as much cathartic power as is embodied in any of the large pills found for sale in the drug shops. From the wonderful cathartic power, in proportion to their size, people who have not tried them are apt to suppose that these are harsh or drastic in effect, but such is not at all the case, the different active medicinal principles of which they are composed being so harmonized, one by the others, as to produce a most searching and thorough, yet gently and kindly operating cathartic. 25 cents a vial, by druggists. 721

As some of my friends, connected with the sale of other kinds of sewing machines, have interested themselves so much during the past winter as to falsely represent that the "Domestic" S. M. Co. had failed, and that there could be no parts obtained for the "Domestic" Needles, etc., etc., I will state that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Co. has been making steady progress from the first, and as to parts of the machine, needles, etc., being obtained, I keep them constantly on hand. But although the "Domestic" where it has been sold may be run "from morn until eve" without tiring the operator. We have had scarcely any call for extra parts and are pleased to state that we have not so much business in that way as some of our neighbors. If however any one owning a "Domestic" should in any manner be disaffected, all matters will be made right by calling at my office. I will further state that as heretofore I shall keep on hand all kinds of Petition of J. C. Goodrich and others for widening Hanover street near Vaughan street was referred to committee on streets.

The Board voted not to allow Isaac St. John to erect a sign-post in the street at No. 122 Market street.

An appropriation of $100 for Memorial Day, was passed. The school committee of Ward One presented a request for additional school accommodations for primary and intermediate departments,—referred to committee on city land and buildings.

The Sunday School concert in the Methodist church, Thursday evening, was so largely attended and gave so much satisfaction that it was announced that it would be repeated (with additions) on Tuesday evening, the 12th. The repetition will take place, but it has been decided to have it on Thursday evening, the 14th, instead of at the time first named.

The Concord Monitor has an editorial on "The Maine Senatorship," which is so indefinite that the reader is left in doubt whether the writer is for or against Senator Hamlin. "Say something—if it isn't quite so bright" is the Monitor's motto. The Boston papers have not yet expressed their opinions on the subject, and so the Monitor finds itself at sea, all at once, with nothing in the shape of a rudder, Especial attention is invited to the card of the American House, Boston, which appears in our columns to-day. A very large proportion of the Portsmouth people who are called to Boston by business or pleasure patronise that favorite hotel, and the proportion will doubtless be still larger hereafter, the price of board being now graded according to the size and location of rooms.

The new road between Rye and Newcastle will cost this city $1000. The bridge will cost $5000. There have already been two bridges across at this same point, and the old abutments yet remain. One of these bridges was not well built, and on account of a quarrel between the stockholders and directors, was allowed to go to ruin. The other, it is said, was destroyed by order of Gen. Sullivan about 1775, on account of the fears of the Committee of Safety that the British would pass over it to Great Island, and capture the powder there stored.

Kate Reignolds, one of Portsmouth's favorites, is to appear here in drama next Tuesday evening, supported by the well known Boston Comedy Company, an announcement which merits the filling of the Temple. The patrons of the lyceum last winter will not easily forget the charming literary feast given them by this lady, and now that they are to be afforded an opportunity to see her in stage performance, in which she excels, we doubt not that the audience will be carried by storm. "Leap Year" and the farce, "Perfection" are to be produced. There will be a demand for tickets.

Wagner, the Isles of Shoals murderer, is to be brought for sentence before the Alfred term of court, which assembles on the 28th. Wagner is reported to be pious. The graves of his two victims at Harmony Grove have a mournful interest to visitors. Floral tributes are frequently placed thereon by friendly hands.

The New Ocean Cable.

The steamer will sail in a few days from England for the coast of New Hampshire. The cable on the British side will be submerged fifteen miles south of Valentia. The following letter of Mayor Miller explains itself:

CITY OF PORTSMOUTH,
Mayor's Office, April 16, 1874.

To Col. Arthur M. Eastman, Attorney American Atlantic Cable Company, London, Eng.

My Dear Sir:—It gives me much pleasure to inform you of the action of our City Board in relation to the completion of your cable—a copy of the official record of which proceedings is herewith enclosed. The Board were heartily unanimous in support of the resolution, as they will be in endeavoring to carry it into effect when the proper time arrives.

Allow me to add also for myself and the city which I have the honor to represent, that our citizens appreciate the magnitude and grandeur of the enterprise, which now seems so near completion, and the especial advantages which must result to us from proximity of location at Rye, in addition to the great benefit to the general public.

Devoutly hoping the most successful and satisfactory termination to the splendid and tremendous undertaking of your company and with the best wishes for your personal health and prosperity, allow me to subscribe myself, my dear sir,

Yours ever for this cause,
FRANK W. MILLER, Mayor.

Spicy.

[Haverhill Bulletin.]

From an occasional hit seen, with some show of blood drawn, we should say the sparring was lively between the Concord (N. H.) Monitor and the Portsmouth CHRONICLE. The following from the last named newspaper is in evidence:

"The debased condition into which the Concord Monitor has fallen since its departure from all ideas of decency, is the logical sequence of its proprietors' accepting the services of a Massachusetts mutton-head (for whom Massachusetts could find no use) as the presiding genius of what should have been the leading republican paper of New Hampshire. The owners of the Monitor must have long ago seen that such thick-headed importations have no ideas of their own and must of necessity adopt those of their former masters, being proprietors only of second-hand opinions."

In order to settle this "hash," the CHRONICLE, perhaps, will have to let the Concord "ring" severely alone, and the Monitor should not meddle with the city which controls the navy yard. Also it might as well attend to New Hampshire politics until the republicans again get control of the State; leaving Massachusetts to take care of itself and Gen. Butler to take care of himself.

[Our friend of the Bulletin forgets that we have not as yet attacked the "Concord ring," but have only parried the blows of a mutton-head who had become imbued with an idea that he was of some consequence, and that we should follow in the wake of the Boston papers rather than have opinions of our own. We never commenced a personal controversy with any person or paper, but we are not wont to abandon one when once driven into it until our adversary is perfectly willing we should do so. Insolence from such a low-minded fellow as the Monitor employs only leads us to apply the lash a little more freely.]

Civil Service Success.

[Washington cor. Dover Enquirer.]

The stir over the change of Collector of Internal Revenue in the First N. H. District seems now to be over. Quite an effort was made to effect the change, but as there were no complaints made from any quarter of the present Collector's administration, Civil Service came to his aid and operated precisely as it did in the case of the Dover Post Office, and much as it did in the case of the Portsmouth Pension Agency. All three retain their places, as spared monuments to Civil Service, in consequence of their good conduct in office; and they will probably serve the public all the better hereafter for knowing that in serving the public well they served themselves better.

—The new charter of San Francisco provides that women shall be paid the same salaries as men in the public schools of that city. This is but simple justice, and as it should be, when women can do certain work in every way equal to men.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND
FOR SALE.
TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's Island, &c.
The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1820—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.
Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

HENDERSON & CO.,
ANNOUNCE THEIR
SPRING OPENING
— OF —
Bonnets, Hats,
Flowers and
Ribbons.
The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.
The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a
NEW BONNET.
It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:
First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.
Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.
Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.
Hats, not trimmed,
From One Cent to One Dollar.
Hats, trimmed,
From 50 cts. to $10.00.
And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.
SASH RIBBONS, - - - - - - 25 cents per yard.
SILK TIES - - - - - - - - - 20 cents each.
FRAMES - - - - - - - - - - 15 cents each.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—The Chicago Tribune says that first-class carpenters in that city, who were employed a year ago at three dollars per day are now glad to get $1.50 per day, and that this decline in the cost of labor runs through the whole scale of employments.

—A coroner's jury in a Nebraska town was unanimous in its decision that "the roadway monopolized by the iron horse is not safe or sensible when improvised as a bed by gentlemen to whom benzine is familiar as a daily necessity, rather than as an occasional luxury."

—A potato culturist says he was educated to plant three or four good-sized tubers in a hill, but, much against his judgment, he was finally induced to cut the seed, and for seven years past has been cutting closer and closer each season, until now he cuts as near as possible to single eyes, and plants in rows three feet apart and ten or twelve inches in the row. His success has been greater since he adopted this plan. Each spring he sells from half an acre of land 100 bushels of surplus, having used liberally in his family during the winter, and reserved enough for seed. He prefers Early Rose, and his soil and his tillage are excellent. Another experimenter records, in the American Rural Home, that he placed large and small potatoes in juxtaposition in the same way, and in adjoining rows, and found that, when planting was followed by moist and favorable weather, there was but little difference in results; but, when a drought followed, the large potatoes took the lead and held it through the season, yielding much larger crops.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

CURING

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood,

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous disease. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
Our agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
Absence of necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. Mark Twain on Prayer vs. Whiskey.

The London Evening Standard publishes a letter from Mark Twain on the temperance crusade in this country. The following extracts include the best portions of it:

If I seem to doubt that prayer is the agent that conquers these rumsellers, I do it honestly, and not in a flippant spirit. If the crusaders were to stay at home and pray for the rumseller and for his adoption of a better way of life, or if they even assembled together in a church, and offered up such a prayer with a united voice, and it accomplished a victory, I would then feel that it was the praying that moved Heaven to do the miracle; for I believe that if prayer is the agent that brings about the desired result, it cannot be necessary to pray the prayer in any particular place in order to get the ear, or move the grace of the Deity. When the crusaders go and invest a whisky shop and fall to praying, one suspects they are praying rather less to the Deity than at the rum men. So I cannot help feeling—after carefully reading the details of the rum sieges—that as much as nine-tenths of the credit of each of the 3,000 victories achieved thus far belongs of right to the crusaders themselves, and it grieves me to see them give it away with spendthrift generosity.

I will not afflict you with statistics, but I desire to say just a word or two about the character of this crusade. The crusaders are young girls and women—not the interior sorts, but the very best in the village communities. The telegraph keeps the newspapers supplied with the progress of the war, and thus the praying infection spreads from town to town, day after day, week after week. When it attacks a community it seems to seize upon almost everybody in it at once. There is a meeting in a church, speeches are made, resolutions are passed, a purse for expenses is made up, a "praying band" is appointed; and, if it be a large town, half a dozen praying bands, each numbering as many as a hundred women, are appointed; and the working district of each band marked out. Then comes a grand assault in force all along the line. Every stronghold of rum is invested; first one and then another champion ranges up before the proprietor, and offers up a special petition for him; he has to stand meekly there behind his bar, under the eyes of a great concourse of ladies who are better than he is, and are aware of it, and hear all the secret iniquities of his business divulged to the angels above, accompanied by the sharp sting of wishes for his regeneration, which imply an amount of need for it which is in the last degree uncomfortable to him. If he holds out bravely, the crusaders hold out more bravely still—or at least more persistently; though I doubt if the grandeur of the performance would not be considerably heightened if one solitary crusader were to try praying at a hundred rumsellers in a body for a while, and see how it felt to have everbody against her instead of for her.

Would you consider the conduct of these crusaders justifiable? I do—thoroughly justifiable. They find themselves voiceless in the making of laws and the election of officers to execute them. Born with brains, born in the country, educated, having large interests at stake, they find their tongues tied and their hands fettered, while every ignorant, whisky-drinking, foreign-born savage in the land may hold office, help to make the laws, degrade the dignity of the former and break the latter at his own sweet will. They see their fathers, husbands and brothers sit inanely at home and allow the scum of the country to assemble at the "primaries," name the candidates for office from their own vile ranks, and, unrebuked, elect them. They live in the midst of a country where there is no end to the laws and no beginning to the execution of them. And when the laws intended to protect their sons from destruction by intemperance lie torpid and without sign of life year after year, they recognize that here is a matter which interests them personally, a matter which comes straight home to them. And since they are allowed to lift no legal voice against the outrageous state of things they suffer under in this regard, I think it is no wonder that their patience has broken down at last and they have tried to persuade themselves that they are justifiable in breaking the law of trespass when the laws that should make the trespass needless are allowed by the voters to lie dead and inoperative.

The present crusade will, doubtless, do but little work against intemperance that will be really permanent, but it will do what is as much, or even more, to the purpose, I think. I think it will suggest to more than one man that if women could vote they would vote on the side of morality, even if they did vote and speak rather frantically and furiously; and it will also suggest that when the women once made up their minds that it was not good to leave the all-powerful "primaries" in the hands of loafers, thieves, and pernicious little politicians, they would not sit indolently at home as their husbands and brothers do now, but would hoist their praying banners, take the field in force, pray the assembled political scum back to the holes and slums where they belong, and set up some candidates fit for decent human beings to vote for. I dearly want the women to be raised to the political attitude of the negro, the imported savage, and the pardoned thief, and allowed to vote. It is our last chance, I think. The women will be voting before long, and then if a B. F. Butler can still continue to lord it in Congress; if the highest offices in the land can still continue to be occupied by perjurers and robbers; if another Congress, like the Forty-second, consisting of 15 honest men and 296 of the other kind can once more be created, it will at last be time, I fear, to give over trying to save the country by human means, and appeal to Providence. Both the great parties have failed. I wish we might have a woman's party now, and see how that would work. I feel persuaded that, in extending the suffrage to women, this country could lose absolutely nothing and might gain a great deal. For thirty centuries history has been iterating and reiterating that in a moral fight woman is simply dauntless, and we all know, even with our eyes shut upon Congress and our voters, that, from the day that Adam ate of the apple and told on Eve down to the present day, man, in a moral fight, has pretty uniformily shown himself to be an arrant coward.

Women Workers in Washington.

[Cor. Cincinnati Times.]

An ugly spring rain slants coldly down the face of a battering wind. Doors creak their protest to the raw blast. Windows jar giddily. To be outside, is to sidle to the friendly side of the stove and fireplace. And to-day is a repetition of yesterday; yesterday was a repetition of the past three weeks. It has been a bleak, drizzling April; a marriage of the searching Scotch mist and Boston east wind Such are the days when tender women-kind are both contented and rueful—happy that the sheltered comforts of home are theirs; compassionate that husband, father, and brother must face the surly storm.

But what of the hundreds of women whom I meet each morning upon the puddled streets, struggling against the rain and wind? Bedraggled skirts are flaccid around figures as shapely as any of those which are still lingering cozily at the late breakfast of pleasant homes. Comely faces look out from the wet folds of "waterproof" hoods. As rich tresses are tossed in the damp air as crown the heads of any of the wives, daughters, or sisters in the adjacent houses. I meet hundreds of these woman daily; I know that thousands of them are on the walks, and in the reeking street cars. Sunshine and storm, summer and winter are alike to them.

Moving listlessly to their work in the morning, sauntering wearily back in the afternoon, their days are a life of toil, unbroken by aught save an aimless, sleepy Sunday. Look into the records of the first score of them you meet. You shall find that a majority of them belong to that saddest of all women folk, those who have known better days. The man born blind lives and dies happier than he whose sight has been cut off after he has learned its priceless value. What must be the misery of the woman, bred in ease and comfort, who is thrown suddenly upon her own resources for a livelihood? With no other expedients than natural tact, and the fruits of her early culture, and racked by the loss of the dear ones on whom she had so long leaned, is it not a credit that she routs despair, and grapples with the problem of self-maintenance so courageously?

She has her sisters in bereavement and courage elsewhere. Every large city knows them well. But it is only in Washington that they have become a great, distinct class. Here they are neither the sodden factory-girls of Lowell, nor the sprightly animals of the Paris glove and flower shops. With these, and with the workwomen of England, Germany and Austria, they are daily answering, in the affirmative, the worn-out question as to the feminine ability for self-sustenance. Beyond this they have nothing in common with them.

The department labor of Washington calls for general ability as an accountant or copyist, or for some special faculty, such as that required for manipulation of bank notes in the treasury establishment. Proofs of good character are also requisite.

The appointments are usually the result of political influence, but it is pleasant to see that in the cases of the lady clerks the influence has been broadcast and national. A great number of them are of the stanchest Southern families, and so long as their work is well done, their opinions are ignored. Nearly all of them have known the joys of comfortable homes, and their speech and bearing is a proof of educational advantages in earlier days. And here lies the marvel. Tortured by the memories of a happy past, realizing their fitness to adorn high social stations, and with an utter blank for a future, how can they toil on, year by year, brave, virtuous, and wearing jauntily the mask of content?

I am acquainted with a lady who writes Spencerian pages in the Patent Office for $900 a year. Her father was a naval officer of long and meritorious service, and died a Rear-Admiral. Her husband put $70,000 on the wrong side of the stock scale in New York, lost, and sneaked to the hereafter through the back door of suicide. Patient and lovable, she works as steadily as if some mighty reward was near at hand. I suppose it is hope on, hope ever, with her, though nobody can see anything she has to expect, more than a life of routine and a humble grave. In Paris, she would have flown first to sin, and then the charcoal brazier. In London, it would have been the Argyle Rooms, gin, and the waters of Blackfriars Bridge.

As you pass the tables of the ladies in the Treasury building you are moving among better materials for romances than exist in the teeming brains of Hugo or Turgenieff. "You see that second woman to your left," whispered Spinner. "Her father was once at the head of two railroads. The '57 panic laid him out. She married a Baden baron, and he left her in a year or two for some Dutch flame. She has a noble little boy; five years old now. She says she is going to fit him for Harvard by-and-by, and then make a Senator of him. Watch her count that money. You cannot move your fingers up and down in the air as fast as she brushes off the single notes. Never did a day's work of any kind in her life till she came here."

All honor to the lady clerks at Washington for adding the strongest proof yet given of woman's power to lose friends and fortune and still retain virtue and independence. The black sheep are few in this admirable flock, and while tolerated, are understood and rated according to their respective shadings. God bless the multitude of faithful workers who are showing each day how possible it is for them to earn their own living, and yet remain cultured, respected ladies.

Daily Chronicle.

MONDAY, MAY 11, 1874.

Hostilities Commenced.

The Arkansas row has gone on about long enough, and it is time the U. S. troops interfered. On the night of the 7th, a party of twenty-five Baxter men took passage on the steamer Hallie, which was in charge of Captain Sam Houston and his brother Edward Houston. Their object was to intercept and capture 160 stand of arms belonging to the Industrial University, which were shipped on a flat boat from Fort Smith, in charge of six men. The Brooksites heard of this expedition and started Colonel J. Brooker with his regiment of 200 colored men on a special train over the Fort Smith Railroad to intercept the boat at Polaum. Brooks' party arrived there before the Hallie got into position, and as the boat came along they fired on her. Most of the men were on the hurricane roof at the time and got down as soon as possible. As they did so Frank Timms was killed and seven others wounded, Captain Sam Houston, through the body, badly; Ed. Houston, sprained ankle; John Myers, shot through the breast; Bascomb Leigh, in left leg, badly. Lieutenant Welsh's men returned the fire, killing one and wounding another of Brooks' men, both colored. One of the shots from the Brooks' party passed through a steam pipe on the Hallie, disabling her, and she floated down the river to the opposite bank from where Brooks was, and the squad left the boat. Brooks' men then took possession of the steamer. Soon after their arrival the Hallie landed at the State House, where the wounded were taken off. Captain Sam Houston died soon after the arrival of the Hallie, and John Meyers, a pilot is mortally wounded. After the boat was fired upon and disabled, Captain Welsh held up a white flag, which was riddled with bullets, and several holes shot through his clothing. Dr. Dale, who was with him, received a slight wound in the leg. The Brooks party sent a squad of cavalry up the south side of the river to attempt to capture Lieut. Welsh's party, who escaped from the boat. The Baxter side sent out a squad of cavalry, also, to hunt up Lieut. Welsh's party and conduct them to Little Rock.

A Great Carriager.

This may be a new word to most readers, as it is not found in Webster; but why not as legitimate as saddler or shoer or printer or baker? To be sure, the first or an early use of the word carriage, was luggage or things carried, but this is now obsolete, and carriage is popularly a vehicle of some sort. And the most popular carriages are those that are bought for least money according to quality—though some folks with long purses esteem them in proportion as the cost rises. Be all this as it may—our attention is drawn to an article in the Amesbury Journal, on carriage-making; and as the principal hero in it certainly carries himself and his business well, we have called him a carriager.

In 1850 carriage building had died out, as had nearly all mechanical and manufacturing operations, outside of the woolen mills; but in one of these mills—the Aubin, as it was called from the agent who ran it—was a young man—a mere lad, who was destined to revive it, and give it that fresh start which has made it the leading business of the town. We of course refer to Jacob R. Huntington, Esq., who may be called the father of the Amesbury carriage business, as we now find it, and who is one of the widest known carriage-builders in the United States.

We have inquired of Mr. Huntington, what led him from the factory, where at a very small compensation he was running a very small "spinning jack," to attempt the carriage business. He replied—"In June, 1850, being on bad work, I had a vision. Thirty-seven threads had just broken at one drawing of the jack; and the vision said—young man, go out into the world round about; be faithful, be diligent, be prompt, and after many days I will come again." This is his mode of expression. The vision disappeared, and so did the spinner. He darted across a narrow pathway between the boiler house and the mill, and applied at a carriage shop for a chance as an apprentice to learn the painting of carriages. They replied that no apprentice was wanted, as the business was soon to wind up. He rejoined, "I will come here at one o'clock to-day and work till you do wind up. If you pay me anything for my labor, all right; if not, all right." The spirit and promptness of the lad won, and he was told to come and try it.

In four months, painting, striping and ornamenting, like most lads who would learn a trade, he thought himself competent for a journeyman painter's work, and desirous of a journeyman's pay; and he found employment in Boston, working there a year. He next became a salesman in the firm of Sargent, Harlow & Co., at their Boston carriage repository. After serving with them a twelve-month, he returned to West Amesbury, painting carriages. He took a job that employed him six weeks, and finding no place to board, he travelled from the mills to West Amesbury, every morning and evening. This evidenced the one striking trait in his character, the will to overcome difficulties which amounts to a blindness to difficulties, that would deter others. To him, starting out before the dawn, cheered by the bird notes on the way that greeted the rising sun, distance and labor were nothing to prevent the accomplishment of an object. To know that it was to be done, was more than half to do it; and to begin was to see the end.

With the profits of that job, and the little he had previously saved, Mr. Huntington commenced business,—capital $100—not fearing nor dreaming, but launching his skiff on the same sea that bore the largest ships, and hoping where others would have desponded and stopped. To illustrate his manner, for the encouragement of others—"for whatever man has done, man may do"—we give the beginning. He engaged a room in a tan yard, painting and varnishing carriages, and doing job work, and bought the body, wheels and running part of a Concord wagon. In default of cash, he exchanged work with a blacksmith till it could be ironed; and then he exchanged with a harness maker till it could be trimmed; and next put on the finishing touches of the brush with his own hands. This was his first carriage, and was soon sold.

In six weeks more he had made the round of exchanges again, and was soon enabled to turn out two Concord wagons in three weeks. The second year he made 23 wagons; the third, 76; the fourth, 270 open and topped carriages; the fifth, 380, open buggies, phætons, carryals, top-buggies, sunshades, etc., increasing constantly, till in 1871, he put 1200 carriages in the market, and the present year will show an increase on that.

All who know Mr. Huntington, know the inspiration of success upon his mind. Each year he has striven to outdo himself in the year before. The "vision" of 1859, was the reality ot 1870. The factory boy, whose footsteps patted the old plank bridge, has become the business man known in every State of the Union. The apprentice who would work, pay or no pay, as his employer could afford, has grown into the first carriage manufacturer in the State of Massachusetts; the journeyman, who had the spirit and pluck to walk five miles, morning and night, rather than give up a job, has sent out his carriages to roll the multitude along the great highways of city and country—of the North and South, of the East and West, of his own country and foreign lands.

"Industry, frugality and promptness" was the motto with which he begun, and the banner under which he has acted; and that has carried him, and will carry all who abide by it, from small beginnings to great earnings, and from obscurity to fame. Others who labored with him, or who saw what he was accomplishing, fell into the current which his energy had created, till in twenty years, the carriage business has developed to be the great business of the place, and Amesbury is everywhere known as the first carriage town of America. The business is so permanently established, and so rapidly increasing, that it does and will overshadow every branch of trade. This must be exceedingly gratifying to Mr. Huntington, who, like Virgil's hero, surveying the field, can say—"all of which I have seen, and most of which I myself was." He only wants to live now to see this the point and mart, of every variety of carriage, from the wheelbarrow or the baby wagon, to the palace car; and such we hope it may be.

Mr. Huntington has rapidly accumulated wealth—he has had the reward of industry as he went along. He has a fine residence on Main street—the best dwelling house within a dozen miles, in this or the surrounding towns; and he has the largest carriage factories in the State. They set upon the hill near the railroad depot, where they are seen of all men. The floors of the two buildings contain an area of 50,000 feet, or nearly an acre and a quarter. He runs nine fires; when in full operation employs 85 men; and his pay roll has been as high as $13,000 in a single month, without reference to what he was paying for labor outside of his own shops. These figures are the measure of his success—a success alike honorable to him and useful to the town.

"Come and Hug Me."

[Lincoln (Neb.) State Journal.]

Miss Tennie Claflin is meeting with great success in canvassing for her "Weekly." She has very persuasive eloquence in soliciting subscriptions. She has a very "taking way" with her, that is, taking away money for subscriptions. When she enters a saloon, if she is dry, she calls for a glass of beer like any other man, and drinks to the health of the crusadars. Night before last she held a soiree at the upper parlors of the Commercial House. The invited guests were mainly composed of those who wouldn't subscribe for her periodical when she called upon them during the day. To such as refused her, she said, "Call around and see me this evening," and the smile and look she gave them with the request made them anxious to accept her proposition. They went, each one supposing himself to be the only person honored with such an invitation. When they found that the room was full of these specially favored visitors, they dropped out, one by one, until only two gentlemen remained. Before any of them went, however, they were importuned for subscription, and although that wasn't exactly what they went for, most of them came down with two dollars' worth of stamps. Says Tennie to one of the remaining gentlemen, "Blank, you are a mighty nice fellow. I like you. Come and hug me." Our friend is unmarried and very susceptible, and blushing up to his ears, went to execute the demand. He did it in a very unsatisfactory manner; in fact, showed himself to be a novice in the business. "O, what a hug!" said Tennie. "Can't you do better than that? Try it again." And he did, and by the exertion of more muscular strength did the hugging this time to the fair one's satisfaction.

After that, when anybody sent up a card (and they were many,) Miss Claflin asked Blank, if she should admit him, and Blank and his male companion said "nay," and for an hour they enjoyed the companionship of the Claflin in partnership undisturbed. When they left they deposited their subscriptions for the "Weekly," a year each, and they were immediately ushered out. It ain't every paper or periodical that has such energetic and enterprising soliciting agents.

Tame Bears.

[London Daily News.]

Bears when quite little cubs are very sociable and intelligent, and they easily become amusing pets; but even in cubhood they are subject to sudden and unaccountable fits of anger. I have seen my own bear, even though a little fellow the size of a sheep dog, when in a bad humor, suck his fore paws until they were one mass of frost-like soap-suds. All the while he was sucking his paws he was making a most curious and incessant chattering noise with his lips and teeth. It was then dangerous to go near him. As bear cubs get older and stronger, they gradually assume their natural wildness—I do not say ferocity, because a bear when in a good temper is a very gentle creature; but when parchance he has one of his fits of anger upon him no one should go near him, and he becomes "as savage as a bear." Bears have immense power with their fore-arms. They have no clavicles, i. e. collar-bones, but yet their paws and fore-arm muscles are so arranged that they are most agile and nimble climbers. They are very fond of pine forests. Painters of Norwegian forests often put a bear into their pictures, and as bears will climb for acorns in the forests of Florida, so they will climb for stale buns on the pole in the bear-pit at the zoological gardens. When at home in the wilderness, they select comfortable dens among the rocks, or a nice hollow tree, for their habitations; and thence they go out to look for their dinner. The teeth of the bear will show he is not a purely carnivorous animal, like a tiger or wolf; he will eat insects, digging for them with his tremendous claws; he also likes berries; and he often turns over old logs of trees in the forest for the worms, beetles and other insects he somehow knows are underneath. He is very fond of honey, and he does not mind scratching up the farmer's potatoes, eating them on the spot if he can get a chance. He does not object to carrion—in fact, to all intents and purposes our English badger is a bear. The attentive observer in England, especially Cornwall, will know when there is a badger about, as "Old Rocks" comes out in the night, and turns over all the old cow patches, looking for beetles.

The Foremost Tonic of the Age.

A new path to health was provided for the sick, a new shield against disease was secured to the healthy, when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters became the standard tonic of America. For nearly a quarter of a century this powerful and genial antidote to disease and the causes which produce it, has been on its sanitary march, building up the feeble, helping nature to fight down every variety of ailment, soothing pain, promoting digestion, regulating the secretions, increasing the nervous vigor of the system, cheering the spirits, arresting premature decay, and not only prolonging life, but adding value to it by gaining thousands of invalids in a condition to enjoy it. No volume ever published would be large enough to contain a history of the cases of dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, intermittent fever, nervous debility, and mental and physical prostration cured by this great vegetable invigorant, which not only restores health, but protects it from danger in the most unhealthy districts.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. s29 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Reader, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

The Buffalo.

The London Telegraph makes an eloquent appeal for the preservation of the buffalo. Their extermination, we are assured, "would be a national calamity to the inhabitants of North America," not to speak of the English tourists who have been attracted to our plains. "It is certain," says the Telegraph, "that an act of Congress less than a dozen lines in length would put a stop to the indiscriminate slaughter. Much might be done by General Sheridan and the many other officers of the United States Army who are always ready to extend generous hospitality to English noblemen and gentlemen when engaged in hunting upon the Plains. They might be urgent in their remonstrances with their chiefs, President Grant and General Sherman, with a view to arresting a butchery which is a scandal to humanity."

SUMMER is coming! I want a piece of ICE; where can I get it? Why, just send a boy to Perkins', No. 30 South St., and you are sure of it. The Subscriber, having purchased the entire interest of the Portsmouth Ice Co., would take this opportunity to thank his old customers for their past patronage, and would solicit the continuance of the same as well as that of the public generally. Situated as I am, with a large Ice-House on Mt. Vernon St., I am prepared to deliver ICE out from pure spring water, in any part of the city, on the shortest possible notice. By strict attention to the wants of the public and by selecting honest and accommodating drivers, I mean to merit and hope to receive a large share of the public patronage. Special attention given to delivering ICE to the Sick. Orders from Fishermen promptly attended to.

N. B. Hoping all misdemeanors of drivers will be reported to the subscriber before other steps are taken, I promise that all complaints will receive immediate attention. ORDER SLATE at R. M. Clark's provision store,—or orders may be left with the subscriber at No. 30 South St., or sent through the post office. dawtf GEORGE A. PERKINS.

The U. S. Circuit Court.

In the case of Henry E. Hunter, Robert W. Day and Henry R. Veille, of Hinsdale, indicted Oct. 9, 1873, for sending through the U. S. mails articles prohibited by the second section of the 246th chapter of the U. S. Statutes at Large, Hunter retracted his former plea of not guilty and plead nolo contendre. He was ordered to pay a fine of $570. The case was nolle pros'd as to Day and Veille. Hunter paid his fine and signed a bond in the sum of $3000 that he would sin no more in that direction. Hunter & Co. are publishers of the Star Spangled Banner, published in Hinsdale.

In the case of Noah Woods vs. Jackson Iron Co., Judge Shapley delivered an opinion for defendants.

William Johnson, passing counterfeit money.

George Simonds, breaking locks of a sealed freight car.

Winthrop A. Stevens, retailing liquor without license.

Seth E. Austin, wholesale liquor dealer without license.

James Smith, smuggling.

Henry Clark and Albert Dolbier, of Farmington, smuggling.

John Saunders, of Nashua, taking letters from post office.

Saunders was arraigned and plead not guilty. His case will be tried to-day.

Finally.

The Journal finds cause for complaint in my paragraph in Tuesday's CHRONICLE, wherein reference was made to the publisher of Æsop's Fables. I waive the right to give offence for offence, and distinctly state that nothing was further from my purpose. What I intended to say, (and I think I said it) was, that the publisher of the fables did not, by virtue of the mere act of issuing the book, thereby approve or condemn its contents; his duty ended with the proper mechanical execution of the work. The disposition to compliment, however, destroys the analogy. I entertain too pleasant a remembrance of favors received from the publisher of the Journal, to permit myself to repay them with inuendo; but I am unwilling to allow one personal friend to array himself in support of blatant humbuggery, to the detriment of my profession, without entering my protest. Hence these tears. Any ambiguity, or infelicity of expression in which I may have indulged on Tuesday, must be attributed to the fact of my recent proximity to an "institution" in which were "exclusively taught" all living continental languages, several dead ones, a few, moribund, and one—the English—in articulo mortis. E. A. T.

Tramps.

The following circulars have been issued by the County Commissioners:

Office of County Commissioners, Exeter, N. H., Rockingham ss. Supreme Judicial Court: April Term, 1874.

To the Selectmen or Overseers of the Poor of the Town of ———

GENTLEMEN:—In accordance with the vote of the State Convention of County Commissioners at Concord in June last, and for the benefit and protection of this County from a great and growing evil, we hereby desire to inform you that we shall not pay any more bills for the putting up of Tramps.

They are not entitled to any aid under the Statutes, are nearly all unworthy of any assistance, and certainly should not be encouraged in their wanderings and beggary. The most that should be afforded them, is a place to sleep, without food of any kind, as we are informed Boston has done for a long time; and their arrest as vagrants and committal to the House of Correction, would soon check the evil.

Notwithstanding the caution given in the circular from this Board last year, the bills paid by us to towns in Rockingham County this year, on account of Tramps, amount to almost $3000, while Hillsborough County, and others, have not paid anything. We have therefore decided to discontinue this great expense, and recommend that you order the arrest of all vagrant beggars.

Respectfully,
FRANK D. POLLARD,
Chairman Rockingham Co. Com'rs.

———

Rockingham County Commissioners, Exeter, N. H.

To the County Commissioners of ——— Co.

GENTLEMEN:—As the town of Brentwood in which the Rockingham County Farm is located, persists in demanding a school tax on the Farm, and refuses to allow the pauper children the privileges of the town public schools, we ask that you will immediately inform us whether you pay such a tax on your Farm, and are you allowed school privileges?

Also, do you keep your insane paupers at your County Farm, and, if so, have you found this arrangement a good one?

And is your Almshouse used as a House of Correction?

Do you pay towns for putting up Tramps, and if so, how much? We have been paying 25 cts. per meal, and the same for lodging, but have decided to pay no more.

Also, have you arrangements for employing male or female paupers or convicts in any labor except farming, and if so, what?

An early reply will greatly oblige
Yours very truly,
FRANK D. POLLARD,
Ch'rm Rockingham Co. Com'rs.

NOTICE.

All Commissioners in the State, (and York and Essex Counties) are invited to meet in Convention at the Agricultural Committee Room in the State House at Concord, on the second Wednesday in June next, at 11 o'clock A. M., for consideration and discussion of all matters coming under their charge.

FRANK W. MILLER,
Sec. of Last Year's Convention.

Laconics.

Dr. Hebbard's private lecture to gentlemen this evening should draw an interested audience.

Don't forget that Kate Reignolds and the Boston Comedy Company will appear tomorrow night at the Temple.

At the recent session of the Merrimack Valley Dental Association at Concord, Dr. E. B. Goodall exhibited a new machine for the administration of nitrous-oxide gas.

Hon. Daniel Marcy has commenced the building of a large ship at his yard. Two are to be built there, one for each of his sons who are to command them.

The amount of money to be paid out in this city on account of what is called New Orleans prize money, to the seamen who participated in the taking of that place during the war, is said to be about eight thousand dollars.

Prof. Wiseman, the magician, will give a very enjoyable evening of mystery at the Temple. The press generally speaks well of him. A diamond ring will be awarded to the handsomest lady present by a committee to be chosen by the audience. Much fun is anticipated in the struggle to get the greenbacks deposited at the top of a pole, which the urchins will climb to get.

State News.

Mr. John T. Coffin, a prominent citizen of Gilmanton, is dead.

The farm buildings of Asa F. Page of Gilmanton were burned with contents on the 7th. Loss $2000.

The wife of Rev. Corban Curtis drowned herself in the river at Tilton, on the 7th, while insane.

A new bridge, to cost three thousand dollars, is being built over the Ellis river, in Jackson.

Warner has easily funded its debt by the issue of $21,000, 5-20 bonds, which have all been taken by the citizens of the town at par.

Mrs. Jessie Gilman, a widow of Chichester, 75 years old, successfully manages her large farm of 150 acres.

The steamer May Flower is searching Lake Winnepisaukee for the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart and Mr. Varney, who started to go over the lake from Wolfeborough to Alton Bay a few weeks since in a sleigh on the ice, and have never been heard from.

Of no account, to Barnum or any one else—the "high-toned" quadruman attached to the Concord Monitor, who considers it "ill-bred" to hold opinions not bearing the Beacon Hill trade-mark.

The claim of the Cocheco Manufacturing Company, of land damages and damages to the company's store-house in Dover, by the Portsmouth and Dover Railroad, is to go before the New Hampshire Railroad Commissioners. The claim amounts to about $15,000.

An attractive paper is the Democratic Press just started at Dover by Mr. H. H. Metcalf, who announces on the threshold of his adventure that he wages no war with Foster's Democart, which he goes to Dover to supplant in the affections of the irate democracy of Strafford county. The make-up of the paper is decidedly neat and its editorials have the ring of a person evidently accustomed to express his convictions without fear or favor. The Press opens with a long list of subscribers. Joshua salutes it: "The buckram warrior comes out as brave as Bob Acres, flings a mud-ball, runs up the white flag, and then dodges to a safe retreat."

Ayer's Hair Vigor.

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrows, with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and, keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

A Wife Market.

Dr. McMurdy recently gave an account of the disposition generally made of foundlings in Rio Janiero. He stated that there the girls were retained in the homes until they became of a suitable age to marry. When a number of them were regarded as fit subjects for the matrimonial market their names were published in the city papers, and opposite each one the sum that the home proposed to give her for a dowry. This sum varies according to the ability of the institution and the looks of the young woman, and is derived from bequests to the Foundlings' Home. If the girl is beautiful, she gets a nominal sum only; if ugly she is handsomely provided for. Young men who desire wives make application to the superintendent and give the proper references. After examination regarding their character, a day is appointed for a sort of review, and young men are admitted to the home, in the waiting room of which are arranged the girls in a circle. They make selections, and if the young girls are satisfied the marriage takes place. Dr. McMurdy declares that as a rule, they make the best wives to be obtained.

—Highlanders have the habit, when talking their English, such as it is, of interjecting the personal pronoun "he" where not required, such as "The king he has come," instead of "The king has come." Often, in consequence, a sentence or an expression is rendered sufficiently ludicrous. Thus a clergyman opened his discourse, "My friends, you will find the subject of the discourse, this afternoon, in the first epistle general of the Apostle Peter, chapter 5th and verse 8th, in the words, "The devil he goes about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour." Now my friends, with your leave, we will divide the subject of our text, to-day, into four heads. Firstly; We shall endeavor to ascertain 'who the devil he was.' Secondly; We shall inquire into his geographical position— namely, 'where the devil he was;' and 'where the devil he was going?' Thirdly; And this is of a personal character—'who the devil he was seeking?' And fourthly and lastly; We shall endeavor to solve a question which has never been solved yet—'what the devil he was roaring about?'"

—While manipulating the windlass of a well, a party who had been laying in a stock of whiskey before it should be seized by the police let the handle slip when the bucket was half way up, and naturally enough received a chuck under the chin that knocked him over a neighboring fence. "Sold again," he muttered, as he climbed to his feet, "might anode—hic—better than to—hic—go foolin' roun' so much water. Betcher boots I'll stick t'whiskey after this."

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his companions in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in the early days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

HENDERSON & CO.,

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

— OF —

Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

SASH RIBBONS, - - - - - - - - 25 cents per yard.

Is This Pugborough?

[English Paper.]

"What station is this, Wilson?" cried an old gentleman, looking out of the window.

His servant, a demure-looking man, in black, who had just got out of a second-class carriage, touched his hat, and replied: "I don't know, sir; I'll ask the guard. Yes, sir, Sloughton Station, sir."

"There ought to be a board with the name on it," cried the old gentleman testily. "Guard, why isn't there a board to this station?"

"So there is, sir, at the other end of the platform."

"Then why don't the train stop where people can read? How am I to know when we get to Pugborough, Wilson?"

"We shan't be at Pugborough for this hour, sir," cried the guard. "Come, jump in, sir," to Wilson, who resumed his seat. The whistle sounded, the train went on.

At the very next station they came to, the old gentleman put his head out of the window again. "Hi, Wilson!"

Wilson jumped out of his carriage and came to his master, and touched his hat once more.

"Is this Pugborough, Wilson?"

"No, sir! This is Much Munkton."

"Now, take your seat," cried the guard; for only one passenger had alighted, and none had entered the train.

At the next station the same scene was repeated.

"Come, sir," cried the guard, who was tired of hearing the old man's voice, "don't trouble yourself any more. I'll be sure and let you know when you come to Pugborough."

"Will you?" cried the old gentleman, apparently much gratified. "Upon my word you're very kind. I didn't like to ask you, for I know how much you have to do."

"It is only my dooty, sir," says the guard, slamming the door.

"Hi, guard!" cries the old gentleman.

"Yes, sir," replies the guard impatiently, returning to the carriage door.

"You're quite sure, now! you're quite sure, eh! you won't forget me at Pugborough?"

"O no, sir," said the guard, "that'll be all right."

"And Wilson—where's Wilson?—Oh, here, Wilson, you won't forget my box, Wilson, when we get to Pugborough?"

"No, sir," says Wilson, scrambling into his seat once more.

"Troublesome old chap that," said the guard, as he swung himself into his van. "I mustn't forget him at Pugborough. There's no other passenger for there."

Now, Pugborough was one of those mysterious places that are marked with a cross or dagger in Bradshaw, and if you succeed in unearthing a correspondent dagger in some obscure corner of the page, you will find "Stops at Pugborough to take up and set down first-class London passengers only.

Whether it was that the guard, in his excess of anxiety to remember, had blunted his faculties, or that some spiteful Puck had given his wits a bewildering shake, I know not; but somehow it happened that the guard forgot to warn the engine driver; and when the man looked up from his parcels he found, to his dismay, that the train was flashing along some half mile past the little Pugborough station.

To signal the driver and put on the brake was the work of an instant. The train was brought to a stand-still, and then slowly backed to the station, amid the fierce denunciations of the through passengers.

The guard himself was much out of temper—angry with himself for his forgetfulness, angry with the old gentlemen for having given him so much trouble.

"Now then," he shouted to the manservant. "Sharp! Look after your master's traps. Here you are sir," he cried, opening the first-class carriage. "Here's Pugborough. Now, sir, if you please!"

The old gentleman was asleep, and couldn't be roused to a sense of the situation for sometime. He growled and grumbled; at last, fully roused, he stared at the guard with lack-luster eyes.

"Pugborough, is it Pugborough? Thank you, guard, I remember. Where's Wilson? Wilson! Wilson! where's my box?"

"Never mind your box, sir—I'll see to the luggage! Jump out quick, please."

"Jump out," cried the old gentleman; "jump out! Why should I jump out? Who said anything about getting out?"

"What!" cried the guard, aggrieved to the very verge of desperation. "Haven't you been bothering about Pugborough ever since we left Euston?"

"At your own request, guard," said the old gentleman calmly, "I intrusted you with the duty of warning me of my arrival at Pugborough. I should have preferred to leave the task to my own servant. Ah! here's the box. Thank you Wilson," said the old gentleman, taking from his servant's hands a small, pink box.

"The fact is," said the old gentleman, calmly opening the box, and looking benignly at the excited guard, "that my daughter gave me the most particular injunctions. 'Mind, papa,' she said, 'be sure you take a pill at Pugborough.'"

The old gentleman could never understand why the carriage door was dashed to with such terrific violence, the whistle sounded with such a fiendish yell, and Wilson whirled into his carriage without being permitted to take charge once more of his master's pill box.

Daily Chronicle.

TUESDAY, MAY 12, 1874.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 9.

Since the veto, financial matters have been quiet. The Senate has prepared a measure as an amendment to the House currency bill, but the indications are that it will meet with but little favor. It is more than doubtful if any financial measure passes this season. When the Senate bill comes to be acted on the inflationists will probably amend it to suit their ideas and will endeavor to put a bond amendment upon it for a lower rate interest bond than that proposed, and make it interchangable. Their policy seems to be to keep quiet, hold themselves in a compact body and not get divided here, and go to the people in a united effort. In this way the financial effort may develop into a political issue, With the old Bourbon democrats bullion was always a favorite idea, and with the specie demanding republicans it is the same, but how are they to be got together? and how is the question to be made a political issue without creating divisions which neither party can afford? The Grangers may come in in the West to force incurable divisions in the old party organizations there, and some other organization may do the same thing in the East. The undercurrents and eddies make sailing difficult to avoid disasters and divisions.

THE CENTENNIAL APPROPRIATION.

The crushing defeat by a majority of forty-six in the House of the Centennial bill, would seem to settle that question, yet I doubt. Cheap talk of economy, against the patriotic impulse of the masses to have the hundredth anniversary of the right of self government by the people and for the people celebrated in a proper manner, won't be popular. While they want economy, and are in no mood for tolerating wastefulness, the toiling masses who pay all the bills don't want their celebration treated niggardly; so I conclude an appropriation will yet be made. New Hampshire divided with Pike for the appropriation and Parker and Small against it.

DISTRICT EXTRAVAGANCE.

The District investigation draws to a close. It is evident, when contractors can afford to pay a hundred thousand dollars for a contract that something is wrong, even if none of the corruption fund reaches the officials who gave them out. It is always considered here a proper thing to cheat and bleed Uncle Sam, so there is nothing much out of the way in the loose estimates and measurements, by which he was made to pay full as much as the work cost. But seeing that besides what is paid by Uncle Sam there is a hundred dollars to be paid for every man, woman and child in the district, for expenditures on something more than half the streets, in two years, and that already repairs are demanded, it will be evident the load is too much for the property to carry with all the other bills, and Congress will have to see them paid in the end. The movement to have the District hereafter governed by a commission is thought to indicate that the evidence developed in the investigations will lead to a recommendation of a change in the manner of its Government.

The most unaccountable thing yet is the blowing open of the District Attorney's safe and robbing it of its paper contents. It is now charged it was done to make damage to the memorialists for the investigation, by in some way connecting the leader of that body with it. It was the most foolish thing, if true, ever concocted outside a lunatic asylum. There is something about the burglary and the action of the Police and District Attorney, and the burglar, unaccountable, which has led to the belief it was a put up job. So general has this become that the House ordered the committee to investigate the matter.

MISSIONARY WORK (?)

The Freedmen Society's Bank, by the Report of the Bank Commissioner, is able to pay but 93 cents on a dollar. It was probably never in a much better condition than now. It was started as a sort of missionary work to teach the freedmen habits of saving and putting their money where it earns interest. There is a main bank at Washington with some forty branches scattered over the South. The expense of starting made these branches at first unprofitable, and there are still many of them which do not pay. In addition to this, while the Cooke ring were the managers, they were loaded with a hundred thousand of bad debts, and came near having as much more of Northern Pacifics, but when the Cooke influence left the Bank these were got rid of. The cost and burden of unpaying bonds with bad debts and trying to pay six per cent. to depositors, has kept them under the weather from the start. In addition to this they had three runs made upon them in one year,—the panic of September being the last,—which reduced their available assets $1,100,000. In order to meet these heavy runs, they had to sacrifice premiums; and it is creditable to the present management of the bank that after so severe an ordeal they stand so well as the Bank Examiner reports them.

CUTTING DOWN APPROPRIATIONS.

The reductions in the appropriation bills as passed give anxiety and forebodings of danger to clerks, both male and female. To induce resignations, leave of absence is granted from date with pay to the first of July. Some are taking advantage of the offer, but the great bulk will remain and take their chances, not knowing where to go, nor what to do. There will be no more peace to the Congressman from this time forth. His soul will be harrowed with woful tales and frantic appeals to have him go to the dismissing power to save each applicant from the impending danger. The uplifted axe of economy must cut off many, and woe unto most of those who have nothing but a good record to save them.

GEN. BUTLER'S SICKNESS.

Gen. Butler had a severe bilious attack from which he is getting up. He was a victim to the famous National Hotel sickness, when Buchanan was inaugurated. The General and a party of old line democrats of Massachusetts came out to the Inauguration and stopped at the National, and all of them were taken down sick. Most of them were able to keep up until they reached their homes. The general was one of these, but he had a narrow escape from the grim monster, and ever since has been subject to a return of the same trouble in a modified form. John P. Hale was also a victim of the same sickness, and lay for a long time, with his friends in doubt of his recovery. Many of them now believe his broken health in his last years was caused by that sickness.

THE WEATHER AND CROPS.

We have had three pleasant days in succession, and there is hope of more. Your doleful reports on the weather, are duplicated here, and give poor promise to the farmer. The freezing weather, so out of season, made havoc with most of his fruit crop and the continuous rains keep his grounds unfit to be worked. The acreage under cultivation must be much less, and the bad condition of the ground must give an inferior crop. It behooves the Northern farmer to do his best to provide for any deficiency. EXE.

The result of the conference held at Washington for the purpose of agreeing to a plan of settlement of the Arkansas troubles, was the agreement to submit the matter to the State legislature for decision. Baxter has rejected the proposition, but Brooks accedes to it.

The Howard court of inquiry has closed its sittings, and it is understood that General Howard is completely exonerated from all the charges. It is understood, however, that the court, after a full review of the charges made by the Secretary of war, holds that the subordinates of General Howard were responsible for the irregularities under review.

Smoot smote Gudgell with a cudgel, and Gudgell galloped away from Kentucky to the broad plains of eternal, &c. Mrs. Gudgell thought he was worth about $10,000 to her, but after a careful estimate the Court said Smoot must pay her $85. And that discontented woman wept tears of sore displeasure. "In memory of the loved and lost?" you inquire. Not exactly. She was made to think how much time she had wasted "foolin' around and lawin'," when she might have been getting her work in on the heart of some substitute for the $85 No. 1.

He served five years and received an honorable discharge.

Good Enough for the Present.

[Boston Journal.]

For our part, so long as we have a good party, decidedly better than any other extant, with an Administration sound on the main issues of the day, and a reasonable hope that by united action we can make those issues successful, we prefer to stick by the party, and meet the future when it comes.

"My brethren, a man can not afford to lose his soul. He's got but one, and he can't get another. If a man loses his horse he can get another; if he loses his wife he can get another; if he loses his child he can get another; but if he loses his soul—good-bye, John."

John Meets a California Idiot.

[New York Sun.]

This kind of talk pleased my companion, and he told me he was one of the Huguenots of 1849.

Says I, "I guess you mean Argonauts, don't you?"

Says he, "Yes, and, stranger, what is an Argonaut, anyhow?"

Then I told him how the real genuine Jacob Argonaut was one of the chaps who sailed to Colchis with Jason in the Argo in quest of the golden fleece. He said he thought that was it, and he'd been fleeced ever since he'd been here. When he asked me who Jason was told him we'd conversed enough on that subject.

We then had some talk about miracles, and he remarked, "That those people crossing the Red Sea never struck him as much of a miracle." Then he related the following:

Says he, "I knew a fellow in the States once, old Bill Smith; he was the worst old beat you ever saw. He'd chase a mosquito eight miles with a pair of lemon squeezers if he thought he could get one cent for the oil. He got married on tick, and has slept on tick ever since. He was so mean that once when he had a cent in his pocket, to keep his wife from getting it, he made his oldest boy swallow it, and that boy was a copperhead all through the war. Bill was going down the Mississippi on a steamboat. When the collection was being taken up, he got out on the guard to hide, and he fell overboard. The water was a hundred feet deep, and two miles wide, and the best water to drown a man in I ever saw. Bill couldn't swim a stroke, but, stranger, he got out."

Says I, "How?"

Says he, "He just took and walked straight ashore."

Says I, "How could he walk ashore in water 100 feet deep?"

Says he. "Stranger, do you want to know very bad?"

Says I, "Yes, I do, real bad."

Says he, "Well, stranger, that Bill Smith was such a big sponge he just soaked all the water up, and then walked right ashore."

—Mark Twain is charged with an endless series of heresies, the latest accusation being that he was a rebel soldier and served two weeks with Jeff Thompson in the army in Missouri. That he never made much of a military record is explained in a letter which he is said to have just written to Thompson. He says, "We never won any victories to speak of. We never could get the enemy to stay still when we wanted to fight, and we were generally on the move when the enemy wanted to fight."

—President Grant has made a joke, apropos of the veto and of a possible third term. Ladies were expressing their admiration of the life-size portrait of him in the White House, and Stewart L. Woodford was alongside. "Yes," said President Grant, "Mrs. Grant and myself have often been puzzled as to what disposition should be made of it after retiring from public life. It being so very large, no ordinary room will contain it." To this Mr. Woodford responded by suggesting that there might be another four years' service as President fall to his lot. "Ah," said President Grant, "that would be an inflation of my term of office, and, as I have taken occasion to pronounce against inflation, the suggestion would also for consistency have to be vetoed."

The Foremost Tonic of the Age.

A new path to health was provided for the sick, a new shield against disease was secured to the healthy, when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters became the standard tonic of America. For nearly a quarter of a century this powerful and genial antidote to disease and the causes which produce it, has been on its sanitary march, building up the feeble, helping nature to fight down every variety of ailment, soothing pain, promoting digestion, regulating the secretions, increasing the nervous vigor of the system, cheering the spirits, arresting premature decay, and not only prolonging life, but adding value to it by putting thousands of invalids in a condition to enjoy it. No volume ever published would be large enough to contain a history of the cases of dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, intermittent fever, nervous debility, and mental and physical prostration cured by this great vegetable invigorant, which not only restores health, but protects it from danger in the most unhealthy districts.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. To-Night!

The dramatic event of the season is the appearance of Miss Kate Reignolds, Mr. Thos. H. Burns and the Boston Comedy Company at the Temple, this evening. Buckstone's comedy of "Leap Year" will be presented in fine style, being a comical rendering of the "act to amend the laws of courtship and marriage," a section of which reads:

Albeit it is now become part of the common law, in regard to the social relations of life, that as often as every Bissextile year doth return, the ladies have the sole privilege of making love unto the men, which they doe either by words or lookes as unto them seemeth proper; and no man will be entitled to the benefit of clergy, who doth refuse to accept the offer of a lady, or who doth in anywise treat her proposal with neglect or contumely.

The cast of characters includes Miss Reignolds as "Kate O'Leary," an Irish heiress, Georgina Reignolds as "Mrs. Flowerdew," Mrs. Nourse as "Miss Desperate," Miss Margie Joyce as "Mrs. Crisp," John Davis as "Sir Solomon Solus," James Morey as "Captain Mouser," Mr. Burns as "Mr. Dimple," Colin Stuart as "Walker," and Mr. Vincent as "Joseph." Following this will be presented "Perfection," a favorite farce with Miss Georgina Reignolds as "Kate O'Brien," with songs, and Mr. Burns as "Sam." A most enjoyable entertainment. Secure reserved seats early.

School Changes.

Auren M. Payson, Esq., who has been Principal of the High School for the past twenty years, has resigned the position to accept the Superintendency of Schools at Wakefield, Mass., where he is to receive a larger salary. Mr. Payson leaves the school in a good state of discipline, and has the best wishes of scholars and graduates in his new field of labor. The school committee, after accepting Mr. Payson's resignation, decided to transfer Mr. Stephen W. Clarke from the Boys' School to the position made vacant by Mr. Payson's resignation. Miss Emma J. Magraw is to retain her present position for the rest of the term as Assistant Teacher at the Girls' School, while Miss Kate Hooper, (recently of the Haven School,) is to have general charge of the same school. Miss Lizzie H. Dodge, formerly of the primary division of the Haven School, will succeed Miss Hooper, and in turn be succeeded by Miss Annie Smart, a graduate of the High School, who has been substituting in the Haven School for the requisite three months. Miss Sarah Norton is to teach at the Lafayette School during the Summer term.

By the changes at the High School during the year past, the salary expenses have been reduced about $800 per annum. In selecting Miss Kate Hooper to take charge of the Girls' School, the committee has made a wise and judicious choice, thereby securing a lady of rare moral qualities, whose influence cannot but be salutary and whose abilities are unquestioned.

Laconics.

Major Matthew T. Betton lifts 1200 pounds and is the happiest man in Portsmouth.

H. F. Wendell, auctioneer, sold at auction last Saturday, for the administratrix on the estate of Joseph M. Edmonds, the new dwelling house on Congress street, (built by Mr. Edmonds), including the reversion of the widow's dower and homestead, to Mr. Chas. Edmonds, for $2680; tenement house in the rear of the above, on Bridge street, to Mr. George Taylor, for $980; one-half of the Call House, so-called, on Congress street, to Mrs. Helen Walley, for $2000.

J. B. Burleigh's sale of nice pictures closes to-day, and the award of prizes will be made at Mechanics' Hall, this evening, commencing at eight o'clock. Every purchaser receives a picture worth the price of a ticket, and some will receive paintings valued at $50 or more. Call at 58 Congress street and inspect the paintings—then purchase tickets.

Mr. E. Q. Norton, piano tuner, has left this city for Springfield, Mass, where he enters a more extensive field. May prosperity attend him.

U. S. Circuit Court.

The suit of Noah Woods against the Jackson Iron Co. was a real action brought to recover a tract of land containing eleven hundred acres, situated in Bartlett, in the country of Carroll and State of New Hampshire. The case was heard and tried by the court without intervention of jury, saving all rights of either party. Both parties claim title under grants from the State of New Hampshire. The title was in the State prior to July 2, 1835, and conveyed under act of June 25, 1830, by a law commissioner, and the question as to the validity of the title of the defendants by reason of the non-record of their deed in the office of the secretary of the State was raised. The court held that their construction of the act of 1831 established the title of Eastman and the tenants claiming under him, and render it unnecessary to decide whether the act of June 28, 1867, which authorized the governor to sell and dispose of the public lands belonging to the State would authorize the sale of lands which the State had once conveyed by deed and for which the State had received full consideration, and when the seisin of the tenants for thirty years and more had been under a delivery of seisin by the agent of the State, not a wrongful intrusion on the public lands. Judgment was therefore given for the defendants with costs.

—Now the early bird catches the foolish worm.

What "Brandy" is Made Of.

[Western paper.]

Recently, in Lincoln, the capital city of Nebraska, Prof. Aughey, the chemist of the Nebraska University, has been analyzing some of the popular decoctions which the guzzlers in that occidental propinquity do most delight in, and the result illustrates the powers of endurance which attach to the human stomach in that healthy climate. A favorite brand of whisky, obtained at a high-toned saloon in Lincoln, was found by Prof. Aughey to contain the following delectable components:

Oil of Almonds.
Kerosene.
Potash.
Salts of Lead.
Strychnine.

That every quart of such a mixture may contain two fights, a case of arson and a murder, most men will admit without argument. That Governor Butler, who frequently, when acting as the chief executive of that commonwealth, irrigated his internal convolutions with such whisky, should have been charged with high official crimes and misdemeanors, and impeached and deposed from office, is not at all strange. Could ordinary humanity guzzle such a decoction and remain either sane or honest? Did not bad whisky, intemperately used, imperatively move Governor Butler to official misdeeds? And had the analysis of Lincoln's favorite whisky been made and published when Lincoln saloonism was in its babyhood, might not the infant have died from the effects of the exposure, and Governor Butler remained an honest and unimpeached officer, even unto this date? These are serious moral conundrums, and the honest mind will dwell profoundly upon their probable solution.

A favorite brandy, in the same aspiring capital, has been analyzed by the same chemist, and found to embody:

Sulphuric acid.
Turpentine.
Lime.
Strychnine.
Logwood.
Fusil oil.

This enters largely into the diurnal drinks of the Secretary of State, James, who, after Butler's impeachment, became Acting Governor of Nebraska, and is now under indictment for an embezzlement of the public funds. And who will declare that the possessor of a stomach in which such an admixture of diabolism was constantly swashing to and fro could possibly avoid committing crime? The power of analytical chemistry should be brought to bear at once in favor of temperance.

—The amount of essential oil in onions is so great that if a man should eat one and then die the brain would exhale the odor of the esculent.

—That was a sharp remark of the fellow the other day, who, when asked to renew in a certain insurance office, said: "No, sir; I'd rather have my house in ashes in a barrel, wheeling it to the soapboilers; for then I should be sure of getting something."

—The German Reichstag is hereafter going to do its voting by telegraph. The wires will be arranged that each member can indicate his vote from his seat. In front of the seat are two buttons, one indicating yes, the other no. A pressure on the button telegraphs the vote to a circular table, in front of the president's desk, upon which the names of all the members are written down, so that immediately after pressing the button each member can see a piece of paper appear under his name with his yes or no on it.

"The Statistics and Gazetteer of New Hampshire" is a new work just issued by Alonzo J. Fogg, who has shown great care in compiling desirable statistics and historical events connected with every town and city in the State. As a book of reference, it is without a rival, including the history of New Hampshire's contributions to the loyal cause in the Rebellion, a topography of the towns, summaries of the counties and State, railroads, the Press, banks, post-offices, tables of population, taxable polls, agricultural productions, manufactures, deaths, deceased centenarians, the schools, and literary institutions, public institutions, religion, climate, geology, and many other topics. Every business man, every farmer and every person interested in the history of any town in the State should have a copy of this useful Gazetteer, which is published by D. L. Guernsey, at Concord, and is sold only by subscription. The work consists, with illustrations, of 700 pages.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR

TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Stanley Recognized.

[London Cor. Chicago Journal.

It is an absolute fact that up to the arrival of the ship containing the remains of Dr. Livingstone, there existed a lingering suspicion in the British mind that Stanley had really not done all which said he had done, and there were some who had even doubted that he had ever seen Dr. Livingstone at all. It is easy to understand that Mr. Stanley was doubted solely on account of his connection with a newspaper whose reputation was and is anything but savory in this country; but, be as it may, it is certain that these doubts did exist, even if they were not openly expressed. They all vanished, however, on the instant when Mr. Stanley was first recognized on board the ship at Southampton by Jacob Wainwright, and their subsequent conversation swept away the last vestige of suspicion that existed.

At first it must have been a moment of intense interest and anxiety for even Mr. Stanley himself, for, among the crowd of well dressed persons who surrounded him, Jacob certainly did not recognize his old friend, whom for the first time he saw in civilized dress and with a chimney-pot hat on; but, when Mr. Stanley removed his hat and spoke to Jacob, the recognition was instantaneous, and his manifestations of delight were unmistakable. I am glad to be able to add that every possible honor has been paid Mr. Stanley in connection with the present obsequies, and he has been selected as one of the pall-bearers. Although it is not necessary to change one's estimate of Mr. Stanley as a literary man, it is impossible to deny that he did a grand thing when he found Livingstone, and he ought to have the credit due to him in the most unstinted manner. He is at this moment a greater lion in English society than he was when he first returned from Africa.

Story of a Ground Hog.

[Hamilton (Ont.) Spectator.]

Last summer William Getz captured a young ground-hog, and as it grew it became a regular pet in the house, and would lie down with either cat or dog. Between six and seven months ago the family noticed the little animal picking up pieces of rags and carrying them away, when all of a sudden the little pet disappeared entirely, and was given up for lost, the supposition being that he was killed by a dog. It was not so, however. The little hog, anticipating a severe winter, dug a hole under the house and lined it with the rags he carried in, in the fall, and, covering himself in, remained the whole winter until St. Patrick's Day, when he reappeared from his hiding-place and came in to the house as usual. Mr. Getz now calls him Patrick, in honor of the day he made his reappearance.

—The summer resorts are already beginning to make known their rival claims, and some of them offer sensations indeed. At Rye they promise the arrival and proper reception of no less a submarine monster than the new Atlantic cable. At the White Mountains, that ride by rail unrivalled this side of the Pacific, up and down the Conway intervale, will extend with the spring opening to old Crawford's, Dr. Bemis' and the Willey House.

—They tell a queer story about the doctors in a certain Texas town, who were all away last summer to attend a medical convention. They were absent about two months, and on their return found all their patients had recovered, the drug stores had closed, the nurses had opened dancing schools, the cemetery was cut up into buildings lots, the undertakers had gone to making fiddles, and the hearse had been painted and sold as a circus wagon.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1615 to '20, the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1820—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the authors Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

HENDERSON & CO.,

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

—OF—

Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item eaves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

Gossip about Great Men.

An interesting chapter might be written about the weaknesses of great men. The anecdotes of Archimedes will be remembered; he rushed through the streets of Syracuse, al fresco, crying "Eureka!" and at the taking of the city he was killed by a soldier while tracing geometrical lines on the sand.

Socrates, when filled with some idea, would stand for hours, fixed like a statue. It is recorded of him that he stood among the soldiers in the camp of Potidea, in rooted abstraction, listening to his "prophetic" or "supernatural" voice.

Democritus shut himself up for days together in a little apartment in his garden. Dante was subject to fits of abstraction, in which he often quite forgot himself. One day he found an interesting book, which he had long sought for, in a druggist's shop at Sienna, and sat reading there till night came on.

Bude, whom Erasmus called the wonder of France, was a thoroughly absent man. One day his domestic broke into his study with the intelligence that his house was on fire. "Go inform my wife," said he; "you know I do not interfere in household affairs."

Scaliger only slept for a few hours, and passed whole days without thinking of food.

Sully, when his mind was occupied with plans of reform, displayed extraordinary fits of forgetfulness. One day in winter, when on his way to church, he observed, "How cold it is to-day!" "Not more cold than usual," said one of his attendants. "Then I must have the ague," said Sully. "Is it not more probable that you are too scantily dressed?" was asked. On lifting his tunic the secret was discovered; he had forgotten all his underclothes but his breeches.

Mrs. Bray tells a somewhat familiar story of the painter Stothard. When invited on one occasion to dine with the poet Rogers, on reaching the house in St. James' Palace he complained of cold, and chancing to put his hand on his neck, he had forgotten to put on his cravat, when he hastily returned home to complete his attire.

Buffon was very fond of dress. He assumed the air of a grand seigneur, sported jewels and finery, wore rich lace and velvets and was curled and scented to excess, wearing his hair enpapillote while at his studies. Pope, too, was a little dandy in a bag wig and sword, and his crooked figure enveloped in fashionable garments gave him the appearance of an overdressed monkey. Voltaire, also, was fond of magnificent attire, and usually dressed in an absurd manner. Diderot once travelled from St. Petersburg to Paris in his morning-gown and night-cap, and in this guise promenaded the streets and public places of the towns on his route. He was often taken for a madman. While composing his works he used to walk about with rapid strides, and sometimes throwing his wig in the air when he had struck out a happy idea. One day a friend found him in tears. "Good heavens!" he exclaimed, "what is the matter?" "I am weeping," said Diderot, "at a story I have just composed!"

Young, the poet, composed his "Night Thoughts" with a skull before him, in which he would sometimes place a lighted candle; and he occasionally sought his sepulchral inspiration by wandering among the tombs at midnight. Mrs. Radcliffe courted the horrors with which she filled her gloomy romances by supping on half-raw beefsteaks, plentifully garnished with onions. Dryden used to take physic before setting himself to compose a new piece. Kant, the German philosopher, while lecturing had the habit of fixing his attention upon one of his auditors who wore a garment without a button in a particular place. One day the student had the button sewed on. Kant, on commencing the lecture, fixed his eye on the usual place. The button was there! Fancy the consternation of the philosopher, whose ideas had become associated with the buttonless garment. His lecture that day was detestable; he was quite unhinged by the circumstance.

Too many authors have been fond of the bottle. Rabelais said, "Eating and drinking are my true sources of inspiration. See this bottle! It is my true and only Helicon—my cabalistic fountain, my sole enthusiasm. Drinking, I deliberate; deliberating, I drink." Ennius, Æschulis, and Cato, all got their inspiration while drinking. Mezerai always had a large bottle of wine beside him among his books; he drank of it at each page he wrote. He turned the night into day, and never composed except by lamp-light, even in the daytime. All his windows were darkened, and it was no unusual thing for him to show a friend to the door with a lamp, though outside it was broad daylight. On the contrary, Varillas, the historian, never wrote except at full midday. His idebs, he imagined, grew and declined with the sun's light.

—A ragged, forlorn-looking urchin entered a store in New Orleans, and addressing the merchant piteously asked "a nickle to get my mother a loaf of bread, please, sir." A jovial neighbor, also a merchant, with a sly twinkle in his eye, thinking to have a joke with the boy, produced a nickel and said: "My son, this nickel I worked for; now, what will you do for it?" Quick as thought the boy "went down into his clothes," and producing a nickel exclaimed, "I'll match you, sir!"

Democratic Secession.

[Eli Perkins in N. Y. Graphic.]

"Well, McLean, are you going to the Manhattan Club to-night?" I asked the Warwick behind the great Western democratic party as he came down from dinner at the Fifth Avenue Hotel recently.

"No sir, I'm not going near these scalawags—these buzzard democrats, who want to live off of the South and West."

"Why, what is the matter of 'em, Wash?" we asked, a good deal surprised.

"Why, they are these three per cent. a month fellows—a set of gentlemen democrats who want to live on the party. I tell you, sir, we're going to read the dam buzzards out of the party, clean our coat-tails of the whole crowd of 'Gentlemen Jack' and build up another great national democratic party in the South or West. Manhattan Club democracy! God God!" and Mr. McLean's face seemed a livid hue. A moment afterwards he strode out of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, overcoat on his arm, to cool off in a ride around the park.

As Mr. McLean, the great working head of the democratic party in the West, opened the carriage door, I asked:

"Who will be at the Manhattan Club to-night?"

"Why, Belmont and Schell and all those Eastern bondholders who have abandoned the democratic party and have been playing into the hands of Grant for six years. They've been making fools of the West and South. Democrats! Why they are gravediggers. They want to bury the whole democratic party, and the republicans are paying them for it. But I tell you, sir, we'll soon have a new democratic party in the South and West that will rise up and swamp the bondholders. If we don't, my name isn't Wash McLean."

"What does Mr. McLean mean?" I asked a distinguished Western democratic politician who listened to the above conversation.

"Mean! why he means that we western democrats have been sold out—that we have been led by the nose for four years by the kid-glove bondholding Manhattan Club democrats like Belmont and Schell of the east. They've played us right into the hands of the republicans, and Grant has eaten us up, body and soul."

"What is this new party which McLean is talking about?" I asked.

"It's this, sir. We in the west are for more currency, more money. We own land, not bonds. Increased currency increases the value of our lands. It does not help bonds, for a ten thousand dollar bond is a ten thousand dollar bond; but a ten thousand dollar farm may be made to sell for fifteen thousand dollars. The fact is, sir, Wash McLean means that we are to have a new democratic party in the west which will go for an increase of currency; and if Belmont and Schell want to contract the currency and sustain Grant, why we're going to kick them out of the party—throw them overboard, and the whole Manhattan Club, too. Four hundred one-horse Manhattan Club fellows dictating contraction to the great democratic party! No, sir, they've got to be thrown overboard;"—and another democratic leader from the west stuck his umbrella in the ground and gloried in being a rebel from the old democratic party.

A moment afterwards, when I told Richard Schell how the western democrats were going to throw Belmont and August Schell overboard because they were against an increase in the currency, and organize a new democratic party, he said:

"Well, they can throw Belmont overboard, but when they say August is in favor of a contraction of the currency or say that he is not in favor of an increase of the currency, why I'll help throw him overboard too."

After listening to all these conversations, I had a desire to see these "kid-gloved Manhattan Club democrats" whom Mr. McLean charges with training with Grant in democratic uniforms. So I forthwith adjourned to the Manhattan Club, the headcentre of the aristocratic democracy of the nation. This is where the great democratic lights meet to drink champagne, eat woodcock, and lay down the rules and regulations to govern the whole democratic party. Here I found four hundred democrats in council—all in full dress, with white ties, and in pure and spotless kids. Here were the leading democrats of the east. Here were the plausible Marble, the vivacious Cox, the reflective Tilden, the deep O'Conor, the natty Belmont, the warm-hearted Roosevelt, and the cold and distant Schell. Here were the smooth-tongued Senator Bayard, the Chesterfieldian Fernando Wood, and the solemnly-in-earnest Amasa J. Parker. Here among the younger democracy were the affable Samuel C. Reed, the winning Zorega, the graceful Colonel Gaul, and the handsome Douglas Taylor.

But where were Pendleton and Wash McLean and Hendricks and Thurman? Where were the other representatives of the democratic party west? If you had seen that happy gathering you would hardly have thought that many of the western guests were going to the train, carpet-bags in hand, rebellious in spirit, and mad in mind. To be sure, there were some western men—there were two, the deposed Governor McEnery, of Louisiana, and the Hon. Thomas Fitch, the silver-tongued republican of Nevada. There were republicans and several good feeders, who came for woodcock and champagne, but none with voice and influence of Pendleton and McLean.

Happy, indeed, were those who ate that lunch. Happy, thrice happy, the men who drank that champagne. They felicitated themselves on the great democratic victories in New Hampshire and Connecticut, but they did not give one thought to the great west. No one hinted that Groesbeck and Pendleton and Hendricks and Blair and McLean were even then dissatisfied, rebellious, and conspiring incipient rebellion to overthrow the little kid-gloved coterie of the Manhattanites. No one hinted that a dark democratic cloud, born out of the mists of inflation, was gathering even then in the south and west that will drift eastward and deluge the bondholders at the next election. No one hinted that a great, new democratic party, made up of democrats and republicans beyond the Alleghanies, was even then being formed that will soon write the death-warrant or absorb the democracy of the east.

Of course beautiful speeches were made. Sunset was in a happy mood, Fitch was melodious, Parker was spread-eagle, and Bradbury was earnest. But when I left the room to walk up Fith avenue, by those sombre brown-stone houses, in the gray of the morning, a young western democrat took my hand and impressively observed,

"My God! Eli—it was galvanizing a corpse!"

There are very curious rumors afloat as to new party combinations. It is said that the gathering at the Manhattan Club—strange as it may seem—was exploited for the purpose of testing the feeling of eastern democrats as to the propriety of putting forward President Grant as their candidate for the third term. It is said that the speeches were carefully prepared to throw odium on the republican party, and "letting up" on President Grant as easily as possible. The endorsement of the specie resumption policy is practically an approval of President Grant's veto. It is believed here that Grant's personal popularity will give him enough States west and south; while his "specie resumption" bearings will commend him to the Middle, Eastern, and Atlantic States. In ordinary times it would seem absurd that such a combination should be made; but after the nomination of Greeley by the democratic party anything and everything is possible.

Novel Editorial Management.

The Meriden (Ct.) Recorder says: "This office maintains four sovereign and independent editors, neither of whom is accountable to the other for what he may write or publish. And it is made a rule that no editor shall know what his associate has written, before the same is published. This will explain how it comes about that frequently two articles on the same subject appear in the same issue, and not unfrequently diametrically opposed to each other."

A Hair-owing Tale.

The much abused Rev. Florence McCarthy, of Chicago, in a recent lecture on "Who Wouldn't be a Minister?" said: One of the first troubles which befell a minister—and it was a matter which they would never suppose he would have any trouble about—was the management of the hair. Happy is the minister whose head is shapely and whose hair naturally falls into elegant and handsome convolutions. He can get as many calls and as much salary as he needs. If the hair is right it matters little whether his principles be good or doctrine sound. "I speak feelingly on this subject," said the lecturer. "My own hair has been the cause, I fear, of much of my misfortune. I never thought of it until recently; but now I remember that the people who ousted me from Union park church are exactly those who used to labor with me about my hair. Absolutely that church has split on my hair. After watching public sentiment in my church on this subject for about one year, I can assure you there were three parties in it on the subject of my hair. The first insisted on its being brushed down close. The second on its being stuck up on end. The third—the conservative party—on having it loosed up. Noticing that these three parties corresponded to the three divisions of a sermon, I soon fell into the habit of delivering the first head of my discourse with my hair as now. (Flattened to the head.) The second division as now. (Putting his front locks on end.) The third division of the sermon I generally delivered with my hair brought down to the conservative position (putting his hands through his hair and smoothing down the more elevated locks), and even now I don't know that my hair has given entire satisfaction."

A Tribute to Stanley.

The British Quarterly Review for April, in the course of an article on David Livingstone, the great African explorer, pays the following compliment to Stanley and the New York Herald:

It would be beside our purpose to offer any judgment on the miscarriage of the Livingstone relief expedition from England. But we will not withhold our tribute of grateful remembrance from the man who anticipated the traveller's own countrymen, and who, despising all timid counsels, plunged headlong into the wilderness, and evading or forcing his way through tribes inflamed by war, reached Ujiji at the very moment when Livingstone was desolate and despairing. Look at it in what light we may, no carping criticism ought to prevent our acknowledgement that the conception and the execution of the New York Herald expedition originated in a generous thought, and culminated in a splendid achievement. Relief came just at the moment when it was most needed, and if fortune had anything to do with this, we are bound to remember that fortune favors the brave.

—The "Red Stockings" are "socking" it to their opponents.

—A short-sighted gentleman in Celina saw a neighbor's black cat sleeping on his woodshed roof. He seized a shot gun, took aim—and blew the North American stuffing out of his wife's best back-hair, placed there to dry in the sun. He listened to some funny conversation for a while!

—A small boy got another boy, somewhat smaller than himself, down on the ground, recently, and got hold of both his ears, placing his knee in the small of the boy's back, and asked him in a very persuasive manner if he would give him that white alley of his'n? The boy replied in the affirmative. How easy it is to settle things when one goes about it the right way.

—Laura Fair is going to demand an humble apology from every person who has said anything against her. The consequent humility of the United States will be stupendous.

Put the System in Fighting Tune.

The great object in cases of indigestion and its accompanying derangements of the liver, bowels and nerves, is to put the stomach in a condition to dissolve, readily and without pain, the food submitted to its action. This is accomplished, and much more than this, by the daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. A dose should be taken before every meal. The good effect will soon be apparent. The loss of flesh, stamina and nerve which usually occurs in dyspepsia will be arrested. The determination of bile to the skin will cease, and that cathartic fluid will pass into the bowels and assist in keeping them free. Every organ connected with or dependent upon the stomach will be toned and renovated. The kidneys, the sifters of the system, will be beneficially influenced, as well as the liver, the alimentary canal, and the pores. In short, the whole organization will be put in the fighting trim necessary to resist and expel disease. If the medicine is taken regularly and persistently, this result will inevitably follow.

Travellers will find an easily prepared and most satisfactory beverage in the Vanilla Chocolate prepared by Walter Baker & Co., Boston. Established in 1780. A single trial of this agreeable drink will prove the truth of our endorsement.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. HIS AGUE CURE is said by those who use it, to never fail. Reader, if you want a new medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

A thing of beauty is a joy forever.—And such is a rich flowing head of hair. Reader, if you have this great gift of nature and it is not fading out, use the Bearine; it is the only safe and reliable dressing you can get. Every Druggist sells it. 2

Loss of Memory may mean a general breaking up of the life forces, or it may indicate the effects of obscure disease—contracted in early life. In either case Dr. Helmbold's Buchu is the sure specific. It restores the functions of manhood, and renovates the entire system, upon both the liver and kidneys, and is justly entitled the Great Diuretic. Get the genuine. All druggists sell it.

"Bewildering and Deceptive."

Editors Chronicle: On Monday we took up your lively paper (which we consider an indispensable adjunct to a nice breakfast,) and read an attractive advertisement of an agreeable entertainment by Prof. Wiseman, who announced that his illusions had been pronounced by the press, "bewildering, deceptive and pleasing," adding, in good plain type, "Admission 25 cts.; doors open at 7; performance to commence at 8." We thought it just the entertainment for the whole family, so after tea, arming ourselves with the opera-glass, we proceeded in force to witness the wonderful tricks, little thinking that the Professor had already practised a trick upon us,—a trick which we are willing to pronounce "bewildering and deceptive" though it was far from "pleasing." We purchased our tickets in good faith at the office, and presented ourselves at the entrance door in fine spirits, only to be dampened by unexpected information communicated in these words: "You can't come into the lower house with those tickets—they only admit to the gallery, fifty cents is demanded for seats in the house." We returned to the office for an explanation, and were told that their advertisement promised a seat for 25 cents and we could get it in the gallery, but no where else. Not fancying the art of jugglery when practised on ourselves, we concluded not to submit to the imposition, but took back our money, and consoled the children by putting down our names at Mr. Preston's store for seats at Miss Kate Reignolds' entertainment, to which we were honestly told sixty cents would admit one, —and returned to our home with unabated confidence in the spotless character of the CHRONICLE, acquitting it of any complicity in the swindle. PRESTO.

[We had heard not a few indignant comments on the artful dodge complained of by "Presto" before the above communication was handed in, and many of them were couched in language vigorous enough to serve the purpose of a packet ship's first mate when a hitch occurs in hoisting topsails. If the "jugglery" in prices was intentional, it was one of those "smart" tricks which we do not believe pay in any point of view; if unintentional, it was very unfortunate for the Professor's popularity in this city, that he did not elect to receive a few dollars less rather than gain the enmity of so many persons as he did by playing off upon them what they regard as a very fair imitation of a petty swindle.—Eds. Chron.]

Cremation, Or Burial--Which?

Rev. Carlos Martyn delivered a discourse at the North church, Sunday morning, on the subject of cremation, closing as follows:

The literature of the whole civilized world reflects the custom of sepulture. The Bible is full of references to burial—references which would become meaningless were cremation adopted. The patriarchs were buried; the prophets were buried; Christ was buried; the Apostles were buried, and in all the ages since, human literature has been populated with such-like references.

Burial is intertwined with some of the holiest associations and sympathies of the human heart. Our cemeteries are "Full of all the tender pathos

Of the Here and the Hereafter."

To them we make constant pilgrimages, as the Mahometans to Mecca, as the Jews to Jerusalem. Around about them hovers the family spirit, striving after fellowship even in death by means of a common burial place. It was this thought which animated the patriarchs and gave birth to their beautiful expression: "Being gathered to one's fathers." It was with this purpose that Abraham purchased the burying place in the field of Machpelah. Here he laid Sarah, and here he was himself entombed. Here Isaac and Rebecca were buried. Here Jacob and Leah were buried; and it was with this idea that, centuries later, the children of Israel carried up with them out of Egypt the bones of Joseph, that they might place them in the soil where Rachael, his mother, slept: and in the land of Canaan, where reposed Abraham and Isaac and Jacob. But the same sacred feeling impels us, to-day, to set apart our family lots, and, if possible, to bury our kindred together For this reason we beautify our cemeteries. We make gardens of them, kept for ever green by streams from the neighboring hills. We shade them, adorn them with pathways, with monuments built in memory of the dead on either hand. We perfume them with the fragrant breath of flowers.

Our burying grounds are our most eloquent preachers. More continuously and better than the human voice do yonder gleaming tomb-stones plead with us. As we give them audience, our mortal term contracts, our immortal career opens. And here where lawless passions travel, here where selfishness pitches its tents, the cemetery seems to say: "Here have ye no continuing city; seek that which is to come, whose maker and builder is God." And thus, as these two cities grow side by side—the city of the living and the city of the dead; the city in which we toil and suffer for a little, and the city into which we vanish; the city whose houses and goods we possess for an interval and then leave behind us, and the city whose white monuments just show us the pinnacles of our estate in the eternal world; in view of these two cities, if we are wise, we learn to moderate our passions, and to rise above our selfishness. If we are wise, we resolve to "lay up for ourselves treasures in heaven, where moth and rust doth not corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal."

—It isn't right, and a Delaware court has decided that it isn't, for a man to tie his wife up to a hitching-post and leave her there all night because he finds her spectacles in the coffee-pot.

—People ought not to be surprised that the Arkansas Brooks makes so much disturbance, considering how the Mississippi has slopped over.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR
TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.
Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.
AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.
As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—The lawyers of Indianapolis are torturing their brains over an extraordinary problem. Some years ago a lady of that city was married, and four months thereafter separated from her husband, was divorced and remarried in a month, and four months thereafter gave birth to a child by her first husband. Quite recently the second husband procured a divorce, and the custody of the child was awarded to him. Now comes the first husband and claims the child. Who is entitled to its possession? Where is King Solomon?

—The scene is laid in Ireland, and the just judge and all who figure in the true story are of course sons of Erin: Two men had a quarrel in a liquor saloon. They adjourned outside to settle the dispute. The first man, being from Connaught, immediately seized a lump of stone and let fly at the head of his opponent, who dipped his head and missed the stone, which went through an expensive plate glass window, and did much damage. One of Mr. O'Shaugnessy's magistrates was called upon next morning to determine which of the two should pay the cost. The evidence clearly showed that the aim was a good one, and if the second man had not dipped his head he would have been struck. "Therefore," said the magistrate, "he must pay the damages, as it is certain the first man didn't intend to injure the window, and the window would not have been injured if it had not been for the act of the second man."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY. DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the system. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1820—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign parts, when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

HENDERSON & CO.,

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

—OF—

Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to empty your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1872 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR
TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.
Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It eliminates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.
As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Nasby on the Temperance Crusade.

CONFEDRIT X ROADS, (which is in the State uv Kentucky,) March 24, 1874.

Joe Bigler, the infamus, and Pollock, which is worse, hav ben at it agin. There is an amount uv devilmont in the buzzam uv them men which biles over perpetooally, and wich kin no more be stopped than kin fermentashen in cider. The Corners will hev to rise in its mite, and kill them two implous wretches in self-defence.

The fact that Mrs. Bascom, G. W.'s wife, hez bin gettin a large assortment of new cloze in Louisville, and that she's the only woman in the Corners who has a second dress, and it would be almost safe to say the fust one, hez bin taken advantage uv by these feends to perdooce an insurrekshun in our otherwise quiet households.

Issaker Gavitt's wife Lucinda and Deekin Pogram's wife and his dawter Mirandy happened to be in Pollock's store a buyin some pork to bile, when, ez ill-luck would have it, Mrs. Bascom passed down the street. She had on a fur sack and a noo bonnet, and had gloves on and a muff, and gold chain, and she held her hed well up and hed a ostridge feather. She was a gorgeous site for the Corners.

"See Bascom, Mirandy," sed Joe Bigler, calling the attenshun uv the wimen to her, ez she went sailing down the street.

They all looked at her and rage illled their chaste buzzums.

"I never had a buzzum-pin," said Mirandy, indignantly.

"Why, I ain't got no shoes—to say nothin uv fur overshoes," shreeked Lucindy Gavitt.

"Why don't Issaker git you shoes?" asked that villainous disturber, Pollock.

"He never hez no money," answered Lucindy.

"Wat did he do with the money I paid him for his corn two weeks ago?" was the innocent question of Pollock.

It wus a spark of fire in a magazine.

"Hez he sold his corn?" she asked, her voice quiverin with emoshen.

"He did sell it to me, two weeks ago," sed Pollock.

"The ornery cuss! Why he promised me a pair uv shoes and the baby some cloze when he sold thet corn."

"But, my dear Mrs. Gavitt," said this hypercritikle sneak, "you know—"

Just then Mrs. Bascom was returnin.

"But you know," he continuyood, "he hed to pay Bascom, becoz—by the way, there goes Mrs. Bascom again, and ain't she a stunner!—becoz G. W. had to go to Louisville to get his wife's winter outfit, and he hed to hev wat Issaker owed him."

"And the munny for the corn, wich I planted and hoed and cut and shucked, hed to go to put close on Liz Bascom, did it? Liz Bascom hez close, hez she?"

And this enraged woman howled with emoshun, as did Mirandy Pogram and her mother. And Pollock kept addin fooel to the flame he had kindled.

"Here," said he to Lucinda, "is a lovely piece uv velvet wich would make you an elegant sack, and Lord bless you, how this French flannel wood make up into a dress and cloak for yoor baby. It does seem to me as though Issaker and the deekin might let yoo wimmen have enuff munny to get yoo some things. It seems a pity that Mrs. Bascom should hev everything."

Ef there is anything which'll make a lion out of a woman, it's the desire for dry goods. Pollock knowd this and he played it onto em. He showed em dry goods till they became raving maniacs.

These three misguided wimmen left the store crossaders—they wuz so many Jone uv Arks. Thro the mud they went to Mrs. McPelter's, to Mrs. Elder Pennibacker's and to the wife of every regular resident uv the Corners, and they determined to make a move onto Bascom and stop his bizinis anyway, so that the munny spent at his barcood be yoosed in gettin close for them and their children. They appointed Toosday last ez the day on wich they wuz to make the raid. They arranged a percession, with banners on wich they wuz to write: "Less rum—more close," and they wuz to visit Bascom and set down in his grocery and compel their husbands not to drink no more, and Bascom not to sell em anythiug anymore.

There was wild forebodins of woe in Bascom's. G. W. hisself, and Issaker Gavitt, and Deeken Pogram and myself, all sot with pale faces dreadin this invasion. I am a man of resource. I advised that a barl be extemporized there, where we cood get our nips, till this cyclone shood pass over. This G. W. consented to do, and thus fortified we set down and awaited the attack.

Wat military conkerer wuz it that wuz saved from annihilashen by the weather gettin so warm and the yeeldin ground so soft that the enemy coodent move their artillery? It wuz a similar posishen that saved us. Toosday mornin broke ez warm and ez pleasant ez May. The sun come out smilin, and it wuz warm enough to go barefoot, and the corners wuz happy. The perceshen wuz to march at 11.

"We are lost," sed Bascom, gloomily.

"Oh, that I shood live to see this day!" sighed Deekin Pogram.

"Let us comfort ourselves like men," sed I. "This is a cyclone. It will only last a few days. Cannot we submit to deprivation for that time?"

Ten o'clock arrived. The wind set in from the north. Issaker rushed out and looked at the sky and came back with hope on his countenance.

"Ef this wind holds, we are saved. Ha! it grows colder. There's flakes uv snow in the air. The perceshen can't move. The perceshen ain't got no shoes."

It did get colder. The wind came raw and in icy blasts. We consulted the only thermometer we hev in the Corners, which is a little nigger boy on a wet plank, barefoot. We determine the degrees uv cold by ascertainin how long he can stand outdoors in that way. It is primitive but akerit.

Half-past 10! It was blowin a gale, and wuz ez cold ez blue blazes. It was impossible for eny woman, without shoes or underclose, to stand it in the open air.

Deekin Pogram came in, his frosty nose glowin with joy, and he fell on Bascom's neck ejackilatin, "Saved! saved!"

"Hooray!" shouted Issaker Gavitt, "without shoes and shawls not a cussed one uv em kin git out uv doors to-day."

Bascom wept teers uv joy as he asked us to take suthin.

"You see," sed Deekin Pogram, "how Providence keers for us. Ef we had wasted our munny on close and sich, the wimmen wood hed us. Munny put in wimmen's close is wus than wasted. Ef they hed close they'd bin here this minit, a tormentin of us."

We was saved this time—will we the next? We await a fair day with dread. Pollock and Bigler will hev them wimmin out whether or not, jest as soon ez it gits warm enuff.

Charles A. Nichols, of the firm of J. & C. A. Nichols, music dealers in Fitchburg, Mass., eloped last week with Mrs. Irene G. Ware, the leading soprano singer of the city. The former is twenty-four years of age and leaves a wife and one child, and the latter is the wife of F. D. Ware, a grocer. The parties have kept a considerable degree of intimacy for several months past, and about four weeks ago Mr. Ware, suspecting something wrong, ordered Nichols to discontinue his visits to Mrs. Ware, but the quarrel was subsequently healed.

Col. Whiteley, Chief of the United States Detective Force, has applied to the Governor and Council for the pardon of Mark Shinbora, the notorious burglar. The ground of the application is said to be that he is an important witness for the United States in a counterfeiting case, and it is alleged that he is in Switzerland and fears to come back.

State News.

The official canvass of the votes for Railroad Commissioner shows there was no choice at the last election. Sulloway, democrat, had 35,428, Conn, republican, 34,185, Herald and others, mischief makers, 2138. Majority against Sulloway 896.

Referring to the desire of the democracy of New Hampshire to oust republican officials next month, the Salem Gazette remarks: It is often a very hard thing for a party to tell exactly what to do with a victory that it isn't used to.

Miss Kelly's Lectures.

Mention has already been made of this lady as giving lectures on temperance. On Sunday, May 3, she was in Deerfield. Some persons in years gone by were very strenuous to have the gospel only in the pulpit, especially on the Sabbath. We agree with that in the main, and say there may be as much gospel in a good temperance lecture as in some sermons. The pastor of the Free Baptist church arranged for Miss Kelly to lecture there in the forenoon, and there was a large congregation and good attention. In the afternoon she lectured in the Congregational church, where also the congregation was large. In the evening a meeting was held in a hall at the parade, and seventy persons signed the pledge. On Monday she lectured at Candia Village; the attendance was good and forty persons signed the pledge. J. F.

Drawing a Prize.

Sambury is, generally speaking, a quiet place. In fact, it may be regarded as somewhat subdued and neutral tinted as a theatre of life and bustle. The people of Sambury nevertheless are much like their brethren elsewhere. They have their entrances and their exits, and in their time play many games of a precarious and worldly nature. Last Saturday night they had a lottery up in Joe Hemmingway's barn, the chiefest prize being a hunting-cased watch of really fine quality. There were also watch chains, keys, and other inexpensive trinkets in the bill, and a much larger congregation, it is to be regretted, was in attendance than would probably have been the case had the demonstration been of a moral or æsthetic character. Mr. Warington Jennison, who held several tickets, was present. He was in high spirits, and drank in the words of the man who was calling off the numbers, as well as something contained in a railroad bottle, with much relish. It is a deplorable fact that humanity is prone to rejoice at the ill success of others, and as chains, keys, and an occasional rolling-pin were distributed, as number after number was called, Mr. Jennison became so hilarious and talked so loudly about his number being 311, that it was not until he was persuaded with a carstake that he would sit down. And then, when the clarion tones of the conductor of the scheme began with "No. 311 draws the elegant gold watch," Mr. Jennison again arose, and said, in his peculiar voice, he "should never desert Ophelia's grave for forty thousand brothers." "No. 311," repeated the man of fate, "draws the elegant gold watch"—and here he paused and surveyed the multitude. Mr. Jennison fairly blazed, and getting up on the chimes of a headless meal barrel, he swung his hat in ecstasy, in spite of all opposition. "The elegant gold watch—key," said the heartless man; whereat Mr. Jennison closed up like a jack-knife, and sitting down suddenly in the meal barrel he buried his ruby nose in his palpitating bosom and tears bedewed his shirt.

A Cold Country.

Greenland is almost continental in its dimensions, containing not less than 750,000 square miles, and is all a black wilderness of ice and snow, save a little strip extending to 74 degrees north latitude, along the western shore. The coasts are deeply indented with bays and fiords, which invariably terminate in glaciers. The whole interior seems to be buried beneath a great depth of snow and ice, which loads up the valleys and wraps over the hills. Nothing can be more desolate than the interior. It is one dead, dreary expanse of white so far as the eye can reach—no living creature frequents this wilderness—neither beast, bird nor insect. The silence, deep as death, is broken only when the warring storm arises to sweep before it the pitiless, blinding snow. This represents the state of the northern part of our continent in the ice age. Some of the Greenland glaciers attain a vast size. Dr. Kane reports the great Humboldt glacier as sixty miles wide at its termination. Its seaward face rises abruptly from the level of the water to a height of three hundred feet.

Since ice is lighter than water, whenever a glacier enters the sea the dense salt water tends to buoy it up. The great tenacity of the frozen mass enables it to resist the pressure for a time. By and by, however, as the ice reaches deeper water, its cohesion is overcome, and large segments are forced from its terminal part, and floated up from the bed of the sea, to sail away as icebergs. The glacier evidently crops under the water to considerable depths, or, so long as the force of cohesion is able to resist the tendency of the salt water to press it upwards.

Although Greenland is said to be inhabited only upon the south and west coast, there is a record of an early settlement upon the side toward Iceland, with which there has been no communication for 400 years. The colony was planted about 1,000 A. D., and flourished, and maintained intercourse with its mother country till the beginning of the fifteenth century. Since that time, owing to the setting in of the Arctic current, and the consequent gradual increase of ice upon the coast, the colony became inaccessible, and the records of it disappear from history. At various intervals between 1579, etc., down to our own time, the intrepid Danes have striven in vain to reopen communication with their lost colony. This emerald coast, with valleys well stocked with reindeer and verdant glades, is now shut in by the pitiless ice-packs, and the fate of its inhabitants ought to excite the interest of the world. It would be very interesting to be informed of the condition of this colony: whether the increasing cold has enlarged the glaciers so as to push the dwellings out to sea, or whether the habitations are still standing, and a population has sprung up who know of the outside world only by tradition.

Sex of Eggs.

Science and experience have sufficiently demonstrated that everything that bears must possess both the male and female qualifications; but perhaps it is not generally known that such is the case with eggs. I have found by experience that it is, and by the following rules I raise as many pullets among my chicks as I wish to, while some of my neighbors complain that their chick are nearly all roosters, and they cannot see why there should be a difference. I will tell you here what I told them, and for the benefit of those who do not know, that the small, round eggs are female eggs, and the long, slender ones are males. This rule holds good among all kinds of poultry, and I dare say all kinds of birds. So if you wish to raise pullets, set the small, round eggs; if you wish to raise roosters, set the long, slender ones; in this way you will be enabled to raise whichever sex you wish to.

—Baltimore market reports have a seductive sound just now. Shad are sixteen cents apiece; green peas, strawberries, asparagus, rhubarb, radishes, etc., are becoming plenty, and the peach crops fight bravely against the rumors of the growers.

—Napoleon III. never had the reputation of a wit, but he said one sharp thing after he had made himself master of the destinies of France. It was at the expense of his princely cousin, Plon Plon, who said to him, one day, "You have nothing of your uncle about you." "Yes," he replied,—"his family."

Business Notices.

Put the System in Fighting Tune.

The great object in cases of indigestion and its accompanying derangements of the liver, bowels and nerves, is to put the stomach in a condition to dissolve, readily and without pain, the food submitted to its action. This is accomplished, and much more than this, by the daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. A dose should be taken before every meal. The good effect will soon be apparent. The loss of flesh, strength and energy which usually occurs in dyspepsia will be arrested. The determination of bile to the skin will cease, and that cathartic fluid will pass into the bowels and assist in keeping them free. Every organ connected with or dependent upon the stomach will be toned and renovated. The kidneys, the sifters of the system, will be beneficially influenced, as well as the liver, the alimentary canal, and the pores. In short, the whole organization will be put in the fighting trim necessary to resist and expel disease. If the cause is taken properly and persistently, this result will inevitably follow.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. 2 29 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this become our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Healer, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

For Moth Patches, Freckles and Tan
Ask your Druggist for Perry's Moth and Freckle Lotion, which is harmless and in every case infallible. Or for his Improved COMEDONE and PIMPLE REMEDY, the great SKIN MEDICINE for Pimples, Black Heads or Flesh Worms. Or consult D. C. PERRY, the noted Skin Doctor, 49 Bond St., New York. 2 19 5w

A thing of beauty is a joy forever.—And such is a rich flowing head of hair. Reader, if you have this great gift of nature and it is not fading out, use the Bearine; it is the only safe and reliable dressing you can get. Every Druggist sells it. 2

Loss of Memory may mean a general breaking up of the life forces, or it may indicate the effects of obscure diseases—contracted in early life. In either case Dr. Helmbold's Buchu is the sure specific. It restores the functions of manhood, and renovates the entire system. It acts upon both the liver and kidneys, and is justly entitled the Great Diuretic. Get the genuine. All druggists sell it.

The happiest discovery of the age.—ANAKESIS, an infallible cure of PILES, a scientific combination of poultice, instrument and medicine, endorsed by physicians of all schools, discovered by DR. SILSBEE, a regular physician, and used successfully in thousands of cases. Sufferers who have tried everything else in vain will find instant relief and permanent cure. It is regarded by medical men as the greatest of modern discoveries, and pronounced infallible.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

Some of the receipts mentioned were given long before the present managers took charge of the paper.

On Tuesday, May 12, John Sanders of Nashua was brought before Wm. H. Y. Hackett, U. S. Com'r charged with stealing from the Nashua Post-office a letter addressed to Mrs. Nellie Sanford. The case was adjourned to the City Hall, Nashua, on the 15th inst.

The New England Jubilee Singers.

As many enquiries are made concerning the origin, attainments and success of these singers, I would like to make a general statement for the information of the citizens of Portsmouth and other places who have given the troupe such generous encouragement. In September, 1873, after we had organized our church (Mt. Olivet) and Sabbath school, we started a singing-class, which progressed finely, Prof. Thompson being soon engaged as music teacher. A little later we decided to build a small church edifice, and it was considered that the singing-class might aid in this by giving a series of sacred concerts, at which the old slave hymns and melodies should wholly be sung. A troupe was soon organized, of members of the singing class and others, and the first concert given at Kittery and the second one in this city, the latter on Christmas night. Since then over thirty concerts have been given, in and out of this State; and though their pecuniary success has not been great, putting all the concerts together, as only about one-fifth of them gave any addition to the fund, yet their audiences have in every case seemed highly pleased, and the press has spoken in the most commendatory terms of their concerts. Even in the places where the smallest audiences have greeted the troupe, their performance has been highly appreciated by those present. Their lack of experience, and the fact that their leader was a representative of their own race (contrary to custom, though as it should be), no doubt militated against their pecuniary success.

But though the money returns were less than had been hoped for, their concert-tour was a success, for had they never tried they would not have known how much they could do, and the public would never have believed it possible for them to accomplish so much. At the start it was proposed to sing only sacred music; but some of the original troupe were opposed to confining themselves to this, and have withdrawn; but the organization is still kept up, though with numbers somewhat reduced, and under the conduct of the able and rising young man, Mr. J. Edwards, will improve more in the art of singing in the future than in the past. We cannot fully express our thanks to the citizens of Portsmouth and other places for their generous appreciation and liberal patronage, or to the press for favors shown us. And while we regret certain occurrences, we hope none will forget that to err is human and that error is found not only among the lowly and middle classes but among the cultured and professedly moral.

In conclusion,—we are still without a place of our own in which to worship God; and we bespeak the aid of the thousands of persons who sympathize with us in our efforts to elevate ourselves (through the general elevation of our race), hoping with their generous assistance to place our New England mission on a permanently successful basis, and soon to build the proposed new church in this city.

EDMUND KELLEY.

What a Lady Thinks of Dr. Hebbard's Private Lecture.

Editors of the Chronicle:—May I be allowed a little space in your paper for a word to such ladies as, from any cause, were deterred from attending Dr. Hebbard's private lecture at Congress Hall, Wednesday evening? Of course no editorial notice will be given; and in writing this, I am confident from the close attention given throughout the necessarily lengthy lecture, the eager expression of interest on every countenance, the hearty, but not noisy applause, elicited by one or two of the Doctor's irresistible hits, and the tears which attested his skill in portraying the wreck of some frail barque on the shoals and quicksands which beset our life's voyage, that I shall meet the approval of all who listened to this most instructive and intensely interesting lecture.

I regret that any lady young or old, married or single, should lose this opportunity of informing herself upon a topic of such vital interest. We may have our private libraries, and carefully read, and study many excellent works relating to this subject, and yet a single scientific lecture in easy familiar style, by an eminent practitioner, illustrated by one of those beautiful models will give us a more perfect knowledge of the temple in which we are enshrined, a clearer vision of our noble mission, and also a more regretful sense of the sins through ignorance committed against the laws of our being than all our patient, unguided researches.

How truly has this gentleman remarked in a previous lecture that there was no subject on which men and women are so deplorably ignorant as this one of more importance than any other. Being uneducated, are we, as women, capable of performing any of the duties of life? On the threshold of womanhood,

"Standing with reluctant feet
Where the brook and river meet,"

we begin to need this knowledge, for to have true filial love and devotion, we must have an idea of what our mothers have suffered for us. All her anxious care and kind admonitions for our health may fall lightly on unheeding ears, for with the giddy recklessness of youth we feel ourselves strong, and think "mother is so fussy," but if we understand our physical organism and its laws, and see the horrible consequences of their transgression portrayed, these warnings will not even be required; the warm hosiery, the strong over-shoes will be cheerfully donned; the vicious, wasp-waisted French corset abandoned, and replaced by one which, while giving a graceful contour to the figure, compresses no part, and supports from the shoulders all the weight of the clothing.

I am aware that our peculiar organization and the mystery of our being, is an extremely delicate subject for mothers to broach to their daughters, yet there is no duty more inperative than that they should be candidly and fully informed on this subject. If imparted by mother to daughters, or the young lady accompany her mother to these lectures, I believe it would induce a dignity and self-respect not always seen in the bearing of young girls of this age, and entirely banish the levity, so painful and disgusting to maturer years, with which they are wont to speculate, often in the most ridiculous manner, with each other on this subject. It is invested with mystery, and often begets a kind of curiosity, of which we in later years are ashamed. Give them your confidence, and the truth. They will respect you none the less, but love and honor you now, while the knowledge they gain of themselves will aid you in rendering them what all good mothers most desire their daughters to be, beautiful, good, and true women. Of the ignorance in which many a poor child approaches the altar, and the holy, yet awful hour of maternity, we have no heart to speak. It is simply wicked.

In the exercise of our maternal duties, we are in constant need of the knowledge these lectures give us, and in many minor instances it would obviate the disagreeable necessity of consulting a physician—an experience from which most ladies instinctively shrink and often defer until too late to receive benefit from his skill.

But I have already trespassed too long on your time, patience, and space, and I must leave unsaid much with which heart and brain are teeming, and respectfully and earnestly beg my sisters to avail themselves one and all of the opportunity these lectures afford to gain the light we so greatly need.

A GREY-HAIRED MOTHER.

—Quiz had a call from one of his friends last evening, and hospitably offered him a glass of "sour mash," inquiring, also, if he would have a little water. "Eh?" said the visitor. "I didn't understand you." "Will you have a little water?" said Quiz. "Ah! no, thank you," said the guest; "I washed before I left home." Thus passes away the glory of the world.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.
The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a
NEW BONNET.
It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:
First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.
Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.
Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.
Hats, not trimmed,
From One Cent to One Dollar.
Hats, trimmed,
From 50 cts. to $10.00.

Her Bill of Divorce.

A few days since, a well-dressed couple, in the prime of life, stopped at a hotel in a country-town, and sending for a justice of the peace informed that functionary that they wished to be married.

The justice said, "all right," and inquired their names.

After being told, it struck him that he had performed the same service for the lady some years before. Upon inquiring if such was not the case, she said she had been married previously.

"Have you a bill from your former husband?" asked Mr. Justice.

"Yes," she replied, "I have a bill."

This being satisfactory, the ceremony was performed, and the couple were declared "man and wife."

As they were about departing, the justice, who had never seen "a bill of divorce," and having a strong desire to behold the document, thought this an excellent opportunity to satisfy his curiosity, therefore said to the lady:

"Have you the bill with you?"

"Oh yes," she replied.

"Have you any objection to allowing me to see the bill?" said our friend.

"None whatever," she replied.

Stepping to the door and calling to a little boy some three or four years of age, she said:

"Here, Bill, come here quick; there's a gentleman that wishes to see you."

The gentleman wilted.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '29; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1820—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!
This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.
Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff, and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.
By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.
As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.
Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."
BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,
FOR THE WHISKERS.
This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

No. 70 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Research made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR
TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.
Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.
AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.
As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its gratefully and agreeably perfumed, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

The Prisoner of Sainte Marguerite.

[Syracuse Journal.]

Not that he loved France less, but Napoleon more! It is a paraphrase, but with a difference, as our readers would discover even if their attention were not called to the fact. And yet Napoleon, III. sleeps the last sleep at Chiselhurst, France is kept steadily under the hand of the man of the September, and Bazaine, the Marshal most devoted to his Emperor, is a prisoner on the island of Sainte Marguerite. How rapidly changes are wrought by time, when circumstances have ripened for them. When Bazaine was leading the French troops through Mexico at the command of the Emperor of France, who dreamed that within less than a decade Napoleon III. would lose his Empire and his life, that France would be governed by a Military Dictator, and that Marshal Bazaine would be found guilty of a crime punishable with death, and, through the clemency of the existing Government of his country, would be a prisoner on a lonely island, with no hope of freedom so long as the present Government exists—who dreamed of these things? And yet they are matters of current history, recorded by the press, and will soon become matters of standard history, to find a place in public and private libraries, and to be taught in the schools, like other important events, to point a moral and adorn a tale.

And then, how quickly men who have played important parts in the drama of nations, pass out of the current thought of the public mind, after they have been removed from the sphere of action which gave them prominence or eminence! While Bazaine was holding Metz against the seige of the Crown Prince of Germany, the eyes of the world were fixed upon him. Again, while he was the State prisoner on trial before the highest tribunal of France, he was the observed of all observers. But after he had been sent away into imprisonment on the island of Sainte Marguerite, the public soon neglected to give him more than a passing thought, and then—not even that.

But Bazaine has not been forgotten by his personal friends; and they, from time to time, will remind the world, as Blanton Duncan has just done, that such a man as Bazaine lives, and that in the course of human events he may yet be restored to his position as Marshal of France, or if not that, he may be a free man enjoying his country's pardon. Mr. Duncan was permitted to visit Bazaine, about four weeks ago, and to hold a two hours' interview with him. The occasion as described by Mr. Duncan, in a letter to General Hancock, was one of deep interest, since it gave an insight into Bazaine's views respecting his fate, and afforded a glimpse of his domestic delights, of which not even imprisonment has deprived him, for Madame Bazaine and his three charming children share his fate with him,—the wife without a murmur of complaint; the children without a realization of the undesirableness of the situation. Bazaine claims that all the moral force of the law has been discharged upon him, and that he would not have suffered any more, if he had been shot. Indeed, he says he would have preferred to have been executed, but the authorities did not wish him to be. We do not think, however, that he will ever quarrel with the French Government on that score. Life is sweet to every man, and most particularly so when he has a devoted and charming wife to render his hours endurable even under the most adverse circumstances. That Bazaine would have stood up to be shot, without paling, nobody who knows him will question; and that he would have fallen like a soldier, nobody will dispute. But then when a man has been permitted to live, and he has a wife and children whom he loves, to live for and to comfort him, what is the use of his asserting that he was indifferent whether his life was spared or not. In speaking of Madame Bazaine, who is the constant companion of her husband, Mr. Duncan says:

"She is, you know, Mexican, with dark, lustrous eyes, black eyelashes and eyebrows beautifully curved, a mouth indicating unusual resolution, and a radiant, lovely face tinged with carmine, and lips like two cherries or half-opened rose-buds. It seemed to me that every time one of her sunny glances fell upon the Marshal it seemed to warm and quicken the blood in his veins. I said it was a gratifying sight to any one of true feeling to see such an exhibition of wifely duty, and affection Her reply was a worthy one:

'In Mexico the women as well as the men are all brave. They never desert friends in extremity. When I married the Marshal I was seventeen. He was at the summit of power, with fortune and friends to support his future and not a shadow to overcast it. He gave me that bright and enviable position, and when power and fortune and friends have vanished my place is by his side to share the crust of bread and all the privations with the same devotion and affection that was due him in the zenith of his prosperity.'"

Bazaine still insists upon his innocence of the charges of which he was adjudged guilty, and he declares his "conscience is easy" concerning his action at Metz. But that is what he declared from the very first, and probably it is what he will declare to the very end. However, the verdict has been rendered, the sentence has been passed, the criminal is suffering, and France does not protest. That France will forgive him under the present Government, is scarcely among the possibilities. That France will forgive him if she ever forgives Sedan and takes back to her bosom the son of Napoleon III. to rule over her, is almost among the certainties. Such are the contingencies of dynastics and power!

The Arkansas War.

This Brooks-Baxter-Arkansas imbroglio just knocks the spots out of that Schleswig-Holstein affair of former years, for mix-upedness, but as there was said to be one man in Europe who really understood the Schleswig-Holstein question, (he went to a lunatic asylum long ago,) even so there is one man in this country who understands these Arkansas matters,—modesty forbids our designating this man more particularly, but we rise to explain the whole business to our readers, hoping to make them understand the Arkansas muddle as thoroughly as we do, before we get through.

The quarrel is between Brooks and Baxter, to see who shall be governor of an ungovernable crowd. Baxter was nominated long ago, (two years, we believe,) as the regular republican candidate, and was triumphantly elected; Brooks, who led a colored regiment in the late war, was the candidate of the democrats and liberal republicans, and was also triumphantly elected. Which one was inaugurated, or whether both or neither captured the gubernatorial chair, or whether or no Arkansas has had any governor at all for a year or two back, we do not remember just now. The two governors belong to the same church in Little Rock, so of course each is perfectly aware of the other's entire unfitness for any office of trust and his own bounden duty as a true patriot and good man, to keep the other fellow out of office. Brooks is supported by the legislature and Baxter by the courts, or Baxter by the legislature and Brooks by the courts, we forget which; but it doesn't matter. Brooks, the democratic governor, has the support of his own party and all honorable republicans, including two-thirds of the colored voters and most of the ex-rebels; Baxter, the republican governor, has the undivided support of both parties, including two-thirds of the ex-rebels and four-fifths of the colored men; and each governor is only too anxious to submit to the voice of the courts and the power of the federal government, provided only the courts will raise their voice and the federal government use its power to crush the vile usurper, his antagonist. Each governor is indignant at the cowardly remissness of Grant in not promptly protecting the rights of the people by squelching the pretender and his party, and each protests against any interference of federal bayonets in State affairs. Brooks captures legislators and steamboats, steals half the State muskets and shoots Baxterites, in the interests of morality and a pure election; and Baxter captures judges and steamboats, shoots men, and steals the other half of the State muskets, in the interests of good order and the purity of the ballot-box. Under these circumstances it would seem the general government should be at no loss how to act. Grant has been told just what is necessary to be done to give peace to Arkansas—to put Brooks in the gubernatorial seat and support Baxter as governor of the State.

It is only after long-continued and patient perusing of the bulletins of both parties and the lucid explanations of the democratic press, together with their advice to Grant, that we are enabled to lay the true state of affairs before our readers; but if we have succeeded in making them understand the demerits of the question any better than they did, we are repaid for all our trouble.

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Herald asserts that our government has negotiated a reciprocity treaty with the dominion of Canada which will be sent, in few days, to the Senate for ratification. He says its provisions are not, as yet, publicly known beyond the general fact that it is an elaboration of the privileges of the reciprocity treaty abrogated by this government several years ago.

Amasa Walker writes to the Boston Globe that the steel consumers showed conclusively at Washington that an American steel had never been produced which they could use. He claims that while the steel duty protects an industry employing 5000 people, it injures industries employing 260,000 workmen, who might supply the market of the world if the duty were taken off their raw material.

The democrats of the Connecticut legislature have nominated Hon. William W. Eaton for U. S. Senator. Eaton had 91 votes, W. H. Barnum 46, Governor Ingersall 20.

The Post-office department during April sold $490,142 worth of stamps more than in April, 1873. For ten months of the current fiscal year the increase is $3,002,806, including $1,579,926 of official stamps. The total issue for that period is $20,872,278.

A Salamanca, N. Y., letter states that terrible fires have been raging for several days on the mountain sides near Jamestown, Carrolton, Orleans, Salamanca and other towns. The fires extend over a wide range of country, penetrating to the timber districts of Erie and Corry, Pa. Several cabins of the Alleghany Indians in the woods near Salmanaca have been burned, and a large saw mill was also burned. Animals are fleeing from the flames. On Sunday the citizens of Minetta, Erie county, Pa., turned out from church to keep the flames from burning the village. Unless a heavy rain occurs there will be a loss of hundreds of thousands of acres of timber.

The oration on Memorial day, in Portland, will be given at city hall, in the evening, instead of in the cemetery.

The democratic party of Alabama would seem to have determined to make the repudiation of the entire State debt one of the issues in the next canvass. Some of the organs of the party openly advocate the repudiation of the whole debt, while others propose to restrict it to the indebtedness incurred upon account of railroads. General John T. Morgan has a four-column article in a Selma paper taking the latter view, and almost openly advocating that easy mode of payment. Having plundered and almost ruined the State, these patriotic gentlemen see no other way out of the difficulties that beset them, except through the path of further dishonor and disgrace.

The house in its action upon the steamboat bill passed upon the question of compulsory pilotage, and, by a decided vote, defeated the section containing it. The subject will, however, come up by itself in the senate upon Mr. Hamlin's bill.

Republicanism is making rapid headway in northern Alabama. Within six weeks charter elections have been held in six of the largest cities of the Commonwealth—Mobile, Montgomery, Selma, Opelika and Huntsville—all of which have been under democratic rule. In the elections just held they have been triumphantly carried by the republicans.

The Governor of Georgia has leased the convict labor of that State for about $8000 per annum. The convicts are to be employed in different portions of the State at mining, railroading and farming.

An association for the extermination of Free-masonry and other secret societies has been organized in Illinois. This new association proposes to do what Roman Catholicism has in vain tried to accomplish for hundreds of years past.

Mr. Hall, of Dover, lately appointed District Attorney for this State, will not accept his commission until July 1st, as the republicans want him in the legislature.

Old Time Chronicles, No. 110.

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

The Continental Congress comprised delegates from the thirteen Colonies; began in 1774 (when it was evident there would be a war with England) and continued through the war of the Revolution, which ended in 1783; and then on to 1788, when the United States Constitution was formed, which went into operation the next year. The whole period was 14 years.

The first meeting of this Congress was in Philadelphia, Sept. 5, 1774. The number of delegates was 56. From New Hampshire the delegates were Nathaniel Folsom and John Sullivan. Two years later this Congress adopted the Declaration of Independence. The number of members was then 56; but New Hampshire had three,—Josiah Bartlett, Matthew Thornton and William Whipple. Probably the delegates were chosen for two years, as several of them served two years in succession. In all, eighteen different persons served in this Congress from our State, as it is called now; quite a portion of them were from Rockingham county, as the following: Of Portsmouth, John Langdon, Woodbury Langdon; Exeter, John Taylor Gilman, Nathaniel Folsom, Nathaniel Peabody; Londonderry, Matthew Thornton; Kingston, Josiah Bartlett; South Hampton, Phillips White; Stratham, Paine Wingate.

On the 15th of November, 1777, this Congress adopted Articles of Confederation. These articles were a sort of constitution or fundamental law. By their provision each State might have two delegates, and none more than seven.

In this Congress, in the course of its existence, were five persons who afterwards became Presidents of the United States, viz., George Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, and James Monroe. Dr. Franklin was a member from Pennsylvania, Patrick Henry from Virginia, and several others much celebrated in our country's history. Mr. Joel Barlow, an American poet, notices this Congress very happily. The first mentioned is Randolph, of whom Mr. Barlow speaks thus:

"Fair on his head the civic crown was placed
And the first dignity his scepter graced."

This is an allusion to his being the first chosen President of the Congress. He was from Virginia. Then he says:

"But hapless sage, thy reign must soon be o'er,
To lend thy lustre and to shine no more."

He died suddenly, Oct. 22, 1775. Of Washington he says,

"His sword hung useless on his graceful thigh,
On England still he cast a filial eye;
But sovereign fortitude his visage bore
To meet their legions on th' invaded shore."

Franklin next, then others.

"Sage Franklin next arose in awful mien,
And smiled unruffled o'er the approaching scene."
"Nash, Rutledge, Jefferson in council great,
And Gary and Laurens op'd the rolls of fate."
"The Livingstons, fair freedom's generous band,
The Lees and Houstons, fathers of the land."

There was a Livingston from New York and one from New Jersey. Richard Henry Lee, of Virginia, first made the motion for the Declaration of Independence.

"Bold Walcott urg'd the all important cause,
With steady hand the solemn scene he draws."

Walcott was from Connecticut.

"Now, graceful rising from his graceful throne
In purple robes immortal Hosmer shone."
"But lo! an unseen hand the curtain drew
And snatch'd the patriot from the hero's view."

Hosmer was from Connecticut. Probably he died soon.

"Adams, enrag'd a broken charter bore,
And lawless acts of ministerial power;
Crowds rose to vengeance while his accents rung,
And Independence thundered from his tongue."

Boston Men.

[Tribune.]

"A Boston man" who had heretofore paid $30 a week for board at Newport, has been offered the same attractions for the coming season at $15. Whereupon the Boston Transcript calmly observes that Boston men are always in demand everywhere and very likely the Newport landlords would prefer a Boston man at $15 any day to a New Yorker at $45. The average Boston man is known to be an uncommonly attractive person who contents himself with a meagre diet, and enriches the landlord with the gems of his conversation; and yet that can hardly account for the difference of $30 a week between him and the average New Yorker. We dislike to suggest another nightmare to Boston, but really is it not quite possible that Mr. Benjamin Butler has agreed to pay the difference in order to get the Boston men out of town, and call the caucuses in their absence?

Put the System in Fighting Tune.

The great object in cases of indigestion and its accompanying derangements of the liver, bowels and nerves, is to put the stomach in a condition to dissolve, readily and without pain, the food submitted to its action. This is accomplished, and much more than this, by the daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. A dose should be taken before every meal. The good effect will soon be apparent. The loss of flesh, strength and energy which usually occurs in dyspepsia will be arrested. The determination of bile to the skin will cease, and that cathartic fluid will pass into the bowels and assist in keeping them free. Every organ connected with or dependent upon the stomach will be toned and renovated. The kidneys, the sifters of the system, will be beneficially influenced, as will the liver, the alimentary canal, and the pores. In short, the whole organization will be put in the fighting trim necessary to resist and expel disease. If the medicine is taken regularly and persistently, this result will inevitably follow.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Readers, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

For Moth Patches, Freckles and Tan Ask your druggist for Perry's Moth and Freckle Lotion, which is harmless and in every case infallible. Loss of Memory may mean a general breaking up of the life forces, or it may indicate the effects of obscure disease—contracted in early life. In either case Dr. Heimbold's Buchu is the sure specific. It restores the functions of manhood, and renovates the entire system. It acts upon both the liver and kidneys, and is justly entitled the Great Diuretic. Get the genuine. All druggists sell it.

The happiest discovery of the age.—ANAKESIS, an infallible cure of PILES, a scientific combination of poultice, instrument and medicine, endorsed by physicians of all schools, discovered by DR. SILSBEE, a regular physician, and used successfully in thousands of cases. Sufferers who have tried everything else in vain will find instant relief and permanent cure. It is regarded by medical men as the greatest of modern discoveries, and pronounced infallible.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

STUDY THIS!

THE

"DOMESTIC" SEWING MACHINE

IS THE BEST OF ALL.

50 POINTS OF SUPERIORITY.

1 Perfection of Stitch on all kinds of goods, without change of tension.
2 Great Range of Work—finest Muslin to coarse Beaver or Sole Leather.
3 Ease of Operation.
4 Simplicity—having 100 less parts than some others.
5 SELF-ADJUSTING TENSIONS—not found in any other.
6 Uses Silk, Linen Thread, or Glazed Cotton with facility.
7 Noiseless, or more nearly so than any other using a shuttle.
8 Durability—few bearings—easy motion—hardened parts.
9 Very large bobbin—two or three times as large as some others.
10 Convenient Spooler and durable-ready for use as soon as bobbin is inserted.
11 Convenience for lengthening stitch on top, behind the arm.
12 Swing Presser Foot—allowing work to be easily removed.
13 Extra Size and Room under Arm—permitting goods to pass through easily.
14 Extra room under presser foot and needle—admitting very thick cloth.
15 Needle can be easily set.
16 Cannot be put out of "Time"—has no cams or gear wheels.
17 Easily oiled without removing Machine—only 7 oil places.
18 Easily cleaned—so few pieces, and those all large—cleaning not often required.
19 Cylindrical hardened cast steel shuttle, very durable.
20 Cannot oil the thread, because the shuttle entirely encloses the bobbin.
21 Cannot soon wear out—has little friction.
22 Cannot miss stitches—peculiar motion of needle bar and shuttle.
23 Not liable to break needles.
24 Shuttle cannot get out of order—has no screws or pieces soldered to it.
25 Does not change length of stitch when in use, as many others do.
26 Does not change Tension.
27 Has no Tension on bobbin, therefore stiches alike at all times.
28 Has straight needle—sews heavy goods with ease.
29 Starting wheel on top, avoiding trouble of reaching underneath.
30 Can be taken apart and put together in ten minutes, ready for use.
31 Automatic Take-up—making perfect stich with uneven thread, in thin or thick work.
32 Easily threaded—and alike at all times, without regard to size of thread.
33 Does not break thread as many do.
34 Easy motion—short crank—easy treadle—can be operated by an invalid
35 No shuttle carrier slides to consume power, and require frequent oiling.
36 Feed rod connected with shuttle lever, saving power, avoiding complicated machinery.
37 Easy method of raising or lowering the Feed.
38 Simple device for fastening, setting and removing needle.
39 Perfect action of shuttle-carrier.
40 Feed always starts from needle, whether regulated for long or short stitches.
41 Table that cannot warp or split—7 layers wood—grains run both ways.
42 Drop leaf that nearly doubles size of table, made same as table.
43 Cover that cannot warp, crack nor shrink, because grains run both ways.
44 Swing drawer that cannot drop or break down, as others are apt to do.
45 Castors for easily moving the machine about the room.
46 Gatherer that makes any fullness even between two other pieces.
57 Embroiderer that uses Chenille or coarse silk, &c., making and sewing on at once.
48 Working parts thoroughly hardened.
49 Peculiar combination of Needle, Shuttle, and Take-up motion.
50 Parts interchangeable. If any part breaks, a new piece is easily substituted.

Local Matters.

Laconics.

Now doth the corner loafer blossom as the rose, and the voice of the hand-organ is heard in the land.

There's nothing like a first-class row to bring a crowd about the police station an hour or two before Judge Page assembles himself to dispense justice.

The travelling public will hear with regret of the retirement of Conductor Daniel S. Philbrook from the Eastern Railroad. Mr. Philbrook has been one of the most efficient Conductors on the Road and during the twenty years or more that he has been in its service has run his train almost like clock-work, meeting with no accident during that time which has cost the Road a cent of damages.

Harris' ale, manufactured here, has been selling as "pop beer" in Saco, and the police seized some of it there. An analyzation of its properties having been made, alcohol to the amount of six and three-tenths per cent. was found in it, and as the law permits the sale of "pop beer" only whe n there is but two and a half per cent. of alcohol in it, the seizure is justified.

Ship Sea Serpent, built here in 1850, has been sold to go under the Norwegian flag, her price being about $22,500. She is registered at 974 tons, and was built by the late George Raynes for Grinnell, Minturn & Co., of New York; and she was the first clipper ship ever built on this river, which soon after became famous for vessels of that class.

Master John Hubbard, U. S. N., has reported for duty on the U. S. Reiceving Ship Sabine.

June 23d is the day of the 2d N. H. Reunion in this city.

Messrs. Stephen W. Clarke and Chas. C. Akerman have been appointed Justices of the Peace.

Commodore Rodgers, chief of the bureau of yards and docks, Commodore Nichols, commaudant of the navy yard at Charlestown, Mass., and Civil Engineer Sanger, chief of the department of civil engineering made an official visit to this navy yard on Wednesday. The customary salute was dispensed with at the request of the visitors.

A wherry, containing a lady and five gentlemen from Kittery, on their way to this city to attend the funeral of the late Deacon Libbey, while trying to make the city landing at the foot of Daniel street, at 2 o'clock Thursday, was swept by the unusually strong tide against Pier wharf, and instantly filled, leaving the party in the water, clinging to the piles of the wharf. Commodore Howell's gig was lying at the navy yard landing, and the coxswain, Mr. Peirce, at once put off to render assistance; and with the prompt help of others the whole party was soon landed, with no other harm than a wetting.

A couple of years ago, Messrs. Morse & Ilsley had 2000 cards printed which the job printer made a mistake in, putting the figures 57 in lieu of 47 Congress street. Becently a new numbering of the street has been made and singulary enough the cards now come in use, the new number being 57.

The Weather.

The thermometer reached eighty-five degrees above zero in the shade on the 13th, though many persons thought it much warmer than that, the previous cool weather making such a warm day "take right hold," especially on fat men, one of whom informed us that he "guessed it was about up to three hundred." The sudden change seems to have induced a species of hydrophobia in some persons, or else the heat caused the fumes of their regular benzine to go to their heads more than common, resulting in a number of fights during the evening. On Church Hill an Irish gentleman disciplined his wife, who lifted up her voice and wept, attracting an interested crowd and the police, who walked the gentleman to the station. There was also a row on Water street, and when officer Devieson went to arrest one of combatants he proceeded to give the officer a thrashing, and would have made out very well had not the officer thrashed him instead, and then bagged him in the city receptacle for such chaff. There were also several other fights on Water street, and an unprovoked assault on a marine on Market street, most of the aggressors being promptly jugged by the police.

Judge Page held one of his popular levees on Thursday, at which Thomas Quinn (one of the Water street heroes,) was invited to pay fines and costs amounting to $24.94, for two assaults, his attack upon the officer not being brought up; he also got thirty days in jail. William Quinn, brother to Thomas, was arraigned for an assault upon Marcellus Bailey, the case being continued. Mike Reagan and Clarence Foote were fined $9.90 each for being drunk, and Foote got an additional fine and costs amounting to $14.90, for assaulting the marine on Market street.

In The Olden Time.

In Adams' Annals of Portsmouth it is stated that in 1643 a new county was formed comprehending all the towns between Merrimac and Piscataqua rivers, (namely: Salisbury, Hampton, Haverhill, Exeter, Dover and Strawberry Bank,) named Norfolk. Salisbury the shire town. But Dover and Portsmouth had a court separate, at this time. Massachusetts had four counties, viz, the one named, and Essex—embracing Salem, Lynn, Enon, Ipswich, Newbury, Gloucester and Cochicawich; Middlesex, embracing Charlestown, Watertown, Sudbury, Concord, Woburn, Medford and Lynn village; Suffolk, embracing Boston, Roxbury, Dorchester, Dedhem, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham and Nantasket. In 1680, the commission was received at Portsmouth, January 1st. They issued writs to the four towns, Portsmouth, Dover, Hampton and Exeter, naming each qualified voter, requiring them to choose suitable persons to represent them in the General Assembly, and each voter had to take the oath of allegiance. Portsmouth had 71 voters, Dover 61, Hampton 57, and sent three representatives each; Exeter had 20 voters and sent two. In 1642, by a law of Massachusetts no free man was allowed to vote in town meeting, nor sit as a deputy in the General Court, unless he was a church member.

Against this law the most determined opposition was urged by Col. Robert Pike of Salisbury. With that stern sense of justice and opposition to whatever savored of inequality which made him a marked man in after years, he uttered his protest, and when the time of persecution came to him he boldly avowed his sentiments to the Legislature and finally reached the limit of ultraism by declaring that to compel a man to pay a tax rate for the support of preaching of sentiments he did not approve was in defiance of the plain provisions of justice, and refusing to pay an assessment made upon him.

Firemen's Relief Association.

The Trustees of the Firemen's Relief Association of this city held their annual meeting on the evening of May 11, and the following persons were chosen officers for the ensuring year: President, Ira C. Seymour; Vice President, Willard Sears; Treasurer, Samuel S. Fletcher; Secretary, Edwin H. Leslie. The Association has in the Treasury $1,214.79, and has at the present time seventy members. The object of the Association is to assist firemen who are disabled in the discharge of their duty, such persons receiving a benefit of $3 per week.

County Convention.

In order that the Legislative Convention may act from knowledge with regard to the County Farm, the County Commissioners will invite the members of the Legislature from Rockingham county to visit the Brentwood establishment on Thursday, May 28.

William Splann and James Clasby, sentenced to the County House of Correction at Brentwood, escaped on Wednesday night. Fifty dollars reward is offered for their return.

A Painful Story.

At the depot in Milwaukee, Wis., one day last month, a fine looking young man named Fritz Shouman, four years from Fatherland, was one of a throng eagerly awaiting a certain train. As many sympathizing friends about him were aware, he had industriously and patiently won a rising position in a large local business house, and was in the depot to greet the girl he had loved in his German home, whom he had summoned to come to him and be his wife in the new home he had prepared for their future. And she came. "As the expected train rolled at last into the station," describes the Wisconsin, "and the impatient passengers began disembarking, the quick eye of love revealed the yearning hearts to each other, and with the words 'Fritz!' 'Katrina!' the long separated lovers clasped each other in a close embrace. After the first joyous emotion was over, Fritz tried to disengage himself, to present his future bride to the many friends who had come around. But the hands were firmly about his neck and would not separate; no words came from the lips which touched his cheek, and in a moment the dread intelligence flashed through the minds of the beholders. The girl was dead, having literally broken her heart with excessive joy at being restored to him she so fondly loved. No words can describe the grief of the man who but a moment before had stepped as proudly as a king, conscious of having the love of a true woman. His anguish overpowered and unmanned him, and the few deep sobs which convulsed his frame soon passed, leaving him gazing at the corpse of Katrina with a dull agonoizing stare. The many passengers at the depot became aware of what had happened, and when all had been told not a dry eye was to be seen."

—It is said that the favorite songs of the British troops when on the march in Ashantee land were "John Brown" and "Tramp, tramp."

—An Indianapolis father shot six times at a supposed burglar, and was astonished to hear the following asked: "Whazzer mazzer fazzer; whazzer doing?"

—A San Franciscan went home from business, and, finding his wife house-cleaning, added to her labors by cutting his throat on the clean kitchen floor. Some men have no feeling for their wives.

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

— OF —

Bonnets, Hats,
Flowers and

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

Illicit Trade.

[Portland Advertiser.]

We mentioned the other day that the porter of a Pullman car from Montreal to this city was suspected of smuggling clothing as the custom-house detectives seized a large quantity last week as it was being removed to an express cart. This gives weight to the statement made by the authorities that Montreal merchants have enjoyed great prosperity the past eight years from a trade with the States conducted in this way. In many cases by an arrangement with sleeping car conductors and expressmen, parcels would be smuggled to parties living near the boundary line in Canada, who would carry the same in wagons, in the night time, by and beyond the frontier posts to some station on the railroad, when they would be taken by express messengers and forwarded to their places of destination. Valuable invoices have been found in the bundles and have been made use of before the Grand Jury of the District of New York and Vermont, and suits have been commenced against several Montreal merchants, whose goods in transit from England via Portland have been seized at Island Pond. Sufficient evidence has been disclosed to induce the accused to confess judgment in large sums, and they have agreed to abstain hereafter from the violation of our revenue laws. The suits aggregate over a half million dollars.

IRON IN THE BLOOD,

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY DROPSY AND HUMORS,

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in the palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Much reminiscence of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR
TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.
Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.
AYERS HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brushy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.
As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Shinborn Redivivus.

[Concord Patriot.]

Max Shinborn, the notorious burglar, whose advent to the State of New Hampshire, some years ago, created considerable commotion, and whose subsequent exodus made a decided sensation, particularly in this city, as it was the scene of his last brilliant coup d'etat, is again agitating official circles, though in a somewhat different role. It is understood that Colonel Whiteley, Chief of the United States Detective Force, has applied to the Governor and Council for the pardon of Shinborn. The ground on which the petition is based is said to be that he is an important witness for the United States, in a counterfeiting case, and being now in Switzerland, fears to come back, on account of the sentence which is hanging over him in this State.

It is alleged that he has been in Switzerland since his escape from prison here. In November, 1864, Shinborn visited Walpole and broke into the Savings Bank there, drawing therefrom, by a rather irregular process, between thirty and forty thousand dollars of the funds. He was arrested the following Spring in New York, and brought back to Keene. He was tried, found guilty and sentenced to ten years imprisonment in the State Prison. Before his removal to the State Prison he succeeded in making his escape from Keene jail and enjoyed freedom for some months, when he was recaptured near Saratoga, N. Y. He was brought back to this State and committed to the prison in April 1866.

The story of his prison life is doubtless familiar to most of the people in this city. His conduct was most exemplary, and he seemed to have gained the confidence of the officials by his quiet and affable ways. He did not become very strongly attached to his place of residence, however, for he communicated with some parties outside and had a "job put up" for his escape. On Monday, the 3d of December, 1866, as the prisoners were marching in from the work-shops to be locked up for the night, Shinborn made a bolt from the ranks and ran to the gate on the State street side. He tore off a board, which filled the space between the gate and the ground, and which had been prepared for the occasion by being bored around with an auger, by some one on the outside of the walls. He hastily darted through the space, went out to State street and [illegible] through a gap [illegible] on to Washington street. Here a person, dressed in woman's clothes, was waiting for him with a horse and carriage; getting hastily into the carriage he was driven rapidly away, and all the State Prison had to show for the departed Shinborn was the hole through which he crawled, and which was carefully preserved for some time and exhibited with considerable pride to curious visitors.

Since his escape, it is not known that Shinborn has revisited New Hampshire, though it is believed that he has resided in New York until recently, when, perhaps, he went to Switzerland. It is not known whether the petition has been brought before the Governor and Council officially or not, but there is no probability that a pardon will be obtained for him.

Waking up.

The band had just departed for some other haunt of slumber and weariness when the notes of singing floated up that prolific alley like the sweet tenor voice of one bewailing the prohibitory movement; and for an hour or more a pack of young bacchannals, who were evidently about in search of the Maine Law, lifted up their voices in song. Boston seems to be full of good singers; but they will ruin their voices by this night exercise, and so the city will cease to be attractive to travellers who would like to sleep there. But this entertainment did not last the night out. It stopped just before the hotel porter began to come round to arouse the travellers who had said the night before they wanted to be awakened. In all well-regulated hotels this process begins at two o'clock and keeps up till seven. If the porter is at all faithful, he wakes up everybody in the house; if he is a shirk, he only arouses the wrong people. We treated the poundings of the porter on our door with silent contempt. At the next door he had better luck. Pound, pound. An angry voice, "What do you want?"

"Time to take the train, sir."

"Not going to take any train."

"Ah't your name Smith?"

"Yes."

"Well, Smith—"

"I left no order to be called." (Indistinct grumbling from Smith's room).

Porter is heard shuffling slowly down the passage. In a little while he returns to Smith's door, evidently not satisfied in his mind. Rap, rap, rap!

"Well, what now?"

"What's your initials?"

"A. T.; clear out!"

And the porter shambles away in his slippers, grumbling something about a mistake. The idea of waking a man up in the middle of the night to ask him his "initials" was ridiculous enough to banish sleep for another hour. A person named Smith, when he travels, should leave his initials outside the door with his boots.

Summer and Fall Elections.

Oregon will open the ball next month. Four tickets are in the field, namely, the republican, democratic, grangers and temperance. The general record of the State is democratic.

North Carolina holds an election in August. At the present time it has a democratic legislature and republican State officers. Kentucky holds an election about the same time as North Carolina, and will, we suppose, maintain its traditionary democratic record.

Vermont and Maine hold elections for State officers in September.

Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Nebraska hold State elections in October.

Pennsylvania, under her new constitution, holds an election in November, also New York, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, Wisconsin, and Iowa.

The Outrage at Guatemala.

A correspondent of the Panama Star gives full details of the official brutality to Vice Consul Magee and the subsequent shooting of the commandante, Colonel Gonzales, at San Jose de Guatemala. It appears that Mr. Magee holds a semi-official relation to the government of Guatemala that rendered him independent of the commandante, Gonzales. Hence there arose violent jealousy on the part of the latter, and a personal dislike that finally became murderous. Colonel Gonzales summoned Mr. Magee before him, on April 25, and that gentleman excused himself on the ground of having a very lame foot. The commandante then sent a party of armed soldiers, with orders to bring him, dead or alive. They carried Mr. Magee on a cart to the government office, and there the commandante insulted him outrageously, struck him repeatedly in the face, and attempted to shoot him. Prevented from doing this by his friends, he issued orders that Mr. Magee should receive 400 lashes at four o'clock. The victim claimed in vain the protection of his flag, and Mr. James, consular agent of the United States, presented an official protest, under the consular seal. The commandante would listen to no reason, but ordered his soldiery to proceed, announcing that Mr. Magee should not only be flogged, but should be shot at eight o'clock the next morning.

Moved by common humanity, the surgeon of the post suggested that the stripes should be divided and distributed over several days, as otherwise the victim would die under the lash. "Let him die," said Gonzales. The soldiers then began their work by throwing their victim to the ground and partially stripping him. One of them sat on his head and four others on his hands and feet. Four soldiers then administered fifty lashes each, the commandante keeping tally himself. Before 200 lashes had been administered Mr. Magee became insensible, and he was placed upon a rude couch and stimulants were administered. Here he lay all night suffering intensely. From time to time Colonel Gonzales came into the room. Besides heaping insults upon his victim, he repeatedly placed the muzzle of his pistol at his head and asked whether he "would like to be shot," or if it would not be best to shoot him "out of his misery." In the meanwhile, with his soldiers, he held a drunken orgie all night long and plundered the houses of such foreign residents as were accessible. While the flogging was going on, Mr. Moncrieffe, the agent of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, made his escape from the town, and sent a special courier to the capital asking for government interference.

Gonzales had seized the telegraph at San Jose, but a despatch was sent from the nearest station, and relief was sent at once. Eight o'clock of April 25 came, and Mr. Magee was about to receive his second 200 stripes when the pickets caught sight of a force of a hundred government soldiers, under command of General Solano. Alarmed for his personal safety, Gonzales was about to shoot his victim and flee, when Mr. Magee adopted a ruse to save his life. He promised the commandante a letter to the captain of the Arizona which should insure his safety on board and a safe conduct to Salvador. Gonzales caught at the chance, the letter was written, and he left in a small boat just as General Solano entered the town. His last order to his soldiers was to shoot Mr. Magee, but they refused. When Gonzales reached the Arizona in the boat, accompanied by Mr. James, the United States consular agent, the latter stepped on board and the commandante attempted to follow. But just as he stepped upon the gangway, a shot from an unseen hand took effect in his abdomen, and he fell back into the boat. Two other shots from different sources followed, but it was impossible to tell whether they did any execution. One shot was returned, ineffectually, from the boat. Gonzales recovered himself immediately, seized an oar, and helped to row himself ashore. He was seen to walk after landing, but was afterwards made a prisoner by his successor. General Solano sent word to the captain of the Arizona that he should not allow Gonzales to die of his wounds, but would have them healed so that he might be shot for his crimes. Mr. Magee went on board the Arizona before she sailed, and, though suffering severely, was full of life. He no doubt owes his escape from death by flogging to the fact that the soldiers were more merciful, or less drunk, than their leader.

The Chicago Tribune publishes the replies to a circular sent to the press of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska, asking how each stood on the question of the President's veto of the currency bill. The summary shows that of 933 papers answering the circular, 514 sustain the veto, 408 oppose it, and 11 are non-committal. Of those sustaining the veto, 295 are republican and 217 are democratic; of those opposing the veto, 234 are republican and 174 democratic. Indiana, Missouri and Kansas are the only States where the majority of the papers oppose the veto.

Mrs. Jane Swisshelm, that great, good and garrulous woman, says: "Ever since Banks was elected Speaker, woman's power has been supreme at Washington. Hardly a day passes but that fifty respectable women are lobbying in the Capitol, besides others who are at work in other places in Washington. These women rule the country, and the opposition to the woman-suffrage movement comes from them. They know their power and exert themselves to hold it against others of their sex who would destroy their influence. They have a monopoly of woman's political power, and are as exclusive monopolists as ever ran a railroad or controlled a manufacture."

One day last week a bookkeeper in the employ of a lumber firm in Detroit, Mich., became suddenly ill, and, the Free Press says, the several physicians who were called decided that one of his lungs was affected with an abscess caused by rubbing his side against the edge of the table. He was told that the abscess would break within two days and that the chances were that he would die. He made preparations for his decease, and his death occurred within a few minutes after the abscess broke.

About fifty foreigners employed by the White Mountain Railroad Company, twenty miles north of Littleton, struck Wednesday morning, and upon the others refusing to join them began a row, in which several were severely injured and all obliged to quit work. About twenty of them were captured and ten of them were tried at the Twin Mountain House in the evening. Six of them were fined and the remainder released. The strike originated in a party of them sacking a saloon and getting drunk. One man was so seriously injured that blood ran out of his ears and mouth. The strike is over and the men have resumed their work.

The Signal Office has for some time past been compelled to omit Mount Washington reports from its published tables. An electric flash, which made everybody think of a conflagration, "burnt out" the telegraph offices on the summit and at the base of the mountain, and also at Littleton. The damage at the summit was so great that it was impossible to make the needed repairs, as supplies could not be sent up the mountain.

The Congressional Library.

[Washington cor. Morning Star.]

There are some interesting facts connected with the growth of this institution, which may not be out of place to note in the columns of the Star. When we refer back to April 24, 1800, we find Thomas Jefferson urging Congress to make an appropriation for the founding of a library. Accordingly, that body appropriated $5,000 to begin with, and these books were for the use of Congress and the government. A librarian was appointed in 1802. In 1814, the British burnt Washington, and the entire collection of three hundred volumes was destroyed. In 1815, Congress appropriated $23,950 to purchase the library of Mr. Jefferson. It contained 7,500 volumes, and much discussion arose at that time about the propriety of this purchase, as Mr. Jefferson's library was said to contain many atheistic and immoral books. This was alleged by Mr. Jefferson's enemies. It was found, however, that among the collection there were many Bibles and a large number of works on general theology and philosophy. In 1850, there were in this library 55,000 volumes, and in 1851, 35,000 of these were destroyed by fire. In 1861, Ainsworth R. Spofford, Esq., of Cincinnati, was appointed librarian, and it is enough to say of him that he is the right man in the right place. This institution now holds 200,000 volumes, and is steadily increasing. The librarian is purchasing new books almost daily. The operation of the copyright law is now such that one volume of every new American book must be sent to the library. The library of the Smithsonian Institute, consisting of 40,000 volumes, is kept here. Some years ago, the government paid Hon. Peter Force $100,000 for his rare collection of books and manuscripts, all of which now rest upon the shelves in this fine library.

Put the System in Fighting Tune.

The great object in cases of indigestion and its accompanying derangements of the liver, bowels and nerves, is to put the stomach in a condition to dissolve, readily and without pain, the food submitted to its action. This is accomplished, and much more than this, by the daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. A dose should be taken before every meal. The good effect will soon be apparent. The loss of flesh, strength and energy which usually occurs in dyspepsia will be arrested. The determination of bile to the skin will cease, and that cathartic fluid will pass into the bowels and assist in keeping them free. Every organ connected with or dependent upon the stomach will be toned and renovated. The kidneys, the sifters of the system, will be beneficially influenced, as well as the liver, the alimentary canal, and the pores. In short, the whole organization will be put in the fighting trim necessary to resist and expel disease. If the medicine is taken regularly and persistently, this result will inevitably follow.

Either Sick or Well, most people relish a cup of Broma. The difficulty of obtaining it in its purity has prevented its universal use. The Medal of Merit at the Vienna Exposition was awarded that put up by Walter Baker & Co., Boston, as strictly pure, and their business is so extensive that their goods may be obtained almost anywhere.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Reader, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor medicines are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

An Up-Country Slander.

The editor of the Laconia Democrat, (a capital paper, spicy and readable, but of hideous political affinities,) not satisfied with his other sins, adds one more to the long list by intimating that this city is not a go-ahead place,—as if being a democratic editor was not enough to insure cremation for him hereafter. The Democrat man evidently thinks Strawberry Bank and Mt. Ararat identical, and that the deck-houses from the ark still do duty as dwellings in Portsmouth. He says:

"The people of Portsmouth are grumbling because the Concord railroad does not run as many trains from Manchester to Portsmouth as are run to Boston. We suppose there are one hundred passengers from Manchester to Boston, to one to Portsmouth. The complaint is that when a man goes from Manchester to Portsmouth he has to stay in Portsmouth all day, and the papers there talk as if they didn't want folks to stop so long! If it is hard for the Portsmouthites, how tough it must be for the man who has to stop a few hours, and, as the late Mr. Lincoln would have said, this reminds us of a story. We were once caught in Portsmouth in the very predicament complained of by people there, that is, we couldn't get away for want of a train. Having a friend with us we whiled away the time in looking about 'Strawberry Bank.' After a few hours passed in this way, our friend called a halt, and said he should like to see an old resident of the city of whom he could ask one question. Inquiring what the question was he said he 'should like to know whether Portsmouth had undergone any change since Christopher Columbus discovered America, or if it stood just as it did at that time?'"

If Bro. Vaughan will come down here some time this summer and stop over for a day or two, we will convince him that a fish-chowder on the rocks at Gerrish's Island is quite a "change" from the stewed missionary offered to Columbus by the natives, in Jefferson Hall, at the time he discovered the Piscataqua river and old Strawberry Bank. We will also show him (if he defers his visit until the legislature completes its labors, and all is done that our democratic brethren promise,) that the North and South millponds have changed places, that wards have experienced so remarkable a "change" that not a man in the city knows exactly where he lives, and that things generally have been "changed" upside down and hind part before. We will further show him (the most astounding "change" of all,) that our local democratic paper is now conducted in a gentlemanly manner, and if we can get its manager to steal a day from his editorial labors will show the Laconia editor such a specimen of chowder-destroying as will make him proud of his party. Come along.

A further recommendation, for the purchase of a lot of land for an engine house, was referred to the same committee with the Mayor added, to select and recommend a suitable lot.

A Clipper.

The ship North American, owned by Henry Hastings & Co., of Boston, and commanded by Capt. George W. Tucker of this city, sailed from New York for Melbourne May 4, 1873, thence to San Francisco, where she loaded a full cargo of wheat for Liverpool, and arrived on the 4th of March, just ten months from the day she sailed from New York. She made the passage from New York to Melbourne in 72 days, from Melbourne to San Francisco in 51 days, and from San Francisco to England in 93 days—an average of eight miles per hour for 216 sailing days. Her passage from San Francisco to England is said to be the quickest one ever made under sail alone, and that from New York to Melbourne was one of the best on record. Some of the British papers have been jubilating over a recent passage made by a British ship, of eighty-five days from Melbourne to New York, though that run is at least five days shorter than the one from New York to Australia and the latter has repeatedly been made by American ships in less than eighty days.

Laconics.

Rev. D. P. Pike, of Newburyport, will preach in the Court street Christian chapel to-morrow (Sunday), at the usual hours. He will also speak upon the subject of temperance in the evening at half-past 7 o'clock. The public are invited.

There will be service at the South Ward Room to-morrow afternoon and evening, conducted by Rev. Edmund Kelly.

Government is to survey Lamprey river below Newmarket and the Squamscott river below Exeter.

A democratic exchange propounds the following conundrum: "When cremation becomes fashionable, whose ashes will make the strongest lye? There's a question for the average Sunday School scholar." The obvious answer would be, "a democratic editor's."

A Gypsey train passed through our streets Friday, bound East.

A wagon belonging to the Union Store was badly damaged at the Eastern Railroad station, Friday, while loading goods from the cars, by being run into by other cars which were being backed upon a side track. At the same time two men who were in between two of the stationary cars, repairing a coupling, narrowly escaped with their lives. The driver of the team says he had no notice given him to take the team away, and other drivers complain of similar neglect; and we have ourselves seen cars placed on the side tracks in what seemed to us a very careless manner.

A four year old son of Mr. William H. Noyes, of this city, was recently severely scalded by a kettle of boiling hot water falling over him.

An appropriation for the commencement of the proposed Park near Richards Avenue is contemplated by the city fathers.

Mr. Horace F. Pickering, one of the most deserving Conductors in the employ of the Eastern Railroad, who has run the P. & D. trains since the opening of this branch, is suspended by Mr. True W. Jones.

On Friday Judge Page sentenced Mike Reagan to pay a fine and costs amounting to $11.90, for assaulting a marine. William Quinn, charged (in a continued case) with assaulting Marcellus Bailey was discharged.

The Eastern Railroad depot in Biddeford was partially burned on Thursday, the roof being badly damaged.

Mr. Frank Mayo appears as "Davy Crockett" at the Temple on Wednesday evening next.

Thomas Bailey Aldrich is wood-cutted and sketched in the June number of Scribner's Monthly.

A smoke-house at Sagamore Creek, belonging to Mr. Henry S. Hortshorn, took fire Friday afternoon and was burned with its contents, about $500 worth of hams.

Workmen will commence next week repainting and carpeting the Unitarian church, and services for the next two months will be held in the Chapel. The society has voted not to raise the salary of Mr. Thomas E. Chase to $500, and Mr. Chase goes to Boston, where he has two flattering offers.

—When four editors dine together in New York they call it a "quadrumvirate." Quads and rum are first-rate editorial meat and drink.

HENDERSON & CO.,
ANNOUNCE THEIR
SPRING OPENING
OF
Bonnets, Hats,
Flowers and
Ribbons.
The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.
The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a
NEW BONNET.
It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:
First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.
Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.
Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.
Hats, not trimmed,
From One Cent to One Dollar.
Hats, trimmed,
From 50 cts. to $10.00.
And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.
SASH RIBBONS, - - - - - - 25 cents per yard.
SILK TIES - - - - - - - - - 50 cents each.
FRAMES - - - - - - - - - - 15 cents each.

COAL! COAL!
ROBERTS & CO. are prepared to sell COAL as Low as the Lowest, of Equal Quality, at PRAY'S WHARF, North End of Market Street, Portsmouth.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—"Here's your money, boy, and now tell me why your rascally master wrote eighteen letters about that contemptible sum?" "I'm sure, sir, I can't say; but if you'll excuse me, sir, I sort o' reckon 'twas because seventeen didn't fetch it."

—The Detroit Free Press' judge comes up again and says: Something in your sad face and sorrowful speech seems to tell me that you mean business, and that from this hour to the day of your death you will never again drink anything stronger than ginger beer, and that only by the teaspoonful; this is my present impression, but if you should come back here, charged with having created a row while drunk, I'll make you hop like a sunflower before a tornado.

—A new feature of progress in detective police business deserves a word of mention. We find in the Graphic an advertisement of Allen Pinkerton, a New York detective, asking for the dealer who sold a mask found near the scene of the Nanuet murder, on the 19th ult. Accompanying this notice, is a fac-simile not only of the mask but of the dealer's number and secret price mark on its back. If the dealer sees the picture, he will be able to recognize it and swear to it. Whether he can remember his custommer also, is another question.

—The Eureka Times talks to somebody in this wise. We are proud to know that such words don't fit in this community: "Now I want to say a word to the young men. I have heard them say that they didn't know why more young ladies do not go to the dances. I will tell you the secret. The ladies wear a light colored wool dress. After the dance the back of the dress, where he young men's hands come, in dancing fancy dances, looks as though some one had rubbed in a handful of mud. I don't say your hands are dirty, but I would advise you to wear a glove on that hand. If you do not have one, the young lady would rather lend you hers than have her dress spoiled. Take the advice of one who has heard the complaints of mothers, and you will have better parties."

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's "[illegible]" bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1850—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

WILD CHERRY!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR
TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.
Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.
AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brainy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; and hair re-grows with lively expression, falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.
As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.
R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded, Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!
This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.
Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.
By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.
As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.
Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."
BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,
FOR THE WHISKERS.
This elegant preparation may be relied on to change Gray Hair or the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and efficiently produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

The Massachusetts Senate has voted, 23 to 9, to abolish the State constabulary, and the House will probably concur. As the enforcement of the laws will devolve upon the city and town authorities, and the Governor of the State can command their assistance in the execution of criminal process, the people of the old Bay State may congratulate themselves that they are to be rid of a system which directly encourages "black mail," and which is no improvement on the police regulations of other States.

Senator Ferry of Connecticut, who has five years to serve, is so ill that it is probable he will never return to the Senate again. The democrats, who aided in electing him two years ago over the regular republican nominee, Gen. The method recommended by the commission is as follows: That a workhouse be established, with commitments long enough to make the labor remunerative, and the discipline reformatory.

Some of the Western roads are using this invention, it is said, with success.

TERRIBLE CALAMITY

In Western Massachusetts.

Bursting of the Goshen Dam!

MILL OPERATORS SWEPT TO THEIR DEATH.

Three Towns Laid Waste.

200 LIVES LOST!

DETAILS OF THE DISASTER.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., May 16.

The large reservoirs about Williamsburg, Mass., constructed to supply the manufactories of Williamsburg, Leeds and Haydensville, gave way early this morning. The water is sweeping everything before it. The above-named towns were almost entirely destroyed, including such buildings as Hayden, Gere & Co's brick factory. A large loss of life is reported, but at present it is impossible to give any reliable estimate, though the number is probably not less than one hundred.

FLORENCE, MASS., May 16.

The resorvoirs above Williamsburg, Mass., broke this morning, loosening a large volume of water, which carried away nearly every dwelling house in its course; many lives are lost, but the excitement is so great that it is impossible to get the exact number. At Leeds, the silk mill and button shop, were both carried away; the station agent of the N. H. & N. Co., with his wife, were both drowned. At the same place many persons were swept down the stream. The water is now falling, and it is expected that more definite particulars may be soon obtained. Several bodies were seen going down stream, but so fast was the current that they could not be recovered. The villages which are affected by the disaster are Williamsburg, Haydensville, Leeds and Florence, and are situated on Mill river, which is a tributary of the Connecticut, running into the latter at Northampton. A private dispatch from Williamsburg says there is not a house left standing. The reservoirs referred to were used to supply the towns in the dry season, and were three in number, situated three, eight and ten miles respectively from Haydensville; and their bursting was probably caused by the heavy rain of last night. The factory is a large woolen establishment. Another report received from Springfield states that seventy lives were lost; and a still later report is that the water is subsiding. The Monotuck silk mill at Leeds is partially swept away.

Another account says: The Goshen reservoir, fourteen miles from Northampton, covering about one hundred and twenty-five acres, gave way Saturday morning about eight o'clock, its waters sweeping through Williamsburg, Haydensville, Leeds, Florence, and Northampton.

At Leeds all the factories save the silk mill have gone. The smaller buildings of the Critchlow Button Works were washed away and the employes fled to the brick mill for safety, when that, with some sixty inmates, was carried into the whirlpool of water.

Mr. F. Quigley, one of the Selectmen of Northampton, lost his wife and child, and Mr. Vaughan, Station Agent, in trying to save other lives, lost his own.

The river running through Northampton tells the story of devastation above in floating pianos, household furniture, and bodies of cows and horses. A general gloom rests upon Northampton, so closely linked to these towns by friendly and business ties.

The water came rushing down the hills, carrying everything before it.

It struck the southeastern portion of Williamsburg village about two miles north of Haydensville, carrying away a large number of dwellings; thence to Skinnersville where it swept away Skinner's large silk mills and his boarding and dwelling houses.

Continuing on it struck the large brass manufactory of Hayden, Gere & Co., sweeping it away in an instant. Large stones and machinery were swept through the main streets at a fearful rate, and well built houses instantly crushed, not giving the inmates a moment's warning.

The flood then struck the village of Leeds where a large number of shops, dwellings, etc., were swept away. The loss of life was very heavy, whole families in some instances having been carried away over dams and either killed or drowned.

It is impossible at this time to give the number of lives lost. Twenty-three bodies were taken out of the rubbish on shore.

Whole blocks of tenement houses filled with women and children were swept down stream and all lost.

Among those drowned at Williamsburg was the wife of H. C. Frost. At Leeds Capt. Vaughan and Mrs. H. F. Quigley and daughter were in a house which was swept away, and were drowned. Reports are coming in of far greater loss of life at Florence.

The Monotuck Silk Company's works, and the Florence Manufacturing Company's works are damaged $25,000.

Conductor E. M. Chandler passed over the road early Saturday morning from Williamsburg for New Haven, just ahead of the flood that swept away his wife and child.

Engineer Roberts, who was to start out on the next train, lost his wife and child.

Just below Williamsburg the flood swept away Skinner's factory with several women operatives who had just begun work.

At Haydensville Samuel Miller lost his wife and three children.

The heaviest loss by this disaster, which will reach millions, will fall upon the estate of the late ex-Governor Hayden, who died a few months since. One of the mills has recently been sold by the estate.

[Special dispatch to the Chronicle.]
BOSTON, May 17, 5 o'clock, P. M.

A Northampton dispatch says the flood proves to be the most appalling thing of the kind known in the history of New England. Owing to the intense excitement which still prevails here and cutting of communication with distant parts of the scene of disaster by washing away of roads and bridges, it is impossible to obtain full reliable details. It is now certain that two hundred lives have been lost, the greater part being entire families.

The total loss will foot up one million dollars, on which there is no insurance. About one hundred bodies have been recovered already. Some were found down stream on Northampton meadow near where Mill River empties into the Connecticut. The bodies generally are found in a shocking condition, stripped naked by the floating objects with which they have come in contact in the water, and horribly mangled.

Large numbers of the bodies are found beneath piles of ruins and driftwood; others in the meadows imbeded in the deep mud left by the water. All day Sunday, men with carts have been searching for the dead, and the stark naked bodies have been piled on the carts like so much cord wood.

The scene all along the valley is one of unconsolable desolation. Where was yesterday a lovely spring landscape and prosperous busy villages, to-day stretches nothing but horrible ruin. In the public places here are posted notices calling upon able-bodied men to go to the scene and assist in searching for bodies.

Northampton is full of visitors. Hardly anything has been heard from Williamsburg as yet, owing to the destruction of the bridges, but it is believed to be a total wreck. Skinnersville is entirely swept away; only three houses are standing in Leeds and these are on high ground; comparatively little damage is done at Florence; the greater part of Haydensville is destroyed; Bay State Village is slightly injured. The wildest excitement prevails among the people of the stricken locality. Many have come here to search for missing friends and the most painful outbursts of grief are witnessed every hour. Some have actually lost their reason, overwhelmed by the sudden and terrible visitation.

The horrors of the disaster are not yet half told, and when all is known a terrible story will be revealed. Assistance has been proffered from many quarters, Many survivors are in utter destitution. As far as heard from fifteen bridges are gone, twelve factories and seventy-five dwellings swept away, and several hundred people left homeless.

The water has greatly receded, in many places disappeared altogether. The reservoir was considered extremely insecure. Water had been leaking through the embankment and at six o'clock on Saturday morning the watchman was terrified to find its weak support giving away and a mighty torrent of water pouring out. Hastily mounting a horse he drove with speed to Williamsburg, shouting to every one to flee for their lives, as the torrent would soon be upon them. His horse was so urged beyond his strength that he dropped dead in the streets of Williamsburg. Procuring another horse he dashed on to Skinnersville, spreading dismay in every direction. Tearing down to the little village he shouted the tidings to William Skinner, proprietor of the silk mills, who instantly gave the alarm by ringing the bell of his factory as for a fire. His operatives rushing out were told to run for their lives to the hills which surrounded the village., They had scarcely time to do so ere the floods swept away everything before it.

At Leeds the first intimation received of the impending disaster was a terrific roaring. In an instant down came the torrent. At first no water was visible, but a wall of drift-wood, thirty feet high and several hundred feet wide, was seen sweeping down the valley, at the rate of twenty miles an hour. Women and children rushed out of doors only to be swallowed up by the flood. This (Sunday) afternoon sixty-eight bodies lie in the church. The scene of disaster has been visited by thousands during the afternoon but the sights were of such harrowing nature that the sternest and stoutest were glad to retire from the sickening spectacle.

The Haydensville Savings Bank building, containing four or five hundred thousand dollars, was swept down the stream and has not been seen since. In all the churches here to-day, as well as Springfield, and other near places, services appropriate to the terrible calamity were observed and the day is one of general mourning in the whole valley. The appeals for aid are being promptly responded to.

By to-morrow there will be obtainable a full and accurate list of the property destroyed by the flood and also the names of the missing and the dead. Many bodies however are not recognizable, but may be known by their apparel. Gov. Talbot has been in the valley of death all day aiding with all his power the afflicted and counselling with friends. The Governor, who married a daughter of the late Joel Hayden, for whom the village of Haydensville is named, was on a visit to the place, Friday.

For the foregoing dispatches we are indebted to the kindness of Mr. Lawson, of the Boston Globe.

—The way they reproduce in Paris their birth, death and marriage registers, burned in the Palace of Justice during the Commune, is curious enough. They remain in their original shape, but charred completely. The back is cut off, the mass wetted and exposed to the mouth of a stove. The water evaporating raises the sheets, and the writing stands out in black upon dull black, like the silken flowers on velvet brocade. It is easily deciphered and copied, with a note stating that is reproduced from the carbonized original.

Put the System in Fighting Tune.

The great object in cases of indigestion and its accompanying derangements of the liver, bowels and nerves, is to put the stomach in a condition to dissolve, readily and without pain, the food submitted to its action. This is accomplished, and much more than this, by the daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. A dose should be taken before every meal. The good effect will soon be apparent. The loss of flesh, strength and energy which usually occurs in dyspepsia will be arrested. The determination of bile to the skin will cease, and that cathartic fluid will pass into the bowels and assist in keeping them free. Every organ connected with or dependent upon the stomach will be toned and renovated. The kidneys, the sifters of the system, will be beneficially influenced, as well as the liver, the alimentary canal, and the pores. Thus all the whole organization will be put in the fighting trim necessary to resist and expel disease. If the medicine is taken regularly and persistently, this result will inevitably follow.

Either Sick or Well, most people relish a cup of Broma. The difficulty of obtaining it in its purity has prevented its universal use. The Medal of Merit at the Vienna Exposition was awarded that put up by Walter Baker & Co., Boston, as strictly pure, and their business is so extensive that their goods may be obtained almost anywhere.

The Ne plus Ultra.—Everybody likes to see a well dressed head of hair, but no lady or gentleman can dress their hair with perfect satisfaction without the use of BERANGER. Its name is exquisite; it gives to the hair a glossy rich appearance.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. s29 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. The Reader, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

It acts upon both the liver and kidneys, and is justly entitled to the Great Diuretic. Get the genuine. All druggists sell it.

THE "LIGHT RUNNING"

"DOMESTIC"

KING OF SEWING Machines.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

It affords me great pleasure to be able to announce to my friends (and to all others interested,) that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Company has fully resumed the manufacture of its UNRIVALLED MACHINE, and will expand its business with increased energy. Its new factories will soon be completed, and every machine will be as nicely constructed as possible. All who have used the Machine for four years or less, pronounce it

THE LIGHTEST RUNNING,
EASIEST TO KEEP IN ORDER,
THE MOST DURABLE,

—AND DECIDEDLY—

The Nearest to Perfection

of any Sewing Machine in the market. It is the intention to have the

"DOMESTIC" SEWING MACHINE

Supercede all others in this City and Vicinity.

—THE—

"DOMESTIC" SEWING MACHINE

—IS THE—

"Best Machine to Use,"

—AND THE—

EASIEST TO SELL.

IT IS DURABLE

AND WILL LAST A LIFE-TIME.

Every Machine

I sell is warranted to be all I claim for it, and a

Written Guarantee

WILL BE GIVEN TO PURCHASERS IF DESIRED.

ALL MACHINES ARE FURNISHED—WITHOUT EXTRA CHARGE—WITH CASTORS, A HEMMER AND FELLER, QUILTING GAUGE, BRAIDER, THUMB-SCREW AND GAUGE, A DOZEN OF ASSORTED NEEDLES, HALF A DOZEN BOBBINS, WRENCH, SCREW DRIVER, OILER, BOTTLE OF OIL AND BOOK OF INSTRUCTIONS.

THE "DOMESTIC" WILL

Hem, Fell,
Bind, Braid,
Cord, Quilt,
Tuck, Ruffle,
Embroider, Gather,

AND SEW ON AT THE SAME TIME.

THE GATHERING ATTACHMENT

As applied to the "DOMESTIC" is made on an

ENTIRELY NEW PRINCIPLE.

No other Machine in the United States having any thing for this purpose that can be compared with this late invention. It is applied directly to the presser bar, and is operated by the movements of the Needle Bar.

ITS ACTIONS ARE POSITIVE—ITS MOTIONS PERFECT.

As some of my friends, connected with the sale of other kinds of sewing machines, have interested themselves so much during the past winter as to falsely represent that the "Domestic" S. M. Co. had failed, and that there could be no parts obtained for the "Domestic" Needles, etc., etc., I will state that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Co. has been making steady progress from the first, and as to parts of the machine, needles, etc., being obtained, I keep them constantly on hand. But although the "Domestic" where it has been sold may be run "from morn until eve" without tiring the operator. We have had scarcely any call for extra parts and are pleased to state that we have not so much business in that way as some of our neighbors. If however any one owning a "Domestic" should in any manner be disaffected, all matters will be made right by calling at my office. I will further state that as heretofore I shall keep on hand all kinds of

SEWING MACHINE NEEDLES,
TUCKERS,
GATHERERS,
EMBROIDERERS,
HEMMERS,
BRAIDERS,
CORDERS,
ETC., ETC., ETC.

Local Matters.

Louisiana.

The subscriptions in this city for the Louisiana sufferers foot up more than $1500,—a very creditable contribution from a city of the size of Portsmouth. The following letter explains itself:

WM. S. HAZEL, Esq.,
Clerk Kearsarge Engine Co. No. 3,
Portsmouth, N. H.

Dear Sir: Your favor of May 1st in behalf of Kearsarge Engine Co. No. 3, Portsmouth, N. H., enclosing check on the National Hide and Leather Bank of Boston, Mass., for eighty-five dollars ($85) is at hand and has been paid over to the chairman of Relief Committee for the suffering citizens of this afflicted State. Please accept through me the thanks of the many sufferers for your kindness and generosity, and please convey the same to your Company,—and I remain,

Most respectfully yours,
PETER MARCY.

NEW ORLEANS, May 9.

Portsmouth Ships.

Ship "Witch of the Wave," 1100 tons register, has been sold at Hamburg, Germany, for £7125. This ship was built here and was the second one of the same name launched from the same yard. The first one was built by the late George Raynes, Esq., in 1851, for Glidden & Williams of Boston, and was disposed of by that firm at a profit, to go under a foreign flag; she registered 1499 tons, and was a magnificent ship. The second "Witch of the Wave" was built by George Raynes & Son, (the business of George Raynes, Sr., having been continued under that firm-name after his decease, by his son,) in 1856, for parties in Newburyport, and was the last ship built by that firm, American shipbuilding at that time just beginning to feel the decadence from which we hope it is now recovering. The price paid for her in her old age is evidence of the faithful workmanship and good material put into her. The fine ship "Jean Ingelow" was built at the Raynes yard more recently, by Mr. William F. Fernald, who has turned out a number of other vessels well worthy their birthplace, and has now on the stocks a splendidly-built three-masted schooner, which will be put into the water before many weeks.

That Old Bored of Overseers.

[Journal.]

I have had too many newspaper discussions in my day to either court or fear them now; but as those Poor Overseers of last year still keep harping on their string of grievances, I believe I will ask space for another rejoinder. They plead inexperience as newspaper contributors, and say they "did not begin this discussion;" but their chairman, who very naturally is supposed to have written their cards, though he does not sign them, seems as fond of public post mortem examinations and exhibitions of his administration as coroners are of inquests, and as loth to let go the local helm of state as he was eager to clutch it. But with the load of debt and taxation entailed on the city during his term, there is little danger it will soon be forgotten. I certainly did not begin it. Let us see. The Times, I was told, contained an article (doubtless emanating from the late Board) censuring the new Overseers and especially the new Mayor. My attention was invited to it, and I declined to read it or make any reply; but the editors of the CHRONICLE as public journalists, saw fit to respond, and I answered their questions according to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Then the late Overseers stated in the Journal that the "new Mayor" had cut off somebody's pittance—which was false, and in my reply I said so, and I think I proved it.

The old Overseers say they "wasted no time in attempts to throw discredit upon the gentlemen who preceded them." They were fortunate in having gentlemen precede them who did not attempt to control affairs after their term of office had expired. I neither "attacked their administration" nor ever said store-keepers should not be Overseers or Commissioners, though many others have said so.

"Being store-keepers" ought to enable the Overseers to sell cheaper to the city, not dearer; and the bills for the city and county do not seem to show that the Commissioners' buying and the late Overseers' selling "amounts to the same thing," for turkeys at Thanksgiving cost the city 23 cts., while the County got them for 19; beef fully as good was sold to the County for $13 per bbl. as that the city paid $20 for; molasses, same quality, County 36 cts., city 45, and so on.

Of course, Overseers are entitled to the trade, "when they can furnish goods to the city as cheap as their neighbors," but how about one dealer charging one or two cents more per pound than the others, for the large quantity of meat furnished on the Fourth of July, for another instance? Of course "the more people at Brentwood, the more the Commissioners will have to buy;" and the more they buy, the cheaper they expect to buy; and the law fixes their pay, the judges of the S. J. Court must approve their bills, and the County auditors (last year Charles Robinson, Esq., being one,) must certify that all goods were furnished at market rates, and used for the benefit of the County; while the Overseers audit their own bills, and seem to have made their own prices.

No public injury has yet been shown to result from one of the Commissioners being also Superintendent of the Farm, but rather a considerable saving; nor is it in proof so far as I know, that the Commissioners have "done a thriving business" at the County's expense. Can the late Overseers say as much, in regard to the city?

The Commissioners regret that there are not, as there should be, wholesale merchants in Portsmouth, to supply all needs of the County. They buy nothing outside the County, unless they can procure it very much cheaper than at home; but the above result with the staple article of beef, and the turkey item, do not seem to be encouraging in this direction.

Is it just to the tax-paying public, that Commissioners or Overseers make their purchases from retail dealers at retail prices, merely for the benefit of those dealers, when they can buy at wholesale in Boston as low as the retail dealers themselves? And if it is advisable or necessary to do this, for due encouragement of home trade, then why does not the same rule hold good in regard to said public officers purchasing their own store supplies from retail dealers here at home, or from the wholesale merchants the old Overseers state we have?

There is a tradition at the County farm that under a different superintendent and another Board of Commissioners, a lot of turkeys, somehow accepted by a Commissioner, were sent up there by a dealer who has since been a very tender-hearted Overseer: which were indignantly ordered (though I believe not sent) back by one of the heartless Commissioners, as unfit even for county paupers to eat—in fact, smelling as rank actually, as the recent transaction in the same line does metaphorically.

And some envious people now are really uncharitable enough to hint,—mind, I do not say it—that the latter, high flying, famous, not to say infamous, Thanksgiving birds were part of a large lot which had become a drug on somebody's hands. The Overseers say they "Paid the current price" for the turkeys; no doubt of it—and why in the name of common fairness didn't they sell for the current price?

The sick should be well cared for, and the dead decently buried; but notwithstanding the popular unfortunate fashion for lavishing on the dead money often needed for surviving families or friends,—with a hearse and horses owned by the city, a pauper burial should not cost one-half of $28.

The late Overseers allude to "the gentleman who finds fault with their policy." I certainly never alluded to them except to reply to their attacks on me and the County Commissioners, in the papers, and then and now only to defend our own public policy and that of the Overseers.

The Commissioners feel competent to manage their own affairs, under the law, as sworn officers; and "the fact that the care of the county poor is vested in them," it would seem ought to "relieve the city from most of the cost of their support;" and I fail to see the object of the costly and comfortable city and county almshouses, unless it be to provide homes for the poor, where they may not only "keep starvation at bay," but enjoy abundance.

The Commissioners never ordered the Overseers to starve or neglect anybody; nor did they ever evince any displeasure toward the Overseers. On the contrary, though the decision of pauper matters is left to the discretion of the Commissioners without ready appeal therefrom, and although the Overseers had failed to comply with their requests and suggestions, the Commis-oners paid the entire large bill presented by the Overseers, though by so doing their own accounts will show greatly to the Commissioners' disadvantage and as much in favor for the Overseers.

It is to be hoped that if any gentleman proposes a new policy to the new Board of Overseers, they will examine before condemning it, and adopt it if they deem it better than the old one.

The Commissioners desiring to reduce the amount of county expense in the city, visited many of the county charges, and in several cases decided that they had better be removed to the farm. The Commissioners differed with the Overseers as to the value of some "homes"—the Commissioners deeming it the soundest economy to break up rather than help sustain with the public funds, the housekeeping where dirt, vermin, squalor and liquor as well as want were evident or probable. If by refusing to heed their advice, the Overseers cost the city and county each a thousand dollars more than was necessary last year, they are welcome to all the satisfaction they can derive from it.

Portsmouth, paying so large a proportion of the County tax, has ever been liberally treated by the Commissioners; and it is for the mutual interest of all, that the city and county officials should cooperate to promote efficiency and economy in the public business; and to do this, there is no need or desire to neglect or oppress the poor; while remembering that many tax-payers are far from rich, and that the needs rather than the wishes of paupers are to be considered.

Yours truly, for the poor always,
FRANK W. MILLER,
Chairman of Overseers and Co. Com.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's outlooked back at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island. &c.
The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, as about 1850—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.
Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

"Boston Drummers."

[Terhune's Independent.]

What a volume of words there is in the title of this article, and what stories and tales could be written of this wandering tribe (trial it should be called). What man, woman, or child is there, but would shun a Boston Drummer, as soon as they would get out of the way of some venomous reptile? Not one. Hold! We have made a mistake, a sad mistake, for our mind was conjecturing the feelings of the male population. We forgot the girls, and were we asked to repeat our insinuation again we would say, what girl is there (we were just on the point of saying male or female,)—but again,—what girl is there who would shun a Boston Drummer? Now we can confidently say, not one, for the pride of the 'Drummers' are the girls of the town, and the pride of the girls is a Boston Drummer. Do any of the readers of the Independent doubt this? If so, let them go down to the depot upon the arrival of most any train, watch that young man with a satchel in his hand alight from the smoking car, see him pass his baggage check to the hackman, and the young man,—he always walks. You seldom see him ride. Ha! there goes his handkerchief,—a smile, a wink, and a nod. You look, and behold all these movements are for the benefit of some good-looking miss. Go to any hotel, and you will see the "drummer" smoking cigars, and having a good time generally, and—all at his employer's expense. This is a queer world we live in, and queer things happen. We most all of us believe in a mild and warm climate for the departed, but when a Boston Drummer "shuffles off," it will be the last of him—we hope.

—Sam Jones lived up in Orange County. Now Sam was an enormous eater, and it happened that he was one day hauling a load of "shook" to the nearest village, when his team was stuck in a sand hill. Well, did Sam fret and scold his oxen or unload his team? Not he. He very coolly took down his dinner from the load, sat down and ate it, when his oxen started off with the rest of the load without further trouble.

—An Italian jury recently acquitted a prisoner on a most ingenious plea. A tax collector of Naples absconded with public money amounting to two hundred thousand dollars. He was caught, brought back and tried, but the jury acquitted him because the money he had stolen was the people's money, and, as he was one of the people, he was part owner of that money, and of course it would be monstrous to convict a man of stealing what was his own.

FIFTY PER CENT.

SAVED.

No power is so costly as that of human muscle, and fifty per cent. of the power required to run a Sewing Machine may be saved by using the

"DOMESTIC."

— IT MAKES THE —

with the least and most simple machinery of any SHUTTLE Sewing Machine. It, therefore, WEARS LESS than any other, and combines, with its remarkable simplicity and ease of running, great quietness of operation with a wonderful range of work. Don't fail to examine it.

HENDERSON & CO.,

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

— OF —

Bonnets, Hats,
Flowers and
Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed.

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

SASH RIBBONS, - - - - - - - 25 cents per yard.
SILK TIES - - - - - - - - - 20 cents each.
FRAMES - - - - - - - - - - 15 cents each.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR
TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.
Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them include it to shed prematurely.
AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both its hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair is restored, or re-grown with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.
As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

Care of Team Horses.

The following advice to teamsters has been published in the form of a poster, and sent out by the Massachusetts society for the prevention of cruelty to animals. It is endorsed by several veterinary surgeons, and agents of railway and express companies:

1. A driver should see that care is taken of his horse in the stable, by being well fed with wholesome food, of cracked corn and oats, with plenty of good hay. Potatoes or carrots may be given once or twice a week to good advantage. See that he is kept clean, warm and comfortable, with plenty of bedding. A piece of rock salt should always be left in the manger.

2. He should see that his harness is kept soft and clean, particularly the inside of the collar, which ought always to be smooth, as the perspiration, when dry, causes irritation, and is liable to produce galls on the shoulder. The collar should fit closely, with space enough at the bottom to admit a man's hand. If too large, it has the bad effect of drawing the shoulders together. On no consideration should a team, or any work horse be compelled to wear a martingale, as it draws the head down, and prevents him from getting into an easy and natural position. The check-rein may be used, but only tight enough to keep the head in a natural position, and it should never be wound around the hames. See that the hames are buckled tight enough at the top to bring the draught iron near the centre of the collar. If too low, it not only interferes with the action of the shoulders, but gives the collar an uneven bearing. Caution should be taken that the girt is not buckled too tight, particularly on string teams, for when the traces are straightened, it has a tendancy to draw the girt against the belly, and distress the horse.

3. See that the horse is kept well shod with a good stiff shoe, always calked at toe and heel on the hind feet, as it is there where all the propelling power comes from when heavily loaded. Keep the feet good and strong, by not allowing them to be cut away too much by the blacksmith.

4. The best of judgment should be used in loading, taking into consideration the condition of the streets, and the distance to be traveled. Never overload, for by so doing you only distress, strain and discourage your horse, and do him more injury than you can possibly gain by carrying the extra load. When your load is hard to pull, stop often and give your horse a chance to breathe. No good driver will ever resort to the cruel practice of whipping or beating his horse. A light whip may be carried, but there is seldom use for it. Much more can be accomplished by kind treatment and good judgment. Remember the horse is a very intelligent, proud, sensitive, noble animal, the most useful kind of man, and is deserving of the greatest kindness.

—Canadians drank over eighteen million gallons of intoxicating liquors last year—over four gallons and a half to each man, woman, and child.

—And says she: "Well, if you haven't any time, and must go over to the store, you needn't beat the carpet. I suppose we can live like pigs for a month longer as well as not."

—Among the many letters being published, written by Dr. Livingstone, is one in the N. Y. Herald in which he writes of events that did not happen until months after he was dead.

—Put on your right glove first, stupid. Then you have your left hand ungloved to button your right wrist. If you put on your left glove first, you have to button your right glove under double disadvantage.

—John Green is strictly a self-made man. He went to Omaha without a cent. By industry and enterprise he won $10,000 in a three days' game of poker. Having got his hand in he emigrated to Chicago, invested in faro, and was worth $30,000 at the last accounts. But that was two or three days ago.

—The whirligig of time has been at work down South turning things upside down, until now a North Carolina editor tells of what he calls "a case of peculiar horror" in Charlotte, where a white woman, whose husband was killed in the Confederate service, is now serving in a colored family as cook, and her girl ten years old as scullion. Well, this is hard, sure enough, but there is one comfort in it—probably the white "help" gets paid something.

—A. P. Cole, of Whitesville, Alleghany county, New York, one of the largest and most successful trout raisers in the country, writes to the Rural New Yorker: "I have something so strange and curious that I cannot help telling you of it. I have a young brook trout, hatched this year at our trout ponds, and now two months old, the same having two heads, both perfect, with gills and eyes, and only one body. The heads join just in front of the back fin, and the spine can be seen where it unites. Each part of the young fish is as perfect before it unites in the body as any fish I have. It breathes in both mouths, and I have seen both eating at one time. Very often it will start for a bit of food, and then each head will try to get it, just as much as though it were two fish. It is as healthy as any fish hatched this spring, of which I have several thousands."

The Massachusetts Flood.

The manufacturing villages desolated by the flood are situated in the towns of Williamsburg and Northampton,—Williamsburg, Skinnersville and Haydenville in the former, and Leeds, Florence and Bay State Mills in the latter. The river in the summer being subject to severe droughts, the volume of water has been kept uniform by two great reservoirs, the Goshen and the Williamsburg. The valley of the river is peculiar in conformation, being very narrow, and in no place much over six hundred feet wide on the level. In places, as at Skinnerville and Leeds, it is extremely narrow, being little more than a defile between two hills. The river is liable to sudden freshets, and owing to its narrow valley rises to a great height. Along its banks were located numerous manufacturing establishments in which was invested a capital estimated at $5,000,000, and with which about five thousand people were connected directly or indirectly. The Williamsburg reservoir has always been considered unsafe and in times of flood has been thought of with apprehension by the dwellers in the valley. A young gentleman in Haydenville told a reporter that two years ago at the time of a heavy rain his father would permit none of the family to go to bed, but kept them up with lights burning all night, so great was his apprehension concerning the reservoir. The population of the valley lived continuously along the banks of the river, there being but little distinction between the several villages. Most of the houses were built on the level portion of the valley, which, where there were no buildings, formed small but very fertile meadows.

The Williamsburg reservoir was two miles beyond the village, and at an altitude above it of not less than 300 feet. It had an area of 104 acres and was made by damming up a valley between two steep mountains. The dam was about 400 feet long on the top and was 45 feet wide at the bottom and sloping gradually to the top. It consisted of an embankment of ordinary gravel, in the centre of which rose a wall of masonry, —ordinary rubble stone laid in water-proof cement. This wall was four feet wide at the base and tapered wedge-like to almost a point at the top. At the bottom and through the centre of the dam extended a fifteen inch iron pipe, something like fifty feet long. Through this pipe was let the water which kept up the supply in the river. There was a gate in this tube which regulated the supply. The waste water ran out of the reservoir at the top through a sluiceway on the right, close to which was the gate-keeper's house. The great defect seems to have been in the wall of masonry at the dam, and also in its width and materials. This wall, it now appears, was laid on the solid rock-bed on the west side, but on the east the foundation was several feet higher, and appeared to be laid on nothing but the natural gravel. It was here that the water was first seen breaking through at the bottom, and here that the wall was undermined. Here was the fatal error of the construction, though the dam has generally been considered unsafe.

A reporter who visited the ruins of the dam, says the feature that most impresses one about the ruins is the smallness of the stone wall, when compared with the immense extent of water which the reservoir held. This wall was understood to be eight feet thick at the base. Upon measuring a section of it, however, as it stood intact ten feet above the bed of the stream, I found that it lacked about three inches of being six feet across. The upper part of the wall, as one looks across the chasm at what remains of it on the eastern side, cannot fail to strike the average observer, possessing only the information and judgment of common sense, as seriously lacking in throughness and stability, without applying the tests which an expert in such matters will doubtless soon put to it. A spectator from the opposite bank can hardly restrain the judgement of "flimsy" as he views the upper portion of the wall, and the general impression from an inspection of the wall, as a whole, is that it lacked the strength which so great a strain demanded.

Mr. Lewis Bodman, a life-long and well-known resident of Williamsburg, and for many years connected with its manufacturing interests, a gentleman thoroughly familiar with the reservoir, which he helped to pay for, being at that time the owner of the James mill, has been interviewed by a reporter of the Springfield Republican, and gave his opinions with great frankness. He says that the proprietors were not satisfied with the reservoir when it was built, and felt that it was not safe. Mr. Bodman accompanied the late Lieutenant-Governor Hayden when the reservoir was first filled, which was not till the spring of 1866, and says that they both expected to see it go off at that first trial. It manifested no special weakness, however, and at different times subsequently it was strengthened, the most important operation and one of the more recent being the "rip-rapping." Mr. Bodman, however, confesses that he never felt quite satisfied with the reservoir during the three years of its history when he was mill proprietor and so part owner of it.

George C. Cheney, the keeper of the reservoir for two and a half years back, says he has always considered the dam dangerous; but that last Spring, when he told Mr. Dimmock, the president of the company, that the dam showed signs of weakness, he almost abused me for suggesting such a thing. Now any one can see that where the leak started was nothing but a mess of quicksand." Mr. Cheney's father first discovered the water flowing under the dam, between 6 and 7 o'clock, and the keeper at once turned on a full head of water, but too late to be of any service. He then galloped to Skinnersville, where a milkman named Collins Graves took up the alarm and drove at a furious rate to Haydensville, shouting a warning as he went, reaching the village two minutes ahead of the flood, man and horse being completely exhausted. Here another herald took up the tidings and Graves turned aside, being barely able to get his tired horse out of the way of the flood.

Mr. James (proprietor of the woolen mill) and his foreman, Henry Birmingham, lost their lives while trying to escape from the mill. Mr. Birmingham's whole family was also lost, as was that of Mr. Johnson. Among the sad incidents is that of seven young girls who climbed into an apple tree, thinking it would stand, but were all swept away. The body of a little child four years old was found with a pair of new shoes in her hand. In the toes of the shoes were found four twenty dollar bills, which the mother had probably tried to save.

Mr. Jerome Hillman heard the Williamsburg bells ringing and then the fearful rush of water sounded in his ears. He jumped on horseback and ran at full speed toward Haydenville. He looked behind and the air seemed to be full of flying timber, great trees turning end for end—now their enormous roots were in the air and then their trunks and branches whirling round. At the top of a perpendicular wall of water advancing down the valley thirty feet high were seen houses and barns turning over. He reached Haydenville and warned the hands in the brass shops, who all escaped safely.

At Leeds the residents received no warning, their first intimation of danger being the roar of the flood and the sight of the advancing wall of wreck-stuff. Forty-five lives were lost here, at the lowest estimate. One little boy floated down the flood to Leeds on a board from somewhere above. Luckily he steered for a little knoll not yet covered, and throwing away his board he climbed to the highest point of the knoll. Still the water rose, and only a spot as large as a table remained when the water reached its greatest height and the plucky little fellow was saved.

A correspondent of the Advertiser says that in Williamsburg, where the flood began, the signs of ruin are most horrible. At the empty reservoir are seen the jagged walls of the dam. Below for a thousand feet or more the bed of the stream is gouged out in chasms to a depth of thirty feet. Beyond, acres of woodland have entirely disappeared, leaving not a trace behind. For miles the fertile meadows have been destroyed, and can never be regained. They are gouged and gullied and completely covered with sand and gravel and embedded with massive rocks, many of them weighing over a ton apiece. About a third of the village has been destroyed, the flood having cut a broad swath through the place, carrying houses down the stream. The river just below the meeting of the two branches has changed its course, leaving its old bed, and has spread out over the entire meadows, where it is now running between great boulders. In this typical New England village the contrast between prosperity and misery, beauty and desolation, is sharp and sudden; from tasteful cottages, smooth lawns and blooming flowers, one steps into scenes of deepest woe, where the scarred and seamed ground, great shapeless masses of splinters which were once houses, or houses half destroyed, with their sides torn out or upside down, are in place of the prosperity of Saturday morning.

A catastrophe strikingly similar in its causes, circumstances and results occurred near Sheffield, Eng., a little more than ten years ago (March 11, 1864) when the dam of a great reservoir at Bradfield gave way under the pressure of water caused by the spring thaw and rains. In the dead of night the flood swept away its barrier and rushed down a valley filled with factories, forges and the houses of the operatives. "A populous district," said the London News, "was almost obliterated from the face of the earth. Solid and substantial buildings, workshops, rows of houses, bridges, everything that opposed the course of the flood yielded before its overwhelming might as though they were built of paper. Sheffield and the country for twelve or fifteen miles miles around were deluged, the meadows were covered with mud and strewed with debris and the bodies of the dead. Two hundred and fifty persons lost their lives, and the damage to property was estimated at £327,000.

Spanish affairs are unsettled as ever. General Concha is approaching the river Ebro. His headquarters will be transferred to Miranda, whither stores and reserves are being forwarded. The country was found to be rich in minerals, and could be held by three hundred determined men.

Andy Johnson, the eagle enlisted in Missouri near the close of the war by a Wisconsin regiment, died a few days ago. A Madison paper says he was about thirteen years old, and was an ornament in the capital city. "Old Abe," the native Wisconsin war eagle, looks bright, and by his appearance he will yet live for many years. The other bird was not so brave and courageous, probably because he never went through a war, as did "Old Abe."

A Mrs. Dracott has just been arrested at Covington, Neb. It is charged that, in connection with one Thomas Carter, she, while living in Oregon, hired two physicians to swear that her husband was insane, and by this means caused him to be confined in the insane asylum in that State, for about twelve years. Dracott, at the time of his confinement, was worth $95,000, and it is alleged that Carter and Mrs. Dracott, by this means, obtained possession of the property and left. Carter was arrested on his way to Salt Lake. One of the physicians who made false oath is dead and the other one is under arrest. The Government has spent $10,000 in ferreting out the matter.

A jury in London has brought in a verdict censuring the use of a sample of burnt almonds in confectionery. The evidence is that these almonds were bitter, and that when steeped in water they yielded prussic acid. The question is now raised whether the use of bitter for sweet almonds in confectionery cannot be made a criminal offence, and prosecutions are to be instituted for that purpose.

Put the System in Fighting Tune.

The great object in cases of indigestion and its accompanying derangements of the liver, bowels and nerves, is to put the stomach in a condition to dissolve, readily and without pain, the food submitted to its action. This is accomplished, and much more than this, by the daily use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. A dose should be taken before every meal. The good effect will soon be apparent. The loss of flesh, strength and energy which usually occurs in dyspepsia will be arrested. The determination of bile to the skin will cease, and that cathartic fluid will pass into the bowels and assist in keeping them free. Every organ connected with or dependent upon the stomach will be toned and renovated. The kidneys, the sifters of the system, will be beneficially influenced, as well as the liver, the alimentary canal, and the pores. In short, the whole organization will be put in the fighting trim necessary to resist and expel disease. If the medicine is taken regularly and persistently, this result will inevitably follow.

Either Sick or Well, most people relish a cup of Broma. The difficulty of obtaining it in its purity has prevented its universal use. The Medal of Merit at the Vienna Exposition was awarded that put up by Walter Baker & Co., Boston, as strictly pure, and their business is so extensive that their goods may be obtained almost anywhere.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. ad9 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A reputation prevails that DR. ATTE does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Reader, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

THE GALAXY for June has contributions from Justin McCarthy, Albert Rhodes, Olive Logan, General Custer, Richard Grant White, Richard B. Kimball, and other clever writers. Perhaps the most attractive article in the number is Mr. Peterson's sketch of Scandinavia, which has the double merit of absolute novelty and graceful diction. Mrs. Olive Logan Sikes contributes a very interesting article upon voice-training and professional singing. It is generally supposed that the American Indian never laughs nor weeps, nor exhibits any emotion except a yearning for fire-water. In his present narrative General Custer describes scenes which fairly put the question to test. Some Indian chiefs are subjected to the most intense anxiety and mental trial, followed by excessive joy and later by an appeal to their affection as husbands and fathers.

The leading article in the new number of Harper's Monthly is by Bishop Gilbert Haven. Its title is "Our Nearest Neighbor," by which he means Mexico. It is illustrated and will be followed by others on the same subject. The second paper on "Army Organization," by General George B. McClellan, appears in this number, and Helen S. Conant continues her account of "A Naturalist in the Heart of Africa," which is illustrated. There are two illustrated poems, one "The Prisoner," by Z. B. Buddington, and the other the delightful old poem by Michael Drayton, "Nymphidia: the Court of Fairy." A fit companion to this fairy piece is the sketch by James Grant Wilson of the life and works of Joseph Rodman Drake. There are short stories by Mrs. Mulock Craik and Kate Hillard. Mr. Curtis in the "Easy Chair" sets forth with much grace and feeling the distinguishing qualities of Charles Sumner's character and statesmanship.

THE "LIGHT RUNNING"

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

It affords me great pleasure to be able to announce to my friends (and to all others interested,) that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Company has fully resumed the manufacture of its UNRIVALLED MACHINE, and will extend its business with increased energy. THE GATHERING ATTACHMENT

As applied to the "DOMESTIC" is made on an

ENTIRELY NEW PRINCIPLE.

No other Machine in the United States having any thing for this purpose that can be compared with this late invention. It is applied directly to the presser bar, and is operated by the movements of the Needle Bar.

ITS ACTIONS ARE POSITIVE—ITS MOTIONS PERFECT.

As some of my friends, connected with the sale of other kinds of sewing machines, have interested themselves so much during the past winter as to falsely represent that the "Domestic" S. M. Co. had failed, and that there could be no parts obtained for the "Domestic" Needles, etc., etc., I will state that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Co. has been making steady progress from the first, and as to parts of the machine, needles, etc., being obtained, I keep them constantly on hand. But although the "Domestic" we are it has been sold may be run "from morn until eve" without tiring the operator. We have had so-freely say call for extra parts and are pleased to state that we have not so much business in that way as some of our neighbors. If however any one owning a "Domestic" should in any manner be disaffected, all matters will be made right by calling at my office. I will further state that as heretofore I shall keep on hand all kinds of

SEWING MACHINE NEEDLES,

"Davy Crockett,"

In which Mr. Frank Mayo will appear tomorrow night, is not, (as the name might lead many to infer) a sensational, dime-novel "drama" of the "Scouts of the Prairie" order, but a play which (according to the Boston Transcript) "is neither coarse nor offensive in its language and action. There are no characters from low life, no shoulder-hitters, gamblers, or highway robbers to horrify the audience with their wicked deeds through the first four acts, and then to be instantaneously converted or comfortably shot in the fifth. The aim of the piece is to transform the brave back woodsman, Davy Crockett, into a heroic forest knight-errant, with chivalrous sense of honor that would do credit to the knights of King Arthur's round table. Mr. Mayo makes his impersonation even more than the author's ideal, his acting being as it always is, excellent."

The Poor---Some More.

Editors Chronicle:—If you will allow us a short space in your columns we will try to tranquilize the troubled soul of the Chairman of the Board of Overseers, by answering the lengthy oommunication from him which you copied from last week's Journal. One thing in that remarkable essay astonished us, and that was the admission that the same individual who was horror-stricken when he discovered that the city poor had poultry for Thanksgiving, had a hand in buying turkeys for county paupers. It appears that idea did not originate with us. If any recipient of a turkey from the old overseers can be found who will say the bird was not as good as could be bought in the market, we will believe the mean insinuation that the fowl was foul did not originate in the "they say" which is so often made use of by our critic to inflate the truth. We did not furnish any 19 ct. turkeys, neither did we buy 6 1-2 ct. beef for the use of the poor; the 45 ct. molasses gave entire satisfaction to Mr. Scott, who is as good a judge of quality and prices as either of the County officials.

We never believed in the infallibility of the Commissioners and think the tradition regarding their purchase of the rank-smelling lot of turkeys well authenticated, now it is corroborated by "they say." An exceptional case did occur last winter when the funeral expenses of the head of a large family cost $28, including coffin, hearse, grave, etc. etc. If anybody is disposed to find fault with that let them come to us and free their minds. It is not honorable to give publicity to the case in a manner implying that it was the average cost of burying those who died in poverty. We lavished no money on the dead, but gave them the benefit of clergy always, and such decent burial as the friendless children of our city are entitled to when death lays his hands upon them.

We still think our business men can furnish all the merchandise required for the legitimate uses of the county farm, as cheap as they can be procured from Boston or Manchester, if an opportunity is offered them. Let them have a fair trial; they are taxed to support the county institution and are entitled to a share at least of the patronage. If the overseers charged too large a bill to the county, why did the commissioners not refuse to pay it? They could have taken every family chargeable to the county, to Brentwood, without any opposition from us; but as they were left here we kept them from perishing with hunger and cold.

We did not consider either of the commissioners competent to give us advice as to how we should perform our duty, but gave their suggestions all the consideration that they deserved. No matter how needy paupers may be, they have some rights which even overseers are obliged to respect. We found there existed a very decided prejudice against the County House, which was not expressed against the City Almshouse. Many aged people contemplate the grave with complacency, who shudder at the bare mention of Brentwood.

A. A. Paine, John Stokell, James W. Nutter, } Overseers 1872-3 & 4.

Laconics.

Portsmouth boys are very apt to make a creditable record abroad. The Milwaukee Times in noticing the election of Mr. Winslow A. Nowell to the responsible position of secretary of the Board of Public Works of that city, says he "has served some time on the Board with credit to himself and the city, and has proved an especially active and capable official. He has given personal attention to all the business of the Board. No information was ever wanted which he has not kindly furnished, and if ever the right man was put in the right place in the government of this city that man is Mr. Nowell."

William F. O'Neill of Dover, who lately got a verdict in court setting aside the land damage award made him by the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad directors, now brings another action against the road for leaving a pile of blasted ledge on his premises.

The steamer Faraday, with the new Atlantic telegraph cable, has sailed from Gravesend, England.

Col. William H. Hackett sold fifteen shares in the National Mechanics & Traders' Bank on Monday, a part at $131.50 and the remainder at $132 per share.

Superintendent Prescott of the Eastern Railroad has resigned, and his resignation has been accepted,

Messrs. Charles H. Smith of Newmarket, and William W. Poor of Derry, County Auditors, have audited the accounts of the Rockingham County Commissioners and Treasurer. The county debt is now $107,327, having been reduced $10,000 last year.

Newspaper Advertising.

The Boston Transcript has the following timely and sensible remarks, which will be appreciated by enterprising and liberal men here, there and everywhere:

As the value of advertisements has become recognized by business men, various new plans have been tried to bring their establishments into notice. Circulars are often distributed broadcast, clocks are covered with printed cards, and mirrors with advertisements in the frames are put in public places; illustrated books have advertisements on alternate pages, large and small handbills are conspicuously posted, transparencies are lighted at night, signs are suspended across streets, men and boys covered by advertising boards are employed to parade in public. In short, every possible device has been resorted to for bringing different branches of business and special articles before the people.

No doubt many of these plans answer special purposes; but for a storekeeper, or for increasing the sale of a good article, or bringing customers for books, dry goods and groceries, houses, lands, or general merchandise such as thousands purchase, no plan of advertising, however novel, is so effective as the columns of a good newspaper, that enters thousands of homes and is read by all the members of the family. The courts recognize this; and in all cases of the sale of real estate, the appointment of administrators or guardians, and the allowance of accounts, the newspaper is selected as the only sure means of reaching interested parties.

One of our successful merchants, who was about to sail for Europe, forty years ago, left instructions to his head clerk, "Advertise liberally in the city papers, keep my name and business constantly before the class of persons who are my patrons." Scores of old merchants can be pointed out, who have retired from business with a competency, and found it greatly to their interests to advertise judiciously. Hundreds of live firms in Boston are to-day witnesses of the value of advertisements in well established papers. The uniform testimony of these men is that a newspaper is unquestionably the best medium yet devised for gaining the patronage of those who have the money to expend. In many branches of business those firms have the largest trade which most liberally patronize the press, and to some kinds of business, advertisements in newspapers are now as necessary as a stock of goods or a store.

He Likes Notoriety.

Rev. Mr. Parry, of Worcester, Mass., has more than justified the action of the Congregational Council which refused to install him. On Sunday evening, the 10th, he preached in the theatre, the title of his sermon being "Religious Bugs." This adoption of outlandish subjects has been imitated from the weakest of sensational lecturers, by still weaker and more nonsensical preachers. The purpose, of course, is to attract by the oddity and ambiguity of the topic such persons as are attracted by whatever is eccentric without the slightest regard to the importance of the subject matter offered. Mr. Parry's discourse was on a par with his title. He began by requesting those in the "nigger heaven" to keep quiet; he ridiculed the singing of the first hymn; he told old and not very decent stories; and he made fun, such as it was, of Worcester and Massachusetts. The question of creeds he considered one of the most abominable things in the church, asserting that "Christ's disciples knew no more of theological convictions and creeds when he ascended from Mount Olivet, than the man in the moon does." He announced as topics for his forthcoming series of discourses the following:

May 17th, Guzzle and Give!
do 24th, Paul's "Shoo Fly!"
do 31st, Cremation.
June 7th, Republican Locusts.
do 14th, Empty Churches and How to Fill Them.
do 21st, Main street.
do 28th, Pharaoh's Lean Kine.
July 5th, The Mad Prophet.
do 12th, "Whe's Your Hatter?"
do 19th, "Popping the Question!"
do 26th, A Tragedy in Four Acts.

—The Boston Post is hateful enough to say concerning John Whipple, Esq., a native of Rhode Island, who came out second in his walking-match with Bennett of the New York Herald, that "If he had only had more room to exercise when he was young, perhaps he might have come in first."

—A western editor says he knows of a young man who is so infatuated with his lovely young wife that he lights the candle two or three times every night to look at her. We know several young men who think just as much of their better-halves, and yet never pretend to hold a candle to them.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND
FOR SALE.
TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's Island, &c.
The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a deceased son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.
Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Birds in the Woods.

[Overland.]

One can not go far into the woods in any direction without observing what a protest all the birds utter at first. There are harsh screams, sharp notes of warning, and general scolding. Now, every bird has a great deal of curiosity to take a look at strangers. For a time they flit about in the tall tree-tops, and afterward begin to hop down to lower limbs, and gradually descending, come to the ground, or to low bushes. By remaining quiet an hour or two, a dozen or more will circle around within a few feet, turning their heads on one side occasionally, and quizzing in a saucy, merry way. In a little while one may be on intimate terms with the very birds which protested so loudly at his coming. They will tell him a great many secrets. The leaves of his book on ornithology may be a quarter of a mile square, but what can not be read on one day may be read on some other. Even an owl burrowing with a ground-squirrel, and both agreeing very well as tenants, in common with a rattlesnake, may suggest questions of affinity and community which it might be inconvenient to answer at once. If you prefer to have some readings in the book of nature, you can turn down a leaf and go back the next day with the certainty that no one has lugged off the volume. And if your finger-mark is a tree 250 feet high, there will be no great difficulty in finding the place.

—A Pittsburg firm, dealing largely in photograph cards and stereoscopic pictures, received a letter from a customer in an adjoining county in which was the following singular request; "Mr.———, living here, wants a picture of his wife. She has been dead forty-four years, was a medium-sized woman, light sandy complexion, hair a little on the dark sandy order, blue eyes, weight 140 pounds, red cheeks, and thirty-six years old when she died. Inclosed find fifty cents for the picture." This bona fide request was complied with. A picture was selected from the large assortment in stock as near the description as possible, and forwarded on. Singularly enough it proved entirely satisfactory, the simple-minded granger expressing much surprise at the marvellous inventions of the present time, and especially was he astonished at the wonderful things they could do in Pittsburg.

HENDERSON & CO.,

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

— OF —

Bonnets, Hats,
Flowers and
Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

SASH RIBBONS, ... 25 cents per yard.
SILK TIES . . . . . 20 cents each.
FRAMES . . . . . 15 cents each.

Ayer's Hair Vigor.
FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR
TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.
Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and either of them incline it to shed prematurely.
AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair re-grows with lively expression; falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.
As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft lustre and richness of tone it imparts.

TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their application in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. Cremation.

The St. Louis Globe speculates concerning the obituary of the future. We append one or two specimens:

Charles Lolley, 3 3-4 pounds; cremated July 8, 1872.

[For wife of above see third pickle bottle on next shelf.]

Little Tommy, Burnt up Sept. 16, 1862.

Jane Matilda Perkins. Oct. 3, 1869. Put up by the Alden Corpse Cremating Company. None genuine without signature.

An exchange also gives the following bits of cremation verse:

This world is all a fleeting show;
How sweet from it to pass,
To vanish up the chimney as Carbonic acid gas!

Don't lay me on the river bank
Amid the fragrant flowers,
Nor where the grass is watered by
The early summer showers.
But put me in the kitchen range,
And open wide the damper;
And then my vaporous remains
Can up the chimney scamper.

"We lit the poor fellow at dead of night,
The carcass continually turning,
In order that every side might get its share
Of this new patent process of burning.

"No pelting rain storm came wetting the pile
Of fagots to which we had bound him,
No Babcock extinguisher deadened the glare
That formed such a halo around him.

The Elephant Hunters!

[Biddeford Times.]

In 1836 Saco numbered among its inhabitants as jolly a set of "boys" as could be drawn together in this section. They were "hail fellows, well met," and bent upon sport of almost every description. They visited theatres, concerts, circuses, menageries, musters, or went off "on times," generally with the intention of having no small amount of tall fun, for their ideas of pleasure were not of the moderate kind. Sometimes their pleasures were made steaming hot by an inward application, which was no uncommon thing in those days.

While in this happy state they not unfrequently cut up some tall pranks, and woe to that person who offended them for they were sure to have the best end of the scrape.

Generally it is presumed their pranks were of a harmless nature, but not always, for sometimes they were obliged to lay low to evade the strong hand of the law.

One of the most audacious tricks played by this class was upon the proprietors of a menagerie that exhibited in Saco in 1836. In the spring or early summer of that year a small menagerie visited Saco. The principal attraction was a monster elephant who was jealously guarded. During the day two of the "boys" visited the show and being in a happy state got into difficulty with the elephant's keeper and were ejected. This of course did not make them feel very well, and revolving the matter in their minds they hit upon a plan to get square with the managers of the menagerie. It was no less a feat than the possession of one of those splendid large tusks which added so much to the general appearance of the elephant. The show closed about ten o'clock that night and the elephant was put in a shed between the "Tuffs' tavern" so-called, and a stable, all located on Common street. These buildings will be well remembered by the older inhabitants of the city, but for the benefit of the younger portion we will say they were located on or near the lot now occupied by A. C. Tuxbury's lumber yard. Another public house was kept nearly opposite, and it was in this latter house that parties were accustomed to gather and spin yarns, toss off their "bitters" and pass many hours of the night.

The managers of the menagerie employed watchmen to look after the elephant, and on the night in question they neglected their charge and visited this bar-room. Upon this the "boys" had counted and their joyful feelings may be imagined when they saw the men pouring down the "liquid lightning" and noted the fact that they were fast becoming "mellow." They hung around here until between eleven and twelve o'clock and then started out to put in force their scheme. In the meantime however, they had procured of Dr. Small, a druggist then located in Saco, a generous supply of opium and had mixed it with a large quantity of oats. Having moistened this mixture their generous natures prompted them to "feed the elephant." They managed to get into the shed and set the oats before the animal, and the way he took hold of the grain showed he had no suspicions of anything wrong. The "boys" now anxiously watched for the effects of the opium and also for the coming of the keepers of the elephant. Soon the animal showed signs of weakness and after a while fell with a heavy thud.

Now their hearts beat high; now the time had come for them to pay back with interest the insult of the day. In order to have a place of exit in case of the approach of any one, they took a board off the back of the shed, and then while one stood watch the other went to work with a saw which had been borrowed from a neighboring cabinet shop. They commenced sawing the tusk quite close up to the animal's head. How they sweat, and worked, and listened, and trembled! The elephant lay still and snored until the saw struck into the marrow, when he shook his head. Watching their chance, however, they plied the saw and soon several feet of ivory was in their arms. They now beat a hasty retreat with their prize, and pushing it into a sewer and securely hiding it for the night, they went home and got into bed as soon as possible. It can well be imagined they were astir early next morning and walked out to learn the news. They found considerable excitement prevailing and one person ventured to tell that during the night some one had put the elephant to sleep and cut off one of his tusks! "Well, if that doesn't beat all!" and immediately they go to the hotel. Here they find a large crowd of men and boys and learn more particulars of the daring trick.

It seems that the keepers, when they returned to the shed and found the animal lying down, concluded he was sick and attempted to arouse him but could not. Then they went to work on him and by the use of plank succeeded in getting the animal upon his feet and braced him against the side of the shed. It was not until near morning that they discovered one of the tusks was gone, and then curses loud and deep were poured upon the heads of the perpetrators of the outrage.

It was not until about eight o'clock in the morning that the elephant was so far aroused as to admit of his being started on the road. Among the happiest persons in the crowd to see him off were our "boys," who enjoyed the discomfiture of the menagerie managers. The animal was driven up Middle street and out into Main, as the menagerie was to show that day in Portland. The huge animal staggered and rolled along the street like a drunken man, and much to the merriment of the crowd who followed for some distance.

The owners of the animal offered a reward of $5000 for the apprehension of the parties who had despoiled the elephant of his tusk.

A day or two after this scrape the "boys" carried the tusk away and buried it, fearing it might be brought to light if kept in any building. Five years afterward the tusk was dug up, a few sections cut off and the major part of it taken to Boston by a disinterested party and sold. Two pieces of this tusk are now to be seen in this vicinity, one in this city and the other in Saco. One of the parties to this scrape is still living, the other died some years since.

The Massachusetts Flood.

One hundred and ten bodies had been recovered from the ruins of Mill river valley, up to Monday evening; about forty others are missing, but it is now believed the total number of lives lost will not much exceed one hundred and fifty.

The total pecuniary loss is estimated at one million dollars, of which the manufacturers and mill owners sustain $550,000, the towns of Williamsburg and Northampton $150,000 for the repair of highways and bridges, and the operatives and individuals not less than $150,000 or $200,000.

Generous contributions have been made for the aid of the sufferers, and everything that can be done to alleviate the distress is being done.

Readables.

The goverment at San Jose de Guatemala is reported to have settled with the British consul, Magee, for the recent outrage, by paying him £10,000.

A new charitable enterprise, known as the Day Nursery, has just been established by a few young ladies of Boston. Women prevented from going to work, because they have babies or children to take of can leave them during the day at this place, where they will be fed and well cared for. Fifteen cents a day will be charged for each child.

A correspondent of the Nation sharply condemns Rev. Isaac Taylor, a British author, who has just repeated the often-exposed story of the Blue Laws. These mythical statutes were the invention of a Connecticut Tory, yet thousands are led to believe they were really in force. Some folks, no doubt, have considered Robinson Crusoe a truthful narrative and the man Friday a veritable person.

A. G. Noyes, dealer in diamonds, was robbed on the steamer Dean Richmond while going up the Hudson, Friday night, of $1,000 worth of diamonds, a gold watch and chain, and $650 in greenbacks.

Edward S. Stokes and wife have been divorced by mutual consent.

The World truly says that an Angell of mercy is the President of the Massachusetts Society for the prevention of Cruelty to Animals. And certain refractory, hazing students of Ann Arbor may intimate that an Angell of wrath is President of the Michigan University.

A sad case of poisoning occurred in Boston, Saturday. Three little boys, aged one a half, four and a half and six years, while playing in the yard of the house where their parents resided, found a box of rat-poison, of which they eat with fatal results.

Ten thousand dollars worth of diamond jewelry was seized by the customs authorities in New York, Saturday, from Solomon Abrahams, passenger in the steamer Scotia, under suspicion of having been smuggled. Abrahams is said to be a London pawn broker.

Some time ago, when the republican party had full control of Ohio, the democratic orators and papers of that State were enthusiastic over the merits of cumulative voting; but latterly their tune has changed, as a democratic tune always does, to suit the change of circumstances. The Cincinnati Times says: "Some democratic organs can be reconciled to 'minority representation' and 'cumulative voting,' where their party is in the minority, but where they are in a majority, they are firm in the faith that the majority should govern. For our part, we are content with the good old fashion of giving the election, under all circumstances, to the side that honestly gets the most votes. The people should be able to trust themselves to that extent; if not, why attempt to govern themselves at all?"

State News.

Charles H. Thompson, of Colebrook, caught an otter week before last, which measured 4 feet 8 inches in length.

George Sturdevant, of Hillsborough Centre, shot a grey eagle on the 8th which measured 7 feet 2 inches from tip to tip of wings, and weighed 9 pounds.

A son of Amos Bodwell, of Windham, fell from a load of wood Tuesday afternoon, 12th, fracturing both bones of the right leg, close down upon the ankle.

The cotton mills of Great Falls are being run to their fullest capacity, and it is said more looms are to be added and more cloth made this summer than ever before.

Andrew Vandommole, a boy about 12 years old, who works in the clothes-pin shop at Hillsborough, on Monday, 11th, got his right hand caught in a gear, and injured so badly that a portion of his thumb had to be amputated.

The stage mail line from Keene to Peterborough, via Dublin, has been discontinued; all mail matter for those towns will hereafter pass over the Cheshire railroad. The service has been increased by a daily line from Dublin to Greenfield, connecting with the Wilton railroad.

A street sprinkler saunters about the streets of Great Falls.

The steamer Manchu, from Nagasaki, Japan, for Shanghai, China, was lost March 17 in a heavy gale. Captain Lowell, Dr. Spedding and three others were picked up March 19 by the German brig Otto, and are the only persons known to have been saved out of fifty, crew and passengers.

George F. Hilliard, eleven years old, accidentally blew the top of his head off while examining a gun on the 17th. He was dead when found. This happened at Hillsborough Bridge.

Ossipee Lake and Six-Mile Pond have been stacked with salmon.

Dr. Daniel F. Wells, of Exeter, has been appointed a member of an official excursion to the South Sea, to observe the transit of Venus, which will occur next December.

Albert Parmalee, of Claremont, attempted to commit suicide on Thursday night or Friday morning. His brother, sleeping with him, awoke in the morning and found him unconscious from the taking of chloroform and aconite. A handkerchief was over his mouth, and on the table by the side of the bed was found a bottle and a note stating what his intentions were, as he was tired of living. Medical aid was summoned.

At Nashua, on Thursday, James Shores, while engaged in harrowing, was thrown under the machine by the horse taking fright and so badly injured that his life is dispaired of.

Major Colony's address before the City Council, Keene, on Tuesday, 12th inst, was a clear and pointed statement of the financial condition of that city. The total debt foots up $150,091.55. This includes $145,000 of Water Bonds, from which there is a handsome and increasing revenue, so that the real indebtedness is only $5,091.55.

Hon. Nathan H. Weeks of Plymouth, has given notice of his intention to apply for a charter for a railroad up the Pemigewasset to Littleton or Bethlehem.

Thus the Columbus, Ga., Enquirer sings a verse of the Song of the South: "A sorry sight it is to see a spike team consisting of a skeleton steer and a skinny, blind old mule, with a rope harness and a squint-eyed driver, hauling a barrel of new whiskey over poor roads, on a hermaphrodite wagon, into a farming district where the people are in debt, and women and children are forced to practice scant attire by day and hungry sleeping at night."

Fresh Currents.

[Cincinnati Times.]

Donn Piatt says he has enjoyed a good reputation. Whose was it?

The Courier-Journal says Cincinnati is like Athens because it is always in Greece. On the same principle Watterson is like the preserved specimens in a museum because he is always in liquor.

The editor of the Mount Ayr (Iowa) Journal became a little put out with the editor of the Bedford Argus and took occasion to remark that that individual was "a squirming squirt, a chicken-hearted youth, a diabolical jackassary, ape, hog, mullen-stock (!), dog-fennel, tumble-bug, and toiling cattorpillar!" The person thus addressed, evidently hurt by these assertions, replied that the editor of the Mount Ayr Journal was "all this and more too;" and added that he was "the but-cut of original sin, the quintessence of double-distilled nastiness, a foul bubble floating on the surface of a cess-pool, a dirty, mangy dog, and a foul disgrace to his own fleas."

—A Toledo paper says: "Evansville, Indiana, wants the national capital, and poor discouraged St. Louis, which has been waiting so long for the realization of the dreams of I. U. Reavis, offers to give up the game and sell her chances to Evansville for ten cents. Evansville had better save the money."

—Milwaukee Sentinel: Another Division street match has been broken off. He went up to Fond du Lac last week, and she wrote that "life is like the clouds, so sombre, leaden, gray, while you are gone." Yesterday he returned, and heard that an hour after the letter was posted she was off to a dance with a Wisconsin street clerk.

A Merited Tribute.

[Boston Traveller.]

Mr. Jeremiah Prescott, whose resignation of the superintendency of the Eastern Railroad was announced on Saturday, is a railroad man of long and valuable experience. Commencing his professional life at the bottom round of the ladder, he worked himself up, step by step, through the various grades of the business, making himself familiar with the details and practical operation of each, and won promotion by the sheer force of merit and unswerving devotion to his duty. Mr. Prescott, in private life, is one of the most genial of gentlemen, kind, and appreciated by all his friends and acquaintances, and his retirement from business will be a theme of much regret. No more popular official has ever been connected with a New England Railroad.

New Publications.

The British Quarterly Review for April contains: Authors and Publishers, The Antiquity of Man, The Prospects of Persia, The Electric Telegraph, David Livingstone, and other articles. $4 per year; Leonard Scott Pub. Co., 140 Fulton street, New York.

"The South Carolina Problem" is discussed with fullness, sharpness and apparent fairness by Mr. Edward King, in the June number of Scribner's. This being one of "The Great South" series, the illustrations are as usual, numerous, and deal with character as well as landscape and architecture. There are in this number six stories, or parts of stories, the authors being the now famous Saxe Holm (the beginning of a story in two instalments,) Henry James, Jr., Rebecca Harding Davis, Adeline Trafton, Amalie La Forge, and Jules Verne. The second and concluding paper on Tennyson, by Stedman; an illustrated paper on "An Sable Chasm," the gate of the Adirondacks; a sketch, with portrait, of the poet Aldrich; an account of "An Elephant Hunt in Siam"; and poems by Colonel Higginson, Benjamin F. Taylor, Mary L. Ritter, Elizabeth Aken Allen and Martha P. Lowe complete the list of contributions. In "Topics of the Time" Dr. Holland writes about The Late Brooklyn Council, The Moral Power of Women, and A Good Fellow. The Old Cabinet has to do with Barbarism. There is a long and "timely" poem, "Diogenes in America" in Etchings, and there are book notices, scientific notes, etc., as usual.

Business Notices.

Seven Millions of Pores.

All day and all night the exhausted particles of every human system are passing off through seven millions of quarter-inch hose—that being about the length of the sweat-ducts connected with the pores. If these are obstructed by sickness or excesses, if they were sealed up, the consequences would be death. It is one of the provinces of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to keep the superficial escape pipes open, as well as those larger excretory organs, the bowels. The stomach and the skin sympathize, and it is through the stomach that the Bitters act upon the cuticle, keeping it moist, elastic and unfevered. The famous vegetable invigorant is a marvellous medicine; no other preparation known contains such a variety of curative and preservative elements, or acts, at the same time, in such a variety of beneficial ways. In dyspepsia it strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite, and controls the liver; in fever and ague, it breaks up the fits; in cases of physical prostration it is literally a vital specific.

Nevermore

Can the coarse gritty tooth powders and tooth-destroying chemical fluids find a place on the toilets of sensible people. The fragrant and preservative SOZODONT has superceded them all.

Nervous People should avoid the temporary relief of tea and coffee. A cup of pure Cocoa will be found nutritive as well as sedative. Walter Baker & Co. Boston, received the highest premium for excellence at the Paris and Vienna Expositions. Their goods are for sale everywhere.

The Ne plus Ultra.—Everybody likes to see a well dressed head of hair, but no lady or gentleman can dress their hair with perfect satisfaction without the use of BEARINE. Its perfume is exquisite; it gives to the hair a glossy rich appearance.
Sold by all Dangglists. 3

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Reader, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

Helmbold's Buchu is still in the zenith of its popularity. Notwithstanding the absence of Dr. Helmbold, the celebrated medicine is still manufactured at the laboratory at Philadelphia, and is sold by all respectable druggists. $10,000 reward can safely be offered for a more infallible cure for PILES than ANAKESIS. The cures performed by this wonderful remedy are simply miraculous. Lotions, ointments and internal remedies produce more harm than good, but ANAKESIS is an external remedy, a simple suppository, supports the tumors, acts as a soothing poultice and medicine, gives instant relief, and cures absolutely. All Doctors prescribe it.—Price $1.00. Sold by Druggists everywhere, and sent free by mail from Principal Depot, 46 Walker str., New York.

Successful farmers can hardly afford to be without the BULLARD IMPROVED HAY TEDDER, the only Tedder that does thorough work and is easy of draft, and that can be managed by a boy eight years of age.

Probably the best HORSE-RAKE now offered to the public is the self-operating Whitcomb.

All the above will be cheerfully shown at his place of residence. E. B. PHILBRICK,

THE "LIGHT RUNNING"

"DOMESTIC"

KING OF SEWING Machines.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

It affords me great pleasure to be able to announce to my friends (and to all others interested,) that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Company has fully resumed the manufacture of its UNRIVALLED MACHINE, and will expand its business with increased energy. Its new factories will soon be completed, and every machine will be as nicely constructed as possible. All who have used the Machine for four years or less, pronounce it

THE LIGHTEST RUNNING,
EASIEST TO KEEP IN ORDER,
THE MOST DURABLE,

—AND DECIDEDLY—

The Nearest to Perfection

of any Sewing Machine in the market. It is the intention to have the

"DOMESTIC" SEWING MACHINE

Supercede all others in this City and Vicinity.

—THE—

"DOMESTIC" SEWING MACHINE

—IS THE—

"Best Machine to Use,"

—AND THE—

EASIEST TO SELL.

IT IS DURABLE

AND WILL LAST A LIFE-TIME.

Every Machine

I sell is warranted to be all I claim for it, and a

Written Guarantee

WILL BE GIVEN TO PURCHASERS IF DESIRED.

ALL MACHINES ARE FURNISHED—WITHOUT EXTRA CHARGE—WITH CASTORS, A HEMMER AND FELLER, QUILTING GAUGE, BRAIDER, THUMB-SCREW AND GAUGE, A DOZEN OF ASSORTED NEEDLES, HALF A DOZEN BOBBINS, WRENCH, SCREW DRIVER, OILER, BOTTLE OF OIL AND BOOK OF INSTRUCTIONS.

THE "DOMESTIC" WILL

Hem, Fell,
Bind, Braid,
Cord, Quilt,
Tuck, Ruffle,
Embroider, Gather,

AND SEW ON AT THE SAME TIME.

THE GATHERING ATTACHMENT

As applied to the "DOMESTIC" is made on an

ENTIRELY NEW PRINCIPLE.

No other Machine in the United States having any thing for this purpose that can be compared with this late invention. It is applied directly to the presser bar, and is operated by the movements of the Needle Bar.

ITS ACTIONS ARE POSITIVE—ITS MOTIONS PERFECT.

As some of my friends, connected with the sale of other kinds of sewing machines, have interested themselves so much during the past winter as to falsely represent that the "Domestic" S. M. Co. had failed, and that there could be no parts obtained for the "Domestic" Needles, etc., etc., I will state that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Co. has been making steady progress from the first, and as to parts of the machine, needles, etc., being obtained, I keep them constantly on hand. But although the "Domestic" where it has been sold may be run "from morn until eve" without tiring the operator. We have had scarcely any call for extra parts and are pleased to state that we have not so much business in that way as some of our neighbors. If however any one owning a "Domestic" should in any manner be dissatisfied, all matters will be made right by calling at my office. I will further state that as heretofore I shall keep on hand all kinds of

SEWING MACHINE NEEDLES,
TUCKERS,
GATHERERS,
EMBROIDERERS,
HEMMERS,
BRAIDERS,
CORDERS,
ETC., ETC., ETC.

Watch 'Em---Time 'Em!

Who? the Overseers of the Poor, or the new Mayor, or the incoming party? Well, any or all of them, for it is well to watch all men—rogues need it, and honest men do not fear it. But it is about a watch we were going to speak, not watching,—though whether His Honor the Mayor found the need of a quicker gauge for jumping politicians, or to time the late defunct Bored of Poor Overseers, as he calls them, we shall not undertake to say. Suffice it that we are, by an incident of last week, reminded of the poet's beautiful line, only we now render it, "Sweet are the uses of adver"—tising. For a year or two past, on occasions, we had heard the original Chronicler complaining that he could not find his "chronograph," whatever that might be,—for aught we knew, an instrument to count up Citizens' majorities down in Ward Three, or to solve the justice of the problem why turkeys should wholesale at twenty-three cents and retail at eighteen cents at the same time.

"Sweet are the uses of adversity,"

Be this as it may—our worthy predecessor, whom it is well known has a slight predeliction for "sport," being aware doubtless that Mr. Stoddard is putting his trotting park in fix for the coming season, and that there will be some ground and lofty tumbling and tall political running at Concord in the leave-y month of June,—bethought himself once more, and this time in earnest, of his long-lost timer; and thus appealed to the public, through our advertising columns:

LOST OR MISLAID.

STRAYED, stolen or lost to somebody somewhere at sometime—a CHRONOGRAPH, or Timing Watch, about three inches in diameter, in a leathern case like a pocket compass. Is gauged to mark quarter seconds. Any person returning it will receive the thanks of the owner, and any other reward desired. FRANK W. MILLER.

Well, sure enough, no sooner said than done—no sooner called than come. That very day it came to time. The CHRONICLE had hardly been an hour born, when Mr. Henry H. Ham, the veteran timekeeper for the city, located directly beneath the CHRONICLE office, announced that the missing chronograph was safe in his case, where the owner had left it for repairs three months before! All which proved correct, except the three months, which should have been stated at eighteen months, showing again that whether on the race-track or the slower courses of life, time flies faster than most of us appreciate; whence the over-estimates of the speed of horses, and the difficulty of realizing how fast we grow old ourselves.

But never mind,—that life is long enough which answers life's great ends; and let us hope, now that watch is found, that the owner may not only note the flight of time, but be enabled to keep up with the times.

"Davy Crockett"

Will be presented to-night at the Temple. The Press of every place where Frank Mayo and Miss Rosa Rand have appeared speak very highly of the acting and the play. The Lynn Reporter says:

Every one knows what was the character of the simple backwoods coon-hunter whose name gives the title to the play, and it will be readily conceded that the part is one to acceptably fill which requires an actor of no mean merit. Mr. Mayo did it full justice, having evidently given profound study to the role. The simple, generous and brave nature of the backwoodsman was admirably set forth, and Mr. Mayo's acting was always in keeping with the character he assumed. He is a man of spendid personal appearance and bearing, large, well formed and powerful, and can well represent the ideal type of the early pioneers of the West. The role of "Eleanor Vaughn," the heroine, was very finely performed by Miss Rosa Rand, whose acting was natural and unstudied at all times, and impressive and even thrilling in the more emotional parts of the play. The plot is well laid, and the interest of the drama is kept up to the end. Many went with the expectation of seeing something after the style of "Buffalo Bill" and "Oroloso," and must have been agreeably disappointed at witnessing a play so far above that standard, and acting which bore the charm of novelty as well as of considerable genius.

Laconics.

E. Underhill & Co. have on hand and for sale several second-hand harnesses, cheap. They are also prepared to put up any style harnesses at prices ranging from $20 to $125. Don't go to other places to purchase when you can get the same quality of goods here for 10 per cent. less.

There was a public baptism of five persons at Kittery Foreside last Sunday afternoon, the ceremony being performed by Rev. S. A. Hutchinson, pastor of the second Christian Church. It took place near the Navy Yard bridge and was witnessed by about 1500 persons. In the evening eight persons received the hand of fellowship from the pastor at the church.

The members of the First Regiment Heavy Artillery, New Hampshire Volunteers, will hold a reunion at Fort Constitution on the 1st of July. A basket picnic will be a feature of the occasion, and a large attendance is anticipated.

Dr. Thomas Sparhawk, of Newburyport, died suddenly of heart disease on Sunday last, aged 68 years. He was widely known for his skill in medicine, and noted for deeds of kindness and charity. He was a descendant of Sir William Pepperell, and was a native of this city; graduated at Dartmouth College, studied medicine in the Harvard Medical School, and after practicing for over thirty years in Amesbury, moved to Newburyport about two years ago.

A schooner while working out of the harbor, Tuesday forenoon, ran on Seavey's island point, at the narrows, remaining there until high water in the afternoon when she was hauled off by tug Clara Bateman. The schooner (the Isabella Jewett, for Bangor,) having sustained no serious damage proceeded on her voyage.

The U. S. Circuit Court came in Tuesday forenoon, in this city, Judge Clark being present. In the case Rowe vs. Eastern railroad, arguments were made to the court upon certain legal questions arising upon the pleas filed by the defendants. The case will be argued by written briefs, upon these questions, to be furnished in July. The court intimated that when it adjourned it would be to the first day of July next.

Mr. William H. Noyes, foreman shipwright at the navy yard, has been removed and Mr. William Fernald of Kittery appointed to the position. All of the men employed in the Department of Construction (except those at work on the contract ship) have been suspended until the end of the present month. The riggers and sailmakers in the Department of Equipment commence working on half time this morning.

About 4.30 P. M., Tuesday, as Mr. William Alton was planting beans at his residence on Clinton street he suddenly dropped dead. It is thought he died of heart disease.

The three lots between Cass street and the residence of A. F. Howard, Esq., have been sold to Messrs. M. L. Johnson, U. S. N., John H. Broughton and John H. Bailey—two for $1000 each and one for $1100, each being 80x145 feet. Three residences will be built on these lots this summer.

The Rockingham Free Will Baptist Quarterly Meeting holds its spring session in this city, at the Pearl street church, Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

MAYORALTY OF NEW ORLEANS,
CITY HALL, May 11, 1872.

To Kearsarge Engine Company No. 3, of Portsmouth, N. H.:—On Saturday, May 9, I had the honor to receive, through Hon. Peter Marcy, of this city, your check for eighty-five dollars, being the philanthropic contribution of your company for the relief of the poor victims of our devastating flood. In the name of the sufferers I tender my most hearty thanks for the additional evidence of generosity of firemen as a class in all cities and in all ages. No great calamity occurs that does not arouse their commiseration and call forth noble efforts for relief. To make sacrifices for those who suffer or are in danger, becomes habitual to all active firemen. I give you, therefore, in addition, a fireman's thanks for this handsome proof of firemen's generosity.

I have the honor to remain, etc.,
LOUIS A. WILTZ,
Mayor and Chairman of General Relief Committee, and President Creole Fire Company No. 9.

A Correction.

The Times of Tuesday evening says:

"On the 11th inst. a man drove a horse to the stable of Mr. Wm. Plaisted, to have him put up. The animal was jaded and reeking with sweat, showing fast driving and bad usage. The driver stated that he had driven from Gloucester in eleven hours, and was going to York. Since then the animal has remained at Mr. Plaisted's stable and the man has not been seen or heard from. The horse, which was completely used up and suffering, was on Monday turned over to the S. P. C. A., who ended his misery. The animal proved to be the old stallion driven last year upon Balch's street sprinkler."

Mr. Balch informs us that the foregoing statement is incorrect in several particulars the horse referred to having been used by him two years ago, then in Jenness' brickyard at Christian Shore, and afterward sold for $5; and that the pair of horses used in the street sprinkler last year were valuable and powerful animals, and have since been sold to Mr. Marshall (of the Marshall House, York rivermouth,) for $475.

Church Caucus.

The trouble in the Episcopal society has not ended, although at the third meeting of the society, Monday evening, the usual amount of money was appropriated. During the past two weeks, the friends of the rector issued a disgracefully written circular intended to insult some of his opponents, and finding themselves at two meetings in the minority bought pews for the sake of voting at the meeting. The wrangle at this meeting was spicy and not unlike some political caucuses, so we are informed. Finally, four disgusted anti-Binghamites stalked out of church (just the thing the rector's friends desired them to do), and then came the voting on the proposition to raise $3000 for the ensuing year. One member objected on the ground that there was no hope of Dr. Bingham's resignation as long as the society would pay him $2500 per annum. To this another replied that debts were due and the church was held for payment. It was also said that the rector would probably resign ere long—a statement which his opponents intimated was "too thin," as his friends had made the same promises a year ago. The vote resulted as follows: 22 for raising the $3000, and 18 against. So the war was over for the evening, and the Binghamites rushed abroad excitedly pleased that after all they had carried the caucus. It is by such examples as this that christian feeling and good fellowship is inculcated among brethren who dwell together in unity!

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrishe Island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House as it its original height, and a lively sea view, as about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Rag-Carpet Mats.

[Danbury News.]

Some women much prefer to use a bit of rag carpet in place of a regular-made mat at their door. It is a good idea. If there is anything better calculated to attract a man's attention than a rag-carpet at a door, we don't know of it. It causes more hard feelings and is productive of more hard and unforgiving words than any article about the house, excepting always the family hammer. Three pieces of rag carpet thus situated will bankrupt an upright man inside of a fortnight, and turn a happy home into an uproarious and outrageous bedlam. Not one man in one hundred can go through a door thus protected without catching his foot in that carpet, to the great danger of flinging himself violently to the floor and flattening his nose. And it not only twists his legs, but it drags over the sill, and catches the door as he shuts it, and starts his temper afresh. It being too degrading and unmanly to stoop down and remove the obstacle with his hand, he gives it a kick, and is surprised to see how easy it is to miss it. He fetches another and more vigorous kick at it, and succeeds in removing about an inch of it. Then he swings the door to, and setting his teeth together, attempts to shut it over the obstacle. The more the obstruction resists him the more desperately he pushes. This on the very generally received and very agreeable theory that inanimate things are human, in so far as it is human to be vicious and obstinate. It is the principle which induces a boy to pound a stick of wood which flies up and hits him. Having convinced himself that the building will not sufficiently give to permit of shutting the door without removing the carpet, the carpet is kicked away. It is never laid away. And it is either kicked the whole length of the hall or tumbled in a heap just outside the sill, where the next person appearing catches both feet into it, and shoots into the room with hair erect, eyeballs protruding, and feet madly and passionately endeavoring to recover their balance.

—Commenting upon the fact that General Walker, the superintendent of the census, declines pay for his services, the Louisville Courier-Journal says it has known men to be sent to the lunatic asylum for eccentricities far les glaring than that.

HENDERSON & CO.,

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

—OF—

Bonnets, Hats,
Flowers and
Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

SASH RIBBONS, ... 25 cents per yard.
SILK TIES . . . . . 20 cents each.
FRAMES . . . . . 15 cents each.

The Bachelor's Surprise.

A chill, December evening, with the rain and snow forming a disagreeable sort of conglomeration on the sidewalks, the gas lamps at the corner flickering sullenly through the mist, and the wind taking one viciously, as one came round the corner! Not a pleasant evening to assume possession of a new home, but necessity knows no law, and Mr. Barkdale put up his night key into the red brick house in the middle of the block, sincerely hoping that his new landlady would have common sense to light a fire in the grate.

"Is it you, sir?" Mrs. Hinnan quoth beamingly. "There's a good fire, and it's all right."

"All right, eh?" said the bachelor, feeling the blue tip of his frosted nose, to see whether it had escaped being frozen off entirely. "Well, I'm glad to hear that. Have the trunks come?"

"Oh, yes, sir, and the other things."

"What other things?" demanded Mr. Barkdale.

But Mrs. Hinnan pursed her lips up, "I wasn't to tell, sir, please."

"Rather an eccentric old lady," thought Mr. Barkdale, pushing past her to the third story front room which he had solemnly engaged the day before.

It had been a rather dark and dingy little den by the light of the moon,, but now, softened by the coral shine of a well-filled grate, it wore quite another and a brighter aspect.

"Velvet paper on the walls, gilt paneling, red carpet and a Sleepy Hollow chair," thought Mr. Barkdale, glancing around—"Not so uncomfortable after all. When I get my things unpacked it will seem quite homelike."

He set down his valise in the corner, deliberately opened it, took out a pair of slippers, and invested his tired feet therein. Next he laid off his overcoat.

"Now for a cigar," thought he.

But the brown-layered weed was yet in his hand, when there was a bustle, and a flutter, and a whisper, and a merry noise on the landing outside, and the door flew open, as if by magic, to admit half a dozen, blooming laughing girls.

Mr. Barkdale dropped his cigar, and retreated a step or two.

"Don't be alarmed!" said the tallest and prettiest of the bevy; "it's only a surprise."

"A very agreeable one, I'm sure," said our friend, recovering in some degree his presence of mind.

"There's no mistake, I hope," said a yellow-tressed blonde. "Your name is not Greenfield?"

"No mistake at all, I assure you," said Mr. Barkdale. "Of course it is not Greenfield. Sit down ladies."

And he pushed forward the Sleepy Hollow chair, a camp stool, and two rheumatic reception chairs, which were all the accommodations presented by his apartment.

But instead of accepting his courtesy, the girls all fluttered out again giggling, and in a second, before he could realize this strange combination of affairs, they were back again bearing benches and a table cloth, dishes, bouquets, a pyramid of macceronics, piled-up plates of sandwiches, of frosted cake, and a mysterious something like unto an ice cream freezer.

The golden-tressed girl clapped her hands.

"You needn't think we are doing all this for you, sir!" she said.

"Oh," said Mr. Barkdale, bashfully. "I—I hadn't any such impression."

"It's all a surprise designed for Kate's cousin."

"Is it?" said Mr. Barkdale, more in the dark than ever.

"And how do you suppose we found it all out?" demanded the tall girl with the black eyes and scarlet feather in her hat.

"I haven't the least idea."

"We found your letter to Kate—and we girls read it, and we resolved to take you and her both by surprise. She is to be here in half an hour. Barbara, that is Barbara Morris, in the blue merino dress," with a turn of her long lashes toward the golden-haired girl—"pretends she has moved here, and Kate is to come and spend the evening with Barbara. Won't it be a joke?"

"Stupendous!" said our hero, gradually beginning to comprehend the mortifying fact that he was mistaken for some one else.

"What will Kate say, when she sees you here?" ejaculated another maid merrily.

"Ah—what indeed!" said Mr. Barkdale, wondering in what words he could best explain matters.

"Of course, we shall all look the other way while you are kissing and hugging her," said Miss Barbara demurely.

"Very considerate of you I am sure," observed Mr. Barkdale.

"She's the sweetest girl in New York," exclaimed the tall damsel, enthusiastically. "I am one of her dearest friends. We work our sewing machines side by side at Madame Grillard's. Hasn't she ever written to you about Alice Moore?"

"I—I don't just this moment recall that she has."

"O, well, it don't matter," said Alice, "Just you sit down, and be a good boy, while we fix the tables. Aren't those roses beautiful! My goodness gracious, how astonished Kate will be!"

"She can't be more so than I am," said Mr. Barkdale, sinking into the Sleepy Hollow chair, and passing his handkerchief vaguely across his wet forehead. "Well it's a mere matter of fate; I can't see how I am going to explain myself; and yet, perhaps I ought to explain. Ladies—"

"Hush-sh-sh-sh!" cried the six pretty girls, all in a hissing chorus, "Kate's coming! Bessie has brought her! Hush-sh-sh-sh! Don't say a word, Mr. "Greenfield." The golden-haired girl's hand was clapped promptly over his mouth. Alice Moore grasped his arm spasmodically, and the other four danced a sort of bewitching little feminine war-dance about him, while a seventh girl entered—a pretty, Madonna-faced little creature like a dove.

"Come and kiss him, Kate!" cried all the others. "Now don't be ridiculous—for we shan't take any notice. Here he is!"

"Kiss who?" cried Kate, standing still, and staring all around her. "Girls, what on earth do you mean?"

"You provoking thing!" said Barbara, stamping her little foot. "Do you suppose we are all fools? Why, of course we know all about him! It's Mr. Greenfield—your cousin, Kate—the young M. D."

Kate looked around in bewilderment.

"Where?"

"Why, here!"

"Nothing of the sort!" said Miss Kate demurely.

Our hero stood up, feeling himself growing uncomfortably warm and red.

"Ladies," he said, "there's some peculiar mistake here. I said at the outset that my name was not Greenfield."

"There!" cried the girls at once.

"There!" chorused Kate, defiantly.

"Didn't we tell you!" cried the girls.

"Didn't I tell you?" retorted Kate. "Be kind enough to let us know what your name is, sir."

"Cephas Barkdale!" said the wretched victim of a misunderstanding.

"But," said Miss Moore, "you said it was not Greenfield."

"Of course I did!" said the puzzled bachelor. "It isn't Greenfield, and it never will be unless I have it changed by act of Legislature."

"O-h-h!" cried the girls. Dear, dear, to be sure!" And we thought you were Kate's lover—and his name is N-o-double-t—Nott Greenfield."

"Do hold your tongues, you ridiculous things!" said Kate, half vexed half laughing. "What must Mr. Barkdale think of us all?"

"I think you are very nice," said Mr. Barkdale very gallantly.

Miss Baraba in the meantime had plucked a slip of paper out of her pocket. She uttered a hysterical shriek.

"It's all my fault" she exclaimed. It was No. 39 instead of No. 36—and the tail of the horrid figure's turned the wrong end up—that's all. And the cake, and the flowers and everything."

"Stop, ladies, if you please," said Mr. Barkdale courteously. "Because the surprise has come to the wrong place is no reason why the right person should not enjoy it. Allow me to give up this room to your use this evening, I will just step across the street, and send Mr. Nott Greenfield over."

"But you must return with him," said the girls.

And Mr. Barkdale was not allowed to depart until he had promised.

Mr. Nott Greenfield—a good-looking medical student, who had the "sky parlor" directly opposite—came promptly on mention of the name of Kate Kellford, and did the polite thing in introducing Mr. Barkdale; and Barkdale ate of the sandwiches, and enjoyed the cake and cream, and coaxed Miss Barbara to pin a little pink rosebud in the button hole of his coat, and enjoyed himself prodigiously.

"I'd like to be surprised like this every night in the year!" said he.

"Oh, you greedy creature!" said Miss Barbara.

"But there was one time I seriously meditated throwing myself out of the window," said he, "when you told me I was to kiss Kate."

"Dear, dear!" said Barbara, ironically, "that would have been dreadful, wouldn't it?"

"But the awkwardness of the thing."

"I dare say you never kissed a pretty girl before," pouted the blonde.

"I never did," said the bachelor, growing bold; "but I will now if you say so."

"But I don't say so," said Barbara, coloring and laughing. "Behave yourself, sir!"

Mr. Barkdale went home with the fair Barbara, and they grew to be very great friends, and—where's the use trying to conceal how it all ended? They were married at the year's end with all the six surprisers for bridesmaids, Kate Kellford included. Mr. Nott Greenfield proposes to follow the example as soon as he has got his diploma.

THURSDAY, MAY 21, 1874.

Readables.

Hon. William W. Eaton, democrat, has been elected U. S. Senator from Connecticut. The Senate gave him 16 to 4 for Senator Buckingham. The House gave Eaton 133, Buckingham 74, Ingersoll 4.

The Connecticut legislature has appropriated $10,000 for the relief of the sufferers by the flood in the Mill river valley. Twenty more bodies have been found.

Bostons 16, Philadelphias 7. Bostons 3, Baltimores 2.

A despatch from San Diego, Cal., says that John Overend, wife and four children, were murdered in their house. There is no clew to the murderers.

Stephen Sharron, of Woodstock, suffered the loss of his house, barn and outbuildings on the 13th inst. One hog and some poultry were consumed. Loss about $1500; insured for $450.

The White Slaves of England.

Under the above head the New York World gives, from its London correspondent, some account of the condition of the working classes of England. He has been looking over the report of the Inspectors of Factories for the last year. The Inspectors visited the brick-makers, and they report that those laborers are "a most barbarous, semi-civilized, ignorant set. Men and boys look like red Indians; the sand used in brick-making being burnt red, their bodies are covered with it. They work bareheaded, barefooted, with exposed breasts, and with wild looks. Drinking all day Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, dog-fighting and manfighting, they resume work on Wednesdays, when the poor little unfortunates (that is, the children of both sexes, who are made to do the hardest part of the labor) are made to toil away, stamping and carrying, and pressing a good fortnight's work into three or four days. One man, who last week earned in four days twenty-eight shillings ($6.50 in gold), took his wife home a loaf of bread and sixpence."

The law that children under twelve years of age must not be made to work is systematically disregarded. Cases are given where children ten or twelve years old are made to do night work, and have but seven hours of the twenty-four for sleep and meals. These reports from the brick works are bad enough, but what can we say of the stories told about the salt works at Droilwich? In these the women work with the men all night, both sexes stripped to the waist, and very little clothing to cover them below. The men wear short breeches simply, and the women have only a single garment, a shirt, tied about the waist and reaching to the knees.

The scenes nightly enacted in these works are said to be horrible beyond description, and chastity, morality and decency are, among the workers, words destitute of meaning. This is a brief glimpse into the condition of the toiling masses of the "proudest and most enlightened nation upon the globe," the country upon which the sun never sets. Every true Briton's heart will probably swell with pride at the view. England sends, year after year, her wealth and her missionaries to other lands, to assist and educate and clothe and civilize the heathen, while her own flesh and blood at home is living in destitution, misery and shame. This is the "finest peasantry in the world" of which England boasts. Let the American working people turn from the picture, view their own condition and be happy.

Cruelty to Relatives.

I had an aunt coming to visit me for the first time since my marriage, and I don't know what evil genius prompted the wickedness (I acknowledge, with tears in my eyes, that it was such) which I perpetrated toward my wife and my ancient relative.

"My dear," said I to my wife, on the day before my aunt's arrival; "you know Aunt Mary is coming to-morrow; well, I forgot to mention a rather annoying circumstance with regard to her. She's very deaf; and, although she can hear my voice, to which she is accustomed, in its ordinary tones, yet you will be obliged to speak extremely loud in order to be heard. It will be rather inconvenient, but I know you will do everything in your power to make her stay agreeable."

Mrs. S. announced her determination to make herself heard if possible.

I then went to John Thomas, who loves a joke about as well as any person I know of, told him to be at my house at six P. M., on the following evening, and felt comparatively happy.

I went to the railroad station with a carriage, the next evening, and when I was on my way home with my aunt, I said, "My dear aunt, there is one rather annoying infirmity that Amelia has, which I forgot to mention before. She's very deaf; and, although she can hear my voice, to which she is accustomed, in its ordinary tones, yet you will be obliged to speak extremely loud in order to be heard. I'm sorry for it."

Aunt Mary, in the goodness of her heart, protested that she rather liked speaking loud, and to do so would afford her great pleasure.

The carriage drove up—on the steps was my wife—at the window was John Thomas, with a face as utterly solemn as if he had buried all his relatives that afternoon.

I handed out my aunt—she ascended the steps.

"I am delighted to see you," shrieked my wife, and the policeman on the opposite side of the street started, and my aunt nearly fell down the steps.

"Kiss me, my dear," howled my aunt; and the hall lamp clattered, and the windows shook as with the fever and ague. I looked at the window—John had disappeared. Human nature could stand it no longer. I poked my head into the carriage, and went into strong convulsions.

When I entered the parlor, my aunt was helping Aunt Mary to take off her bonnet and cape; and there sat John with his face of woe.

Suddenly, "Did you have a pleasant journey?" went off my wife, like a pistol, and John Thomas rather jumped to his feet.

"Rather dusty," was the response, in a war-whoop; and so the conversation continued.

The neighbors for streets around must have heard it; when I was in the third story of the building. I heard every word, plainly.

In the course of the evening, my aunt took occasion to say to me, "How loud your wife speaks! Don't it hurt her?"

I told her all deaf persons talked loudly, and that my wife, being used to it, was not affected by the exertion, and that Aunt Mary was getting along very nicely with her.

Presently, my wife said, softly, "Alf, how very loud your aunt talks!"

"Yes," said I, "all deaf persons do. You're getting along with her finely; she hears every word you say." And I rather think she did.

Elated by their success at being understood, they went at it, hammer and tongs, everything on the mantle-piece clattered again, and I was seriously afraid of a crowd collecting in front of the house.

But the end was near. My aunt, being of an investigating turn of mind, was desirous of finding out whether the exertion of talking so loud was not injurious to my wife. So said she, in an unearthly hoot—for her voice was not as musical as it was when she was young, "Doesn't talking so loud strain your lungs?"

"It is an exertion," shrieked my wife.

"Then why do you do it?" was the answering scream.

"Because—because—you can't hear, if I don't," squealed my wife.

"What!" said my aunt, fairly rivalling a railroad whistle, this time.

I began to think it time to evacuate the premises; and, looking round, and seeing John gone, I stepped into the back parlor, and there he lay, flat on his back, with his feet at a right angle to his body, rolling from side to side, with his fists poked into his ribs, and a most agonized expression of countenance, but not uttering a sound. I immediately and involuntarily assumed a similar attitude; and I think that, from the relative position of our boots and heads, and our attempts to restrain our laughter, apoplexy must have inevitably ensued, if a horrible groan, which John gave vent to, in his endeavor to repress his risibility, had not betrayed our hiding-place.

In rushed my wife and my aunt, who, by this time, comprehended the joke; and such a scolding as I then got I never got before, and I hope never to get again.

Lippincott's Magazine for June presents a variety of subjects. The continuation of "The New Hyperion," by Edward Strahan, illustrated, is quaint, original and entertaining. An illustrated article, "Vignettes from the Schuylkill Valley," is an attractive feature of this number. In the unpublished letters of Samuel Taylor Coleridge, which appear in this number, cultivated readers will find much that is especially interesting and enjoyable. The second and concluding paper of "Deslisle & Desbler," by Sarah Winter Kellogg, is captivating. "Bounce" is a short but charming and touching story of to-day. "Present Aspects of Social Life in Rome," by T. A. Trollope, shows the monotony of modern life in the great papal city.

Seven Millions of Pores.

All day and all night the exhausted particles of every human system are passing off through seven millions of quarter-inch hose—that being about the length of the sweat-ducts connected with the pores. If these are obstructed, sickness ensues; if they were sealed up, the consequences would be death. It is one of the provinces of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to keep the superficial escape pipes open, as well as those larger excretory organs, the bowels. The stomach and the skin sympathize, and it is through the stomach that the Bitters act upon the cuticle, keeping it moist, elastic and unfevered. The famous vegetable invigorant is a marvellous medicine; no other preparation known contains such a variety of curative and preservative elements, or acts, at the same time, in such a variety of beneficial ways. Indyspepsia it strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite, and controls the liver; in fever and ague, it breaks up the fits; in cases of physical prostration it is literally a vital specific.

Nevermore

Can the coarse gritty tooth powders and tooth-destroying chemical fluids find a place on the toilets of sensible people. The fragrant and preservative SOZODONT has superceded them all.

Helmbold's Buchu is still in the zenith of its popularity. Notwithstanding the absence of Dr. Helmbold, the celebrated medicine is still manufactured at the laboratory at Philadelphia, and is sold by all respectable druggists. It is warranted for all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs. Beware of counterfeits. Genuine has proprietor's private stamp. John F. Henry, New York, Sole Agent.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. m29 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Reader, if you must have medical aid, try the best of medicine. Pore remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

$10,000 reward can safely be offered for a more infallible cure for PILES than ANAKESIS. The cures performed by this wonderful remedy are simply miraculous. Lotions, ointments and internal remedies produce more harm than good, but ANAKESIS is an external remedy, a simple suppository, supports the tumors, acts as a soothing poultice and medicine, gives instant relief, and cures absolutely. All Doctors prescribe it.—Price $1.00. Sold by Druggists everywhere, and sent free by mail from Principal Depot, 46 Walker str., New York.

THE "LIGHT RUNNING"

"DOMESTIC"

KING OF SEWING Machines.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

It affords me great pleasure to be able to announce to my friends (and to all others interested,) that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Company has fully resumed the manufacture of its UNRIVALLED MACHINE, and will expand its business with increased energy. Its new factories will soon be completed, and every machine will be as nicely constructed as possible. All who have used the Machine for four years or less, pronounce it

THE LIGHTEST RUNNING,
EASIEST TO KEEP IN ORDER,
THE MOST DURABLE,

—AND DECIDEDLY—

The Nearest to Perfection

of any Sewing Machine in the market. It is the intention to have the

"DOMESTIC" SEWING MACHINE

Supercede all others in this City and Vicinity.

—THE—

"DOMESTIC" SEWING MACHINE

—IS THE—

"Best Machine to Use,"

—AND THE—

EASIEST TO SELL.

IT IS DURABLE

AND WILL LAST A LIFE-TIME.

Every Machine

I sell is warranted to be all I claim for it, and a

Written Guarantee

WILL BE GIVEN TO PURCHASERS IF DESIRED.

ALL MACHINES ARE FURNISHED—WITHOUT EXTRA CHARGE—WITH CASTORS, A HEMMER AND FELLER, QUILTING GAUGE, BRAIDER, THUMB-SCREW AND GAUGE, A DOZEN OF ASSORTED NEEDLES, HALF A DOZEN BOBBINS, WRENCH, SCREW DRIVER, OILER, BOTTLE OF OIL AND BOOK OF INSTRUCTIONS.

THE "DOMESTIC" WILL

Hem, Fell,
Bind, Braid,
Cord, Quilt,
Tuck, Ruffle,
Embroider, Gather,

AND SEW ON AT THE SAME TIME.

THE GATHERING ATTACHMENT

As applied to the "DOMESTIC" is made on an

ENTIRELY NEW PRINCIPLE.

No other Machine in the United States having any thing for this purpose that can be compared with this late invention. It is applied directly to the presser bar, and is operated by the movements of the Needle Bar.

ITS ACTIONS ARE POSITIVE—ITS MOTIONS PERFECT.

As some of my friends, connected with the sale of other kinds of sewing machines, have interested themselves so much during the past winter as to falsely represent that the "Domestic" S. M. Co. had failed, and that there could be no parts obtained for the "Domestic" Needles, etc., etc., I will state that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Co. has been making steady progress from the first, and as to parts of the machine, needles, etc., being obtained, I keep them constantly on hand. But although the "Domestic" where it has been sold may be run "from morn until eve" without hiring the operator. We have had scarcely any call for extra parts and are pleased to state that we have not so much business in that way as some of our neighbors. If however any one owning a "Domestic" should in any manner be disaffected, all matters will be made right by calling at my office. I will further state that as heretofore I shall keep on hand all kinds of

SEWING MACHINE NEEDLES,
TUCKERS,
GATHERERS,
EMBROIDERERS,
HEMMERS,
BRAIDERS,
CORDERS,
ETC., ETC., ETC.

The Good Heart of Matt. Carpenter.

[Missouri Republican.]

One day during the special session of 1871—a sweltering day in June—Carpenter had made a speech on the Alabama treaty, and had come home to his obscure lodgings on the corner of F and Thirteenth sts., tired, mad, and out of breath. Fahrenheit marked 100 degrees in the shade. The air was still and shimmered over the hot brick pavements as an oven. It was not a day for good nature. Matt. climbed on the rickety stairway that leads to his rooms, stripped off coat, vest, collar and boots, and laid down on a lounge to smoke a cigar and incidentally to go to sleep.

"Cling! clang! clang!" went his little bell.

"Damme," says Matt, spitefully, "can't they give a fellow a minute's peace? Come in; come in!"

The visitor was a fine, decent old Irish woman, between fifty or sixty, or thereabouts. She looked tired and worn. She had walked into town from somewhere up in Maryland about twenty miles.

"And is this Sinator Cairpinter, Lord bless him?' she inquired.

"Yes, madam, can I do anything for you?" responded the "Sinator," not in the blandest tones.

"Maybe ye might," said the woman. "You see, Sinator, I am a poor Irish woman. Me husband got sick in the war, and he has never been able to do much since, and I've had a hard time of it to get along wid all the doctor's bills to pay and—"

"Well, well, what has all this story got to do with me? Here is a dollar—"

"Och, Sinator, Ochone, it isn't begging I am, and I wouldn't handle or touch of yer money—it's only a chance to work like a dacent woman I want, and they towld me that Sinator-Carpenter wuz a good hearted man, and if I wint and towld him me story he wud help me to get a place in the Treasury Department."

"Treasury Department!" broke in the astounded Senator, "what the——can you do in the Treasury Department?" and he began to imagine either that the woman was crazy or that some heartless practical joker had sent her to him.

"What can I do in the Treasury Department, is it? What can I do? Why, scrub, scrub the floors; what else?"

"Scrub!" said Matt; "well, here is richness! An old woman after senatorial influence to get a job of scrubbing! Just you wait till I put on my hat my good woman, and I'll see what can be done for you."

And in about five minutes the Wisconsin orator, in his shirt sleeves, was on his way to the temple of the exchequer with his protege. The Senatorial influence was potent, and if you call at the Treasury Department and inquire for the woman who holds her position at the request of Matt Carpenter, they will show you a fine, dacint owld Irish woman, with gray hair and wrinkled face, who mops the floors and scrubs the stairways, and she is Matt's "lady friend" there.

No Deception About This.

[Kenton (Ohio) Democrat.]

The Legislature, which adjourned on last Monday, will retire with the curses of both the democratic and republican party. It was the most infamous and worthless Legislature that ever assembled in Columbus. It remained in session longer than most of the former Legislatures and done less; in fact it was a disgrace to Ohio. What little brains was in it was on the republican side of the House, and they had none to spare—not even enough for themselves. Were it not for the election of a United States Senator it would have been a great deal better for the democrats if the republicans had a majority in that body. The democratic members were sadly deficient for a leader, there being no one of any abilities among them.

A Dangerous Visitor.

[London Athenæum.]

A crazy lad caused much consternation, and contrived to do a good deal of mischief, at South Kensington on Thursday of last week, by smashing a glass case which stood in the picture galleries, and its contents. The articles destroyed were of no great art value, being selections from various monster shows, and of modern Bohemian and French glass. In this respect there is small cause for regret; but the cost of the things, to say nothing of the case itself, was prodigious. It seems that a semi-insane youth had threatened something of the kind all day, and was watched, when, indeed, he ought to have been kicked out of the building; but just before 6 o'clock he took advantage of an opportunity and made a complete debacle of the gewgaws. This is, at least, the third incident of this kind in public collections. An idiotic but zealous cobbler smashed the Portland Vase; a half-witted youth broke the panel of a picture in the National Gallery,—and both experienced punishment most ridiculously insufficient and mischievously tardy. For future cases we advocate prompt administration of the beneficently restrictive whip. This instrument is known to have worked wonders in inducing iconoclastic idiots to restrain their so-called "irresistible" proclivities.

The Pious Flirt.

[Lippincott.]

The pious flirt—ah, formidable she is indeed! What man living can resist those soft eyes, that gentle voice which expresses so kind an interest in his spiritual welfare? How sweetly she urges young Brown to forsake this wicked world, its pomps and vanities! How she implores him to attend regularly the house of worship to hear that dear man, the Rev. Mr. Yawn-your-head-off hold forth, while presenting him with those lively and entertaining works, "Steps to the Altar," and "Why am I a Churchman?" and marking the effective passages! How eagerly he promises to read a psalm at the same hour she reads the same psalm! and how he astonishes his gay young friends by breaking from them as the clock strikes ten, leaving them to imagine he is fleeing from his creditors, madly rushes to his room, locks himself in, and gallops through the psalm before she can possibly have read a single verse!

How delicious it is to spend an evening at her papa's mansion, to hear her soft voice utter the most delightful encouragement, to see her as she sits, an embodiment of youthful beauty and piety, her soft jewelled hands knitting a smoking cap for a Dorcas Society, her sweet blue eyes looking at him—certainly very kindly. The first symptom of his overthrow is his regular appearance at Saint Swithin's every Sunday, rain or shine. He sits near and watches her lovely Paris bonnet, and graceful devotional attitude during the service. As the sermon proceeds his attention wanders from it, and is concentrated upon her downcast eyes and sweetly pensive face. He sits still, behaving more decorously in church than he ever did before in his former life, when he was often a fit subject to be led out by the ear, and is apparently very attentive, in hopes that her thoughts are not too high to notice this sacrifice, until the preacher has completed his eighteenthly, and a few words by way of application. He waits on the steps and as she comes out meets her and escorts her home, listens to her eulogies upon the sermon, and does his best to pretend to have heard it.

—The idea that Dickens intended a portraiture of his own thriftless sire in the character of Wilkins Micawber suggests to a sagacious London correspondent that the latter name is but a disguise of the literal expression, "My father." Change the "y" to "i," the "f" to "c," the "t" to "w," and the "h" to "b,"—and behold you have Micawber at once! This powerful speculation reminds one of the old explanation of the derivation of Middletown from Moses—you drop the 'oses and add the 'iddletown!

HENDERSON & CO.,

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

—OF—

Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We clean extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

SASH RIBBONS	25 cents per yard.
SILK TIES	20 cents each.
FRAMES	15 cents each.

How They Drop Shot.

A reporter of the Baltimore American thus describes one of the many processes of making shot in one of the shot-towers of that city: One of the "secrets" of the manufacture is the mixing of the lead with a certain proportion of a combination of mineral substances called "temper." The "temper" is fused with the lead, and gives the molten metal that consistency which makes it drop. If it were not for the "temper" the lead would be molded by the sieve, and would form little pencils instead of round shot. When "BB" shot for instance are to be made, the lead is poured into a pan perforated with holes corresponding to the size. The little pellets come pouring down in a continuous shower, and fall into a tank filled with water on the ground floor. In their descent of 200 feet they are sufficiently cool when they strike the water, although the swift concussions make the tank foam and bubble as if the water was boiling furiously. The shot must fall in water, for if they would strike any firm substance, they would be flattened and knocked out of shape. To get the little pellets perfectly dry after they have been in the "well" is the most difficult and troublesome process of the whole manufacture. An elevator with small buckets (very much like those used in flour mills) carries the shot up as fast as they reach the bottom of the "well," and deposits them in a box sixty feet above the first floor. The water drips from the buckets as they go up, and not much is poured into the receiver above, although it is intended to be a sort of dripping machine. From this receiver the shot runs down a spout into a drying pan, which greatly resembles a gigantic shoe, made of sheet iron. The pan rests at an angle which permits the wet shot to roll slowly down to the chamber below, and the pellets become perfectly dry as they pass over the warm sheet iron.

—The Brooklyn Argus characterizes the hen as the most popular of females as she is engaged for every set.

—A young man in Rochester, who is very fond of euchre, and also very fond of the daughter of a pillar of one of the orthodox churches, was taking tea at the house of his adored some time since, and had some fruit cake offered him. Being somewhat confused on account of his situation, as the cake was held out to him, he very politely said: "I pass!" The father hearing him, and having played in some of his younger days, was horror-struck at his infatuation for the game, and thought he would teach him a lesson. He spoke bluntly: "You pass? then I order you up—and there's the door; I shall make a march."

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore, Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Seavey Island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House and its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-Office.

After Years of Waiting.

"I shall see you to-night, Mrs. Kathlane?"

"At the Grangers'? Yes, I shall be there. I hope it won't be a crush."

"Why? I rather like a crush."

"Oh! A crush makes me feel vicious."

Rupert Thornbury smiled as he looked down at the speaker. Something had evidently put her out. "Are you often vicious-ly disposed, Mrs. Kathlane? It is news to me."

"I wish you would not call me that, Rupert. Mrs. Kathlane! You do it on purpose, and I don't like it."

The last words were spoken like a petulent child, and there was a cloud on the face which looked up for a moment from the soft, vividly colored wools which the white and slender fingers were knitting into some incomprehensible "fancy-work." A very beautiful face it was, and a very beautiful woman was little Mrs. Kathlane; and no one in the wide world was more thoroughly convinced of the fact than Rupert Thornbury.

She was slight and small of figure—girlish-looking still, despite the four and twenty years. No other woman would have dared, with her complexion, to wear the colors she did; often in defiance of ordinary rules. She wore, this morning, a deep, royal purple dress with purple bands in her black hair, and looked, as no other woman could have looked—charming. Her hair drooped over her forehead in lustrous waves, and was fastened with a light golden comb. Her face was almost marvelous in its perfect form and brilliant coloring, and her great dark eyes, with their lashes, were enough of themselves to turn an ordinary man's head.

"I don't like it," she said again, glancing at her companion, who was abstractedly tangling the bright wools, apparently lost in thought, "and I shall be seriously angry with you if you persist in being so formal. For it is formal after you have known me since I was a little child, to speak as though we were strangers."

"I'll not call you so again, Millicent. Only——" Mr. Thornbury paused.

"Only what?" returned his imperious little lady, giving him another searching glance.

"Things have changed a great deal since you were a child, Millicent. You are a woman now, wealthy, courted, flattered; and I—but it is no good talking of these things. I must be going. Will you promise me the first waltz, to-night?"

"Certainly. I hope you appreciate my kindness. I waltz very rarely, you know."

"I do appreciate it; and now, I must go down to that 'stupid old office,' as you call it, and make up for lost time. Good morning, Millicent—don't forget your promise," and then he was gone. Gone, and unconscious, as he walked swiftly down the street, that Millicent Kathlane's dark eyes were looking after him, and that when she turned back to her work, a soft sigh fluttered from her beautiful lips, and a shadow clouded her face.

He had known her, as she said, since she was a little child; and he, a strong, rude lad, had loved the flower-faced little Millicent dearly; and when at the age of eighteen, he had been sent away from his home to qualify himself to play a part in the world, news came to him that Millicent, "this little Milly," was married. It was her father's wish, the gossips said. Mr. Kathlane, the suitor, was immensely wealthy, and having been fascinated by Millicent's beauty, her parents had used all their influence with her; and the end was she was married. Millicent, now Mrs. Kathlane, went away to her husband's home, and Rupert Thornbury wearily went on with his dull, distasteful labor, with not even the old boyish dreams to lighten his task.

Six years more passed slowly by, making many changes in the affairs of both. Mr. Kathlane died suddenly after two or three years of married life, and Millicent went abroad with some friends.

She had been back nearly a year now, and had settled down to a town life. During this period the old childish friendship of Rupert Thornbury had been warmly renewed; and Rupert had discovered that, charming as she was in her childhood and girlhood, now that she was a woman she was infinitely more so.

During this year, life had grown a deal brighter to Mr. Thornbury; he was prosperous, slowly and steadily, and had gained many friends. Anxious mammas looked upon him with favor, and many bright eyes gave him bewitching glances—hitherto in vain. His whole heart—and he knew it—was still with Millicent Kathlane; but her marriage had raised her, both as to wealth and position, so far above himself, that he did not, except at some fond delusive moment, dare to aspire to her. He was only a city man, plodding on in his close city office, with his three or four clerks under him.

"How beautiful she is!" he thought, as he walked away from the house. "Just the same little Milly at heart, too, as in the dear old days. And her glances—oh, if I dare to believe in them!—seem as true to me as they were then. But what would the world say?"

That night saw him at Mrs. Granger's—a fashionable woman with some fashionable daughters, one of whom, Cornelia, had made a dead set at Mr. Thornbury. He stood in the lighted room, watching eagerly for Millicent; but it was not until very late that she arrived. As she came down the long rooms—moving as easily and gracefully as though she had been, from earliest childhood, accustomed to reign in society—a murmur of admiration followed her.

She was dressed in a trailing robe of pale silvery blue, with an overdress of soft white lace; her beautiful neck and arms were bare, save for their ornaments of fretted gold; her face was untouched by paint or powder, and her vivid coloring made her beauty seem almost unearthly as compared with some of the inane faces around her. Her black hair, elaborately dressed, was fastened here and there with drooping sprays of scarlet flowers, and at her bosom, looping her overdress, and in her jeweled boquetsere, the scarlet buds glowed, and burned.

"Is she not lovely?" That was a question which every one felt could be answered but in the affirmative. And many an envious heart was hidden under the smiling faces which greeted her.

"There is Miss Kathlane, Mr. Thornbury," said Cornelia Granger, a tall, pale, ill-natured girl, to whom Rupert had been saying civil nothings for the last few minutes, and who was furiously jealous of Mrs. Kathlane in her heart of hearts. "You gentlemen are wild about her, I believe. Red and blue—what excruciating taste! I wonder her maid does not teach her better."

"Every one has not your critical eyes, Miss Granger," said Rupert, laughing. "I thought her dress charming."

"Of course." Miss Cornelia was not an amiable girl, as we have said, and at that moment her temper was pinching her rather sorely. "Perhaps you make one of those who are wild over her, Mr. Thornbury?"

"It would be no use to me, I expect, if I were," replied Rupert, in his candor.

"Well, I suppose not—as she is so soon to be married again."

"Married again!" he uttered.

"So report runs," said Miss Granger, toying with her fan.

"To whom? I had not heard of it."

"To Mr. Worthington—a cousin of her late husband, you know."

"I know him," cried Rupert, feeling he knew not how. "Dick Worthington's not worthy of her. It would be a desecration."

"She may not think so. It is said there was a great deal of intimacy before Mr. Kathlane died. She married him simply for his money—that's well known—and the handsome cousin used to be a very frequent visitor. There was a deal of gossip about it at the time, and—but there's Dick Worthington now. Look how her color rises when she speaks to him."

"Are you quite certain your information is correct, Miss Granger?"

The pale eyes glanced at him again and then looked away.

"About the engagement? Quite sure, Mr. Thornbury. At least, the world is sure of it. I am neither more nor less wise than it."

Mr. Thornbury did not change color at the news, or seem, in reality, to feel much surprise. He stood laughing and chattering with the young lady for a few moments on different subjects, and then excusing himself, sauntered across the room to where Mrs. Kathlane sat, surrounded by an admiring group, of whom Richard Worthington was one.

"It is my waltz," said Mr. Thornbury as she looked up, and greeted him with one of her brightest smiles, "Or are you too tired?"

"Tired?" She laughed a little silvery laugh as she rose. "I am never tired of dancing. Richard, I will leave my flowers and fan with you as a hostage."

It was nothing, this leaving with him her fan and flowers—it was like a thousand other little coquettish ways which she had; but Rupert, thinking—oh, so bitterly! of what had just been told him, fancied that he saw something deeper than her usual light coquetry in the glance she gave the handsome young fellow, and groaned in spirit. It seemed a full confirmation of what he had heard.

One, two, three. One, two, three. "You are shockingly out of step, Rupert!" said she, after the first turn. "What is the matter? You look as stern as if you had seen a ghost."

"I have," he said, almost grimly—"the ghost of a dead hope;" and she, half frightened at his tone, looked up at him questioningly. But in another moment he smiled back at her, and she was reassured.

"Don't talk nonsense, Rupert. There, you are dancing beautifully now. What were you and that odious Cornelia Granger talking about so long."

"Odious, do you call her?"

"Well, I do, Rupert. I think her so; she has not a spark of good feeling in her. Don't you go and tell, now."

"Do you think she is truthful, Millicent?"

"No, I don't. Take care!"

They whirled lightly through the dance, Rupert almost startling Millicent by his unwonted gaiety, laughing and chatting like anyone but his grave self; and she, the color deepening in her cheeks, the light in her eyes growing momentarily brighter, looked like a veritable "dance spirit," so airily did she float through the rooms.

"How beautifully they waltz!" Even Cornelia Granger involuntarily spoke in admiration, and a slender youth near her gave it as his opinion that "Thistledown couldn't be lighter than Mrs. Kathlane in a waltz."

"Are you tired?" said Rupert, looking down at the beautiful face; Millicent for an answer, said she could keep on forever. And so they danced on and on, until Rupert saw the bright color fading away, and the sensitive mouth beginning to droop a little at the corners.

"You are tired," he said, and then, before she could answer, he whirled her through the low, open window, into the cool, fresh air on the balcony.

"Thanks," she said. "I believe I was a little faint. Will you get my cloak?" And then, until her cloak came, she sat quiet like a tired child, with her head resting wearily on the railing.

"The next dance but one is Richard's," she said, as he wrapped the soft white cloak around her tenderly. "I must not slight him. But we will stay out here until then, unless you wish to go back—in which case I will not keep you with me."

"I shall not dance again to-night," he answered, "unless it is with you."

"I am engaged for every one of them, I am afraid. I could have been engaged three or four times over," she added laughing. "I am sorry, Rupert, but—"

"No matter," he interrupted her, almost rudely, "I must get used to it, I suppose." He was standing before her, looking down at her, and she, in her pretty, imperious way, laid her hand on his arm.

"You are cross to-night," she said. "Sit here beside me, and tell me what it is that troubles you."

He hesitated a moment, and then, with a reckless determination to disclose everything, and afterwards leave her for ever, he told her the story of his long love for her—told her in a fierce, hard way, which almost frightened her, and yet made her reverence and admire him more, perhaps, than she had done before.

"I have loved you, Millicent, I love you now, more than you can imagine, and I have not told you because—because you are so far removed from me in every way. I feared you would think me mercenary. I feared—O, Millicent! Heaven only knows how I have loved you; how I have longed to tell you and yet have not had the courage. Now it is too late, either for harm or good. I shall pray for your happiness always with the man you have chosen."

"What do you mean, Rupert?"

The profound wonder in her voice made him hesitate. "I have heard of your engagement to Mr. Worthington."

"Who told you that?" she asked. But in the same moment Richard Worthington stepped through the low window and came toward them.

"I have been searching for you everywhere," he said, laughing in his boyish, good-natured way. "It's my dance, most respected cousin Millicent." And she was forced to go, without another word to the man beside her.

"Have you and Mr. Thornbury been quarreling?" said Richard, who, to do him justice, was entirely innocent of any thoughts of Mrs. Kathlane, or of anybody else, as a wife. "He looked black as a thunder-cloud, and you are pale."

"I was a little faint after the waltz," she answered. "Don't tease me, Dick," and so Richard desisted from his inquiries.

Meanwhile, Rupert Thornbury, left alone with only his own thoughts for company, sat as utterly and entirely wretched as a man can be but once in his lifetime. Inside the rooms the music kept untiringly on; the gay dancers floated past the windows; every face was bright with smiles. Outside there, in the darkness, a man sat alone struggling bravely to lift the cross and bear it uncomplainingly.

How long he sat there he knew not, but at last he roused himself, and rose to his feet. "I must go back," he said. "Cornelia Granger will have a delicate bit of gossip if she sees me here."

So he went in and showed himself, and said a few words to Miss Granger, and strolled about, he knew not whither—talking to one, talking to another—and presently found himself up stairs near the library.

The library door was ajar, and as he entered a little figure all in silver, blue and soft white lace, with scarlet buds glowing and burning here and there, turned and advanced a step toward him. There were tears in the great black eyes, and the red lips were trembling like a grieved child's.

"Was it untrue, Millicent?"

"Every word of it, Dick, indeed! O, Rupert?"

He clasped her hands almost rudely.

"You are not engaged?"

Only a look answered him. He caught her to him, pouring forth all the sweet love-vows that he had sensitively refrained from before; and Millicent whispered that she never should be engaged, unless it was to him.

A pity, but Miss Cornelia Granger had chanced to look into the library.

The bulkhead of Gardner's dam in upper Wolf River, Shawana County, Wis., gave way on Thursday night, while nine men were engaged in raising the gates. Four men, Nathaniel Parkes, Jerry Casey, Nicholas Noltz and Charles Mahoka, were instantly killed and the others badly injured.

At the examination of the breach in the fatal reservoir at Northampton, Mass., by the Legislative Committee, it was proven that the work had not been done according to specifications, as the foundations had not been built four feet below the bottom of the reservoir as specified, and the result was that the water worked through the earth under the foundation, and gradually caused the breach. The embankment also of the wall proves to be forty feet narrower than the contract specified.

By the breaking away of a reservoir on the Pochasset Brook, near Providence, R. I., April 13, 1840, four dams, two dwelling-houses, and several other buildings were swept away, and eighteen persons drowned.

The schooner Phœnix capsized in a whirlwind off Ship Channel Keys, and out of seventeen passengers five women and one man were drowned.

James Martin and wife of Rockland, Me., had a quarrel, in the course of which Mrs. Martin threw a pair of shears at her husband's head, which he succeeded in dodging. The shears struck one of their children, four years of age, in the knee, inflicting an ugly wound, from the effects of which the child died in a few days.

A horrible murder was committed at Summit Hill, near Mauch Chunk, Pa., on the night of the 19th. Kate Linbach, a beautiful girl of sixteen, was enticed from home and killed in some low brush just outside the town. The only wounds were on the head and were evidently made with a stone. It is believed that the murder was committed by a man who had deceived the girl, in order to hide his guilt.

Reports from Little Rock, Ark., say it is generally believed that Brooks is still in the city, but many of his followers have left the State, fearing arrest for treason. It is believed that a general system of fraud has been practiced on the State, and the auditor's and other books of the State officials will be thoroughly overhauled. All the people of both sides denounce Senator Clayton and Congressman Dorsey, and if they return to the State they will be arrested under indictments for conspiracy against the State. The negro Murphy (Brook's leader) has been arrested at Pine Bluff, and affairs, are more quiet there. Hon. Henry Page, State treasurer, has resigned. The legislature passed a resolution appointing a committee to investigate the conduct of Senators Clayton and Dorsey, and the representatives in Congress, in attempting to overthrow the State government. Commissioners were appointed to supervise and control the ensuing election for delegates. Spread-Eagleism.

[Hartford Courant.]

It is quite the chic now with the nil admirari school in journalism and in politics to sneer at any outburst of patriotism or "spread-eagleism." The superior tone of the New York Nation has great attractions for them. The old sort of patriotism, of Americanism, seems a little vulgar to them. But, for our part, we still think the eagle, with all his soaring propensities, is a better bird than the owl. The owl looks "awful wise," but he never proposes anything. He is a gentlemanly bird in refraining from any excitement; but he never could have dumped the tea into Boston harbor, nor built bonfires for the Declaration, nor "licked" the British, nor put down the late rebellion, we fear. The eagle we regard as an honorable though ambitious bird. He would both pay his debts and celebrate the glory of his country. Perhaps in doing this he might spread his wings a little, but this would be better than sitting on the fence and winking his eyes, like the owl, letting thievish boys pull out his tail-feathers.

A Vermont Flood.

On the 6th of June, 1810, there occurred a serious water disaster in the northern part of Vermont, near the line, and where the water flows northward towards Canada.

Long Pond was situated partly in Glover and partly in Greenborough. This pond was one and a half miles long, and about half a mile wide, and discharged its waters to the south, forming one of the head branches of the river Lamaille. On the date mentioned about sixty persons went to the pond for the purpose of opening an outlet to the north into Barton River, that the mills on that stream might receive an additional supply of water.

A small channel was excavated, and water commenced running in a northerly direction. It happened that the northern barrier of the pond consisted entirely of quicksand, except an encrusting of clay next the water. The sand was immediately removed by the current and a large channel formed. The basin formed by the encrusting of clay was incapable of sustaining the incumbent mass of waters, and it broke. The whole pond immediately took a northerly course, and in fifteen minutes from that time its bed was left entirely bare. It was discharged so suddenly that the country below was instantly inundated. The deluge advanced like a wall of waters, sixty or seventy feet in height, and twenty rods in width, levelling the forests and hills, and filling up the valleys, and sweeping off mills, houses, barns, fences, cattle, horses, sheep as it passed, for the distance of more than ten miles, and barely giving the inhabitants sufficient notice of its approach to escape with their lives into the mountains. A rock supposed to weigh more than 100 tons was removed half a mile from its bed. The waters moved so rapidly as to reach Memphremagog Lake, distance 27 miles, in about six hours from the time they left the pond. Nothing now remains of the pond but its bed, a part of which is cultivated and a part over-grown with bushes and wild grass, with a small brook running through it, which is now the head branch of Barton River. The channel through which the waters escaped is 127 feet in depth and several rods in width. A pond, some distance below, was at first entirely filled with sand, which has since settled down, and it is now about one-half its former dimensions. Marks of the ravages are still to be seen through nearly the whole course of Barton River.

—A Sunday-school scholar being asked what became of men who deceive their fellow-men, promptly exclaimed, "They go to Europe."

Seven Millions of Pores.

All day and all night the exhausted particles of every human system are passing off through seven millions of quarter-inch hose—that being about the length of the sweat-ducts connected with the pores. If these are obstructed, sickness ensues; if they were sealed up, the consequences would be death. It is one of the provinces of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to keep the superficial escape pipes open, as well as those larger, excretory organs, the bowels. The stomach and the skin sympathize, and it is through the stomach that the Bitters act upon the cuticle, keeping it moist, elastic and unfevered. The famous vegetable invigorant is a marvellous medicine; no other preparation known contains such a variety of curative and preservative elements, or acts, at the same time, in such a variety of beneficial ways. In dyspepsia it strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite, and controls the liver; in fever and ague, it breaks up the fits; in cases of physical prostration it is literally a vital specific.

Helmbold's Buchu is still in the zenith of its popularity. Notwithstanding the absence of Dr. Helmbold, the celebrated medicine is still manufactured at the laboratory at Philadelphia, and is sold by all respectable druggists. It is warranted to rid the system of the kidney and urinary organs. Beware of counterfeits. Genuine has proprietor's private stamp. John F. Henry, New York, Sole Agent.

A Crown of Glory.—Nature's dowry to all her children is a fine head of hair. Kings cannot give, nor wealth purchase this inestimable gift. Take care of it, lest you loose it. BEARINE is a healthful invigorating Dressing. 4

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, scarce one house but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His ALL-HEALING CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Reader, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

$10,000 reward can safely be offered for a more infallible cure for PILES than ANAKESIS. The cures performed by this wonderful remedy are simply miraculous. Lotions, ointments and internal remedies produce more harm than good, but ANAKESIS is an external remedy, a simple suppository, supports the tumors, acts as a soothing poultice and medicine, gives instant relief, and cures absolutely. THE "LIGHT RUNNING"

"DOMESTIC"

KING OF SEWING Machines.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

It affords me great pleasure to be able to announce to my friends (and to all others interested,) that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Company has fully resumed the manufacture of its UNRIVALLED MACHINE, and will expand its business with increased energy. Its new factories will soon be completed, and every machine will be as nicely constructed as possible. All who have used the Machine for four years or less, pronounce it

AND SEW ON AT THE SAME TIME.

THE GATHERING ATTACHMENT

As applied to the "DOMESTIC" is made on an

ENTIRELY NEW PRINCIPLE.

No other Machine in the United States having any thing for this purpose that can be compared with this late invention. It is applied directly to the presser bar, and is operated by the movements of the Needle Bar.

ITS ACTIONS ARE POSITIVE—ITS MOTIONS PERFECT.

As some of my friends, connected with the sale of other kinds of sewing machines, have interested themselves so much during the past winter as to falsely represent that the "Domestic" S. M. Co. had failed, and that there could be no parts obtained for the "Domestic" Needles, etc., etc., I will state that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Co. has been making steady progress from the first, and as to parts of the machine, needles, etc., being obtained, I keep them constantly on hand. But although the "Domestic" where it has been sold may be run "from morn until eve" without tiring the operator. We have had scarcely any call for extra parts and are pleased to state that we have not so much business in that way as some of our neighbors. If however any one owning a "Domestic" should in any manner be disaffected, all matters will be made right by calling at my office. I will further state that as heretofore I shall keep on hand all kinds of

SEWING MACHINE NEEDLES,
TUCKERS,
GATHERERS,
EMBROIDERERS,

Local Matters.

The Eastern Railroad Conductors.

The Concord Patriot speaks as follows concerning the Eastern Railroad and the recent wholesale removal of passenger train conductors from that road:

It appears that the Directors became satisfied that all was not right and that the Company was being defrauded in some way. The result was that detectives were employed to the number of about twelve, who went to work to see what they could find out. They were mostly females, who would get on the cars at way stations, pay their fares to the conductors and note down the date and amount paid to each. Having done so for some time and on all of the trains, they made their reports at headquarters which were compared with the returns made by the conductors, which returns exhibited a large falling off from the amount paid in. In some cases, where fifty dollars were paid, only twenty were returned. The delinquent conductors were called upon to explain, which they did, some acknowledging their wrong doings and turning over to the attorney of the company their bank books and deposits and other property purchased with the funds abstracted from the road. The investigation so far would indicate that about twenty out of the thirty conductors, have been guilty of fraud to an alarming degree. It is supposed that the amount illegally taken daily, would amount to one thousand dollars, or three hundred thousand dollars a year. Let us hope that this estimate is too high and that the road has not been thus shamefully defrauded. The Eastern Railroad has been in trouble for years. Its stock has gone down in the market and the company has been obliged to pass its dividends, yet the road has the best local business of any road in New England. This action of the conductors gives the reason why the road has not paid.

The Boston Post has the following:

For reasons which the results show to have been well founded, a very thorough investigation has been going on for the past ten or twelve weeks as to the conduct of the employes generally, and particularly as to the manner in which the passenger conductors have performed their duties. This investigation has been carefully and impartially made, and has developed the existence of "irregularities" of a serious character. In a number of instances confession of wrong has been made; where ability existed, partial restitution has been made to the corporation. Several of the conductors have been found free from just cause of suspicion, while in many cases damaging evidence has been supplemented by very unsatisfactory explanations. The investigation is still in progress, with the determination on the part of the management to protect the innocent, to weed out the guilty and to prevent the recurrence of similar wrongs, by the enforcement of a much more rigid system of returns and accountability. The habit so common upon almost all roads of paying fares in the cars is the fundamental trouble in this, as it has been in many other similar cases, and its prohibition by legislative enactment would seem to be demanded, thus removing both temptation and opportunity.

"Davy Crockett."

It is refreshing that the monotony of the drama as personated by travelling companies generally is relieved by such character acting as that of Mr. Frank Mayo. Quite a large audience witnessed his "Davy Crockett" as presented here for the first time, Wednesday evening, and all present pronounced it well done. One who has seen Joe Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle" unconsciously begins to compare Mayo's "Davy Crockett" with it as the different acts bring out the fine points of "Davy's" character. In the personation of the latter drama Miss Rosa Rand divides with Mr. Mayo the attention of the audience and offers a pleasing contrast to "Rip Van Winkle's" wretched "Gretchen." Miss Rand is as lovely and fascinating as any lady on the stage at the present time, and her acting is charming. During the drama, there were touches of pathos in Mr. Mayo's rendition which seemed akin to Joe Jefferson. The play lacks the sadness of "Rip's" parting and the thrilling scene in which "Meenie" recognizes her father; yet in spite of all this "Davy Crockett" is a masterpiece in the hands of a master, who should not do otherwise than his best under the encouragement of such a piquant little lady as "Eleanor Vaughn." There is a general desire to witness the representation of "Davy Crockett" again, and we hope Mr. Mayo will be induced to return during the Summer. Mr. Mayo and Miss Rand captured a Portsmouth audience by storm at their first appearence, and that is a rare occurrence in these days.

The Crusade Arrests.

[Cincinnati Times.]

Somebody has blundered—in fact, several people. Just at the time when the women's crusade work in Cincinnati seemed most hopeless, weeks ago, and when temperance ladies set out to go quietly from house to house, using no other weapon than moral suasion and the pledge, they were hooted at, bespattered with mud, rudely hustled and assaulted. Even the most decided opponents of the crusade movement—among those, we mean, who had any particle of the chivalrous sentiment common to American citizens—were roused to indignation by this brutal behavior. It set the movement fairly on its feet. Never was fanatical opposition more untimely or more ill-advised, for the people who wanted "this thing stopped." And so this folly was kept up, until the emboldened women decided to take a step in advance. They took it—against the opinion of many of the most sincere friends of the temperance cause. They began going upon the streets to sing and pray.

It was becoming apparent to most outsiders, if not to all engaged in the work, that the crusade in a city like this would prove ineffective, and that its continuance was inexpedient. If let alone by the boorish mobs and by the public authorities, in all probability it would have waned and disappeared ere this. But now comes the riot of Friday, followed by the action of the authorities—to do what? Not to close the saloons daily and hourly violating the law, not to punish the ruffianly assailants of women, but to stop the crusade by the strong arm of the police. This was the most serious blunder of all. It had been timidly suggested and half attempted once before. But now the police set about the little job in earnest, and forty-three most respectable women were marched to the station-house. What was accomplished by this operation requires no very remarkable astuteness to discover. A glance at the record, as given in our local columns, will suffice.

The meetings yesterday tell a significant story. The spirit which is abroad to-day, and which will be aroused throughout the State, promises anything but a speedy termination of the excitement over this disturbing question. At no time have the temperance workers here been so strong or so determined to persevere in their war against the liquor traffic as to-day. Their opponents have badly blundered.

"Who are You, Sir?"

[Chattanooga Commercial.]

A day or two ago a prominent iron man of Chattanoooga called at the express office for a package. It was a package of greenbacks, of good dimensions. The obliging money-clerk said to our prominent iron man that he must get some one to identify him. This made our prominent iron man feel like he was not so prominent after all. He went to the door of the express office, and observing one of our bank presidents, beckoned him to come to his assistance. Our bank president marched directly to the obliging money-clerk, and said: "This is Mr.——, of the —— Iron Company." "And who are you, sir?" says the obliging money-clerk. At this juncture things became somewhat mixed, when our iron man introduced our bank president, and then our bank president introduced our iron man, when the latter got his money, and everything is now all right.

Strange Effect of Hot Sealing Wax.

The Nashville (Tenn.) Union says that about fifteen months ago a young man employed as bookkeeper by a firm in that city, dropped some hot sealing wax on his thumb nail, while sealing up a package of money; six weeks afterwards the thumb began to pain him, and he then found that proud flesh was growing under the nail, and this grew so serious that it was found necessary to amputate the thumb at the first joint, and as the bone had become affected, a second amputation, by which the entire thumb was removed, was rendered necessary. This last amputation took place a few days ago, and it is hoped that no futher operation will be required, although the arm is very much swollen, and a large lump has formed at the arm pit.

—Matches are said to be made in heaven. If this is really their place of manufacture, says the Indianapolis Sentinel, it seems a pity that a box purporting to contain 100 should be found upon examination to hold but thirty-five.

—Before a Nevada witness goes on the stand he unbuckles and removes two revolvers and a Bowie-knife, and the lawyer calls him Mr. So-and-so, and is very careful not to refer to anything unpleasant which has ever happened in the witness' history.

HENDERSON & CO.,

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

—OF—

Bonnets, Hats,
Flowers and
Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

SASH RIBBONS, - - - - - - 25 cents per yard.
SILK TIES - - - - - - - - - 20 cents each.
FRAMES - - - - - - - - - - 15 cents each.

Observations.

[Max Adeler.]

A patent medicine advertisement says 'this article will cure rheumatism of nineteen years' standing.' As far as it goes, this is perfectly satisfactory, but we want light upon another view of the matter. Suppose a man's rheumatism is only of three years' standing, must he let it stand sixteen years more before the medicine will cure it? or if it has stood twenty years is there no hope of a remedy? we want to know about this. It is going to be very unpleasant for a man to endure rheumatism for seventeen or eighteen years before he can take medicine for it.

We had quite an exciting time over at Chubb's the other day. His chimney would not draw, and he sent for a man to examine it. The man went out on the roof and tying a broom to a rope, dropped it down to see if the flue was clear. Meantime Chubb got inside the fireplace for the purpose of examing the flue below, and just as he did so the soft end of the broom touched his head two or three times, as the man jerked it up and down. Chubb sprang out into the room in a condition of frantic excitement. He was certain that there was a wild animal of some kind in the chimney choking it up. He seized his gun and determined to kill it. So, holding the muzzle in the flue he pulled the trigger. While he was getting the gun, the man on the roof completed his investigations and sat down on the top of the chimney to rest himself and enjoy the scenery. As soon as Chubb's gun went off, the man knew about it, and he did not wait for further suggestions. He suddenly slid to the roof and from thence to the shed where he rolled about in agony. He weighed one pound more when they took him home than he did when he came, and the doctors consider it doubtful if they can ever dig all the shot out of his flesh. The next man that comes to examine Chubb's chimney will have him locked up somewhere with his gun until the experiments are concluded.

—A western editor says he knows of a young man who is so infatuated with his lovely young wife that he lights the candle two or three times every night to look at her. We know several young men who think just as much of their better-halves, and yet never pretend to hold a candle to them. A correspondent says: We know another, who would slip out of bed, thermometer 10 degrees below, snow two feet deep, wind blowing a gale, walk four miles to see another man's wife, and get back again before day-light, rather than wake his darling up.

FIFTY PER CENT.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '25; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore. Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Garrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are hereby saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom it have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. Ayer's Hair Vigor.

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

Advancing years, sickness, care, disappointment, and hereditary predisposition, all turn the hair gray, and deprive of them incline it to shed prematurely. AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, by long and extensive use, has proven that it stops the falling of the hair immediately; often renews the growth, and always surely restores its color when faded or gray. It stimulates the nutritive organs to healthy activity, and preserves both the hair and its beauty. Thus brashy, weak or sickly hair becomes glossy, pliable and strengthened; lost hair regrows with lively expression, falling hair is checked and established; thin hair thickens; and faded or gray hair resumes its original color. Its operation is sure and harmless. It cures dandruff, heals all humors, and keeps the scalp cool, clean and soft—under which conditions diseases of the scalp are impossible.

As a dressing for ladies' hair, the VIGOR is praised for its grateful and agreeable perfume, and valued for the soft luster and richness of tone it imparts.

The Silk Hat.

[Junius Henri Browne.]

The silk hat, as it is generally styled, is entitled to the distinction of being at once the most uncomfortable, and the worst looking head-covering that has been known to civilization. Almost everybody admits this; and yet the capital monstrosity is worn more and more every year. It represents the prevalence of custom and conventionality over reason and good taste; it evinces force without foundation, strength without substantiality; and so involves and iterates contradiction. In raiment it is an absurdity; in logic a fallacy; in form a transgression.

Fashion is rarely squared with fitness; has often been grotesque and ridiculous; but, when and where it has been so, its reign has usually proved brief. Folly is apt by excess to light the underlying mine of good sense, and blow itself to pieces, even though it re-arise in new shape to continue its imbecilities. With the silk hat it is different. Already it has existed for a century; has extended from France, where it had its unfortunate and unbecoming origin, to every quarter of the globe; still pushes its way and insures its prosperity, in spite of countless arguments, any one of which is enough to certify its extinction.

The reputation France has enjoyed of being pre-eminently the land of art and grace, deserves to be impaired by its invention and toleration of the cylindrical head-piece. Had it been guilty of many such abominations, it would certainly have lost its æsthetic fame.

From inexplicable causes, the silk hat has come to be regarded as a symbol, in place of a perversion, of civilization. It is the first thing a barbarian seizes to deck himself with, thereby augmenting his barbarity of semblance fivefold. Our aboriginals as well as the natives of Polynesia, all savages, indeed, delight to strut in what is vulgarly called a stove-pipe—so called perhaps, because the stove is the best place for it. A more ludicrous object than a son of the forest in moccasins, beads, war-paint, and blanket, surmounted by that deformity, is hard to imagine. It is beyond burlesque, since it includes the highest elements of burlesque in its amazing incongruity. A silk hat, under any circumstances, is an embodied impropriety, an emphasized awkwardness. It is the irony of fashion, a sarcasm on taste. No human being, in any age or of any nation, ever loooked well under it; no human being ever will or ever can. Crown a picture or a statue with it, and the crown becomes a cross that is unbearable. The most august personage, the grandest hero, must be rendered ridiculous by it. Conceive, if you can, Pericles, Epaminondas, Cæsar, Pompey, Charlemagne, or Barbarossa, wearing a silk hat! With such an impediment, the Greek would not have become a great leader; nor would the Theban have won the lasting gratitude of his countrymen. The first of Romans must have lost dignity in death, and his illustrious rival would never have been able to raise legions by the stamping of his foot.

The sable cylinder destroys alike the classic and romantic, the poetic and picturesque. In this bold and practical age even, it mars beauty and stifles sentiment. It makes the dull man look duller, the plain man plainer. He who can endure it shows his capacity for endurance, not its possibility of ornament. Its hideousness is illustrated by ever change in fashion. The spring style escapes criticism until the autumn style appears, when it at once becomes absurd. The silk hat is bad enough at any time; but, out of season, it imitates total depravity. The wearer of an unseasonable hat should be either a humorist or a bankrupt. In the metropolis, he is considered, if not a millionaire, a person who has lost both his money and his credit. The sole claim some men have to unenviable distinction consists in their sustainment of unfashionable hats. Relinquishing silk, they might wear any skull-covering they like; but, cleaving to the silk, all latitude is denied. A silk hat put on, is an acknowledgement of conventionality; is equivalent to entering into bonds to follow the mode. He who hopes for independence afterward, unless he surrender the habit altogether, reckons not the consequence of his first act.

Civic processions in the country, notably those of St. Patrick's Day, evince the unsuitableness and grotesqueness of this peculiar hat. It is presented in infinite variety; each variety looking the worse, the farther it is removed from the prevailing style. There are high crowns, low crowns, bell crowns, straight crowns, sloping crowns; broad rims, narrow rims, curved rims, curled rims, dating back for five, ten, or fifteen years, and manifestly withdrawn from their seclusion only for special occasions. It is as good as a farce to stand at a street corner, and watch the passing hats; every phase of humor is expressed in them. Punch winks and grimaces in the archaic shapes and Momus laughs from the well-worn nap.

Americans, as a rule, have no reverence for hats of a by-gone era. They respect them solely for their contemporaneous character; throwing them aside when fashion has outlawed them, and purchasing new ones, whatever their unbecomingness. Not so the Europeans, who hold a silk hat as something sacred, to be treasured for a lifetime—perhaps to be handed down from sire to son. Many of the head-coverings displayed by the denizens of the Old World are obviously heirlooms. They must have been made for other generations; and they are unconsciously paraded for the laughter of the present day. In England, a silk hat is regarded as a badge of respectability—that momentous and mysterious something which every true Briton is fearful he may not attain; and a silk hat from which the silk has departed to give place to grease, dents and decay, is thought preferable to any other kind of head-piece, however presentable. London is the only city in the world where one consults his interest and convenience by wearing a silk hat. They who have spent any time there, must remember how much annoyance and bickering has been saved them by the adoption of the approved cylinder. Servants, porters, cab-drivers, shop-keepers, are convinced that any man, without such surmounting, is a cad or an underling, and that they are privileged, therefore, to snub, insult, or swindle him. Outside of London and England, the unshapely thing has no other advantage than that which fashion yields; but to many, even of our sex, fashion is imperative.

Readables.

A London paper tells of three men and two boys who lately floated for thirty-two days in the Indian ocean in a small boat, before they were rescued. For the last eleven days they had neither food nor water, except that the mate shot a bird which chanced to fly over. They chewed lead to moisten their throats, tried to eat their boots and jelly fish, and in delirium sought to kill one another—inviting death. Blood from wounds in a fray was eagerly drank, but when the frenzy passed, the men would shake hands and kiss each other. Lots were cast, and a boy in the boat doomed to be killed; but this the mate, who acted throughout most resolutely, prevented.

"Fight and be friends" is an old motto and a good one, but an ex-Union soldier named Patterson won't swear by it. He was so brutally treated in Libby Prison during the war by one Major Cady, a Confederate officer, that he vowed to be revenged sooner or later. The other day, as luck would have it, Patterson met Cady by accident in the streets of Monroe, Michigan, made himself known, and then gave him a sound thrashing, for which he was arrested, and fined $25 and costs. So revenge and Dame Justice were both satisfied, and Patterson thinks it cheap at that price.

The Graphic says: The report that General Butler would not run for Congress next term has developed an unexpected amount of Congressional talent lying about loose in the Essex district. The amount of unoccupied brain power in that region is fearful to contemplate.

The sale of the late Cyrus Wakefield's real estate at the North-End, Boston, realized $546,803. The mortgages on it amounted to $235,000.

Henri Rochefort has arrived at San Francisco.

It is said that the Cunard steamers are to be taken away from Boston, because there is not freight enough, and freight from New York pays better; it being understood that this relates more particularly to grain freight. In other words, New York can pay better prices for transportation to Liverpool, because she gets cheaper freight from Chicago.

The opponents of General Butler pluck up considerable hope from the fact that he isn't so well as he used to be. But Butler sick is more than a match for most of his rivals well.

The ship King Phillip, which sailed from Baltimore on Saturday, was set on fire on Monday, in Chesapeake Bay, by a portion of her crew, who had mutinied, but the fire was put out. The captain signalled to the Naval Academy, and Admiral Worden sent an officer and marines, who arrested the mutineers and put them in irons.

The Laughing Plant.

Palgrave in his work on Central and Eastern Arabia, gives an account of a plant whose seeds produce an effect resembling that of laughing gas. The plant is a native of Arabia. A dwarf variety is found at Oman, which grows to the height of from three to four feet, has woody stems, wide-spreading branches and bright green foliage. The flowers are produced in clusters, and are of a bright yellow color. The seed pods are soft and woolly in texture, and contain two or three black seeds of the size and shape of a French bean. Their flavor resembles that of opium, the taste is sweet, the odor produces a sickening sensation and is slightly offensive.

The seeds contain the essential quality of this extraordinary plant. These when pulverized and taken in small doses produce a most unaccountable effect. The person who takes them begins to laugh loud and boisterously; then he sings, dances and gives expression to every form of comic extravagance in gesture and manners. The effect of the dose continues about an hour, and then the victim falls into a deep sleep from exhaustion which continues for an hour or more. When he awakens he is utterly unconscious of all that occurred while he was under the influence of the powerful stimulant.

State News.

Joseph Twombly of Jefferson has sold $125 worth of spruce gum, gathered in forty-one days, and has $100 worth more on hand. Dea. Benjamin Webster, of the same town, who is eighty years of age, has sold $46 worth gathered during the past winter.

Messrs J. G. Eaton of Manchester, John G. Sinclair of Littleton, and a capitalist by the name of Morey, of Rhode Island, have purchased 16,000 acres of timber land on the west side and at the base of Mount Washington.

The Laconia Democrat says: The light attendance of ladies at churches, last Sunday, was quite observable, and shows that while the time for new bonnets has arrived, that the new head gear has not yet been purchased. Fashionable bonnets, this year are attractive to those who like them. They are made out of anything that milliners can lay their hands on, and in shape resemble a banged-up milk-pan.

Madbury had no one to bury within its borders last year.

The "Wing road" will be completed to the Fabyan House by July 1, enabling travellers to proceed by rail to within six miles of the base of Mount Washington, thus forming the quickest and most direct route to the heart of the mountains.

The assistant rummies who delivered the State over to the democratic party at the recent election by running a so-called temperance ticket to draw off enough republican votes to defeat the regular republican nominees, will be glad to learn that a majority of the sub-committee of the democratic State committee has decided to recommend the repeal of the prohibitory law. Although there is some opposition to the license scheme, it is probable that a measure of that kind will be matured and presented to the legislature. In regard to the enactment of a license law there is a wide difference of opinion, even among the democrats, for while a large majority of the party are clamorous for a repeal of the prohibitory law, a respectable minority oppose any legislation on the subject, and it is quite confidently asserted that a considerable number of democratic representatives will vote against license in any form. Indeed, the liquor question threatens to be the most difficult matter that will engage the attention of the coming legislature, and from present indications the fight over it will be stubborn and protracted.

Paris in 1793.

[Victor Hugo's Last Novel.]

Very few of the largest shops were open. Peripatetic haberdashery and toy-shops were dragged about by women, lighted by candles, which dropped their tallow on the merchandise. Open air shops were kept by ex-nuns in blonde wigs. The mender, darning stockings in a stall, was a countess; that dress-maker a marchioness. Madame de Boufflers inhabited a garret, from which she could look out at her own hotel. Hawkers ran about offering the "papers of news." Persons who wore cravats that hid their chins were called "the scrofulous."

Street singers swarmed. The crowd hooted Pitou, the royalist song writer, and a valiant man in the bargain. They danced the carmagnole in great circles. They no longer said gentleman and lady, but citizen and citizeness. They danced in the ruined cloisters with the church lamps lighted on the altars, with cross-shaped chandeliers hanging from the vaulted roofs and tombs beneath their feet.

Blue "blue tyrant's waist-coats" were worn. There were liberty-cap shirt pins, made of white, blue and red stones. The Rue De Richelieu was called the street of law; a statue of Nature stood in the Place de la Bastile. At the Invalides the statues of the saints and kings were crowned with Phrygian caps. They played cards on the curbstones at the crossings. The packs of cards were also in the full tide of revolution; the kings were replaced by genii, the queens by the goddess of liberty, the knaves by figures representing equity, and aces by impersonations of law. They tilled the public gardens; the plow worked at the Tuileries.

With all these excesses was mingled, especially among the conquered parties, an indescribable haughty weariness of life. A man wrote to Fouquier Tinville, "Have the goodness to free me from existence. This is my address." Newspapers appeared in legions. The hair-dresser's men curled the wigs of women in public, while the master read the Moniteur aloud. People went to have their fortunes told by Martin, at No. 173 in the Rue d'Anjou.

There was a lack of bread, of coals, of soap.

Flocks of milch cows might be seen coming in from the country.

At the Vallee lamb sold at fifteen francs per pound. An order of the Commune assigned a pound of meat per head every ten days. People stood in rank at the doors of the butchers' shops. One of these files had remained famous; it reached from a grocer's shop in the Rue des Petit Caneau to the middle of the Rue Montorgueil. To form a line was called "holding the cord," from a long rope which was held in the hands of those standing in the row. Amid this wretchedness, the women were brave and mild. They passed entire nights awaiting their turn to get into the bakers' shops. Wood cost four hundred francs in coin per cord; people could be seen in the streets sawing up their bedsteads.

In the winter the fountains were frozen; two pails of water cost twenty sous; every man made himself a water carrier. A golden louis was worth 3,990 paper francs. A course in a hackney coach cost 600 francs. After a day's use of a carriage, this sort of dialogue might be heard: "Coachman, how much do I owe you?" "Six thousand francs." A green grocer woman sold 20,000 francs' worth of vegetables a day. A begger said: "Help me in the name of charity! It took 230 francs to finish paying for my shoes." There was no flattering among this people. There was the sombre joy of having made an end of thrones. Volunteers abounded; each street furnished a battalion.

—A man in a rural town had a pet calf, which he was training up in the ways of an ox. The calf walked around very peacefully under one end of the yoke, while the man held up the other end. But in an unfortunate moment the man conceived the idea of putting his own neck in the yoke, to let the calf see how it would seem to work with a partner; this frightened the calf, and, elevating his tail and his voice, he struck a "dead run" for the village, and the man went along with his head down and his plug hat in his hand, straining every nerve to keep up, and crying out at the top of his voice, "Here we come! Head us off somebody!"

—A sharp butcher, of Utica, N. Y., made a private offer of $12 for a fine-looking calf of five months, on the day of a great sale in that city, recently. The butcher was smilingly informed that the animal was on the auction list, and he could have the opportunity of purchasing her when she came to the block. That worthy individual was perfectly speechless with astonishment when the auctioneer knocked his pet down to Mr. Alexander, of Kentucky, for $27,000. She was a Duchess of Oneida, and the "golden calf" of the sale.

—A potato-bug has invaded Rhode Island, and is laying waste the country. The Governor has ordered out the militia, but he refuses to obey. The R. I. Militia is an obstinate man.

—The London tailors are about to make a rule that no garments shall be taken from the shops until paid for. Such things only hasten on the days of a republic.

—The Saturday Review tells of a Scotch clergyman who quoted a text of Scripture in his prayer, and added: "For that, O Lord, is the correct translation of the passage."

—A Kentucky lady compromised a $20,000 breach of promise suit by accepting $5 and a new chignon.

Seven Millions of Pores.

All day and all night the exhausted particles of every human system are passing off through seven millions of quarter-inch hose—that being about the length of the sweat-ducts connected with the pores. If these are obstructed, sickness ensues; if they were sealed up, the consequences would be death. It is one of the provinces of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to keep the superficial escape pipes open, as well as those larger excretory organs, the bowels. The stomach and the skin sympathize, and it is through the stomach that the Bitters act upon the cuticle, keeping it moist, elastic and unfevered. The famous vegetable invigorant is a marvellous medicine; no other preparation known contains such a variety of curative and preservative elements, or acts, at the same time, in such a variety of beneficial ways. In dyspepsia it strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite, and controls the liver; in fever and ague, it breaks up the fits; in cases of physical prostration it is literally a vital specific.

A Century is almost beyond the limits of the existence of any American business house, but only a few years are lacking of this long period since the establishment of Walter Baker & Co.'s great Chocolate manufactory. Boston may well be proud of the repute of the goods of this firm. With added years come added testimonials of excellence from all parts of the world. W. Baker & Co.'s choice Chocolates and Cocoas are for sale all over the land.

Helmbold's Buchu is still in the zenith of its popularity. Notwithstanding the absence of Dr. Helmbold, the celebrated medicine is still manufactured at the laboratory at Philadelphia, and is sold by all respectable druggists. It is warranted for all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs. Beware of counterfeits. Genuine has proprietor's private stamp. John F. Henry, New York, Sole Agent.

A Crop of Glory.—Nature's dowry to all her children is a fine head of hair. Kings cannot give, nor wealth purchase this inestimable gift. Take care of it, lest you loose it. BEARINE is a healthful invigorating Dressing. 4

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, few frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Reader, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

For Moth Patches, Freckles and Tan

Ask your Druggist for Perry's Moth and Freckle Lotion, which is harmless and in every case infallible. Or for his Improved COMEDONE and PIMPLE REMEDY, the great SKIN MEDICINE for Pimples, Black Heads or Flesh Worms. Or consult B. C. PERRY, the noted Skin Doctor, 49 Bond St., New York. a 16 D 6m

$10,000 reward can safely be offered for a more infallible cure for PILES than ANAKESIS. The cures performed by this wonderful remedy are simply miraculous. Lotions, ointments and internal remedies produce more harm than good, but ANAKESIS is an external remedy, a simple suppository, supports the tumors, acts as a soothing poultice and medicine, gives instant relief, and cures absolutely. All Doctors prescribe it.—Price $1.00. Sold by Druggists everywhere, and sent free by mail from Principal Depot, 46 Walker str., New York.

Costiveness is aggravated by

The use of strong purgatives. The only rational treatment is some gentle laxative and tonic like DR. HARRISON'S PERISTALTIC LOZENGES. These never weaken, but gradually restore nature. Are Plants in Rooms Unhealthy?

[American Agriculturist.]

We have answered no, a number of times, but the question still comes, probably from new subscribers. The atmosphere of a greenhouse crowded with plants has been analyzed and found to be not essentially different from ordinary air. If it were unhealthy to breathe the air in which plants were growing, we who live in the country would show it, and those who during the summer camp out in the woods would hardly find the health they seek. There is no danger in sleeping in the room with plants. A whole roomful cannot affect the air nearly as much as an additional person or the burning of a night lamp. The fact that certain orders of flowers are unpleasant to persons particularly sensitive to such things is another matter. It is usually a case of individual peculiarity, and easily remedied by removing the offending plants.

THE "LIGHT RUNNING"

"DOMESTIC"

KING OF SEWING Machines.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

It affords me great pleasure to be able to announce to my friends (and to all others interested,) that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Company has fully resumed the manufacture of its UNRIVALLED MACHINE, and will expand its business with increased energy. Its new factories will soon be completed, and every machine will be as nicely constructed as possible. All who have used the Machine for four years or less, pronounce it

THE LIGHTEST RUNNING,
EASIEST TO KEEP IN ORDER,
THE MOST DURABLE,

—AND DECIDEDLY—

The Nearest to Perfection

of any Sewing Machine in the market. It is the intention to have the

"DOMESTIC" SEWING MACHINE

Supercede all others in this City and Vicinity.

—THE—

"DOMESTIC" SEWING MACHINE

—IS THE—

"Best Machine to Use,"

—AND THE—

EASIEST TO SELL.

IT IS DURABLE

AND WILL LAST A LIFE-TIME,

Every Machine

I sell is warranted to be all I claim for it, and a

Written Guarantee

WILL BE GIVEN TO PURCHASERS IF DESIRED.

ALL MACHINES ARE FURNISHED—WITHOUT EXTRA CHARGE—WITH CASTORS, A HEMMER AND FELLER, QUILTING GAUGE, BRAIDER, THUMB-SCREW AND GAUGE, A DOZEN OF ASSORTED NEEDLES, HALF A DOZEN BOBBINS, WRENCH, SCREW DRIVER, OILER, BOTTLE OF OIL AND BOOK OF INSTRUCTIONS.

THE "DOMESTIC" WILL

Hem, Fell,
Bind, Braid,
Cord, Quilt,
Tuck, Ruffle,
Embroider, Gather,

AND SEW ON AT THE SAME TIME.

THE GATHERING ATTACHMENT

As applied to the "DOMESTIC" is made on an

ENTIRELY NEW PRINCIPLE.

No other Machine in the United States having any thing for this purpose that can be compared with this late invention. It is applied directly to the presser bar, and is operated by the movements of the Needle Bar.

ITS ACTIONS ARE POSITIVE—ITS MOTIONS PERFECT.

As some of my friends, connected with the sale of other kinds of sewing machines, have interested themselves so much during the past winter as to falsely represent that the "Domestic" S. M. Co. had failed, and that there could be no parts obtained for the "Domestic" Needles, etc., etc., I will state that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Co. has been making steady progress from the first, and as to parts of the machine, needles, etc., being obtained, I keep them constantly on hand. But although the "Domestic" where it has been sold may be run "from morn until eve" without tiring the operator. We have found scarcely any call for extra parts and are pleased to state that we have not so much business in that way as some of our neighbors. If however any one owning a "Domestic" should in any manner be disaffected, all matters will be made right by calling at my office. I will further state that as heretofore I shall keep on hand all kinds of

SEWING MACHINE NEEDLES,
TUCKERS,
GATHERERS,
EMBROIDERERS,
HEMMERS,
BRAIDERS,

PEYSER & KENNEDY,

The liberal settlement of the Eastern Railroad Company for our losses for Damage by Fire and Water at the Freight Depot, enables us to throw a few cases more of

FINE WOOLENS, DOESKINS,
DIAGONALS, MELTONS,
KERSEYS, CASSIMERES, and
SILK AND WOOL MIXTURES,

into the market at a low appraisal. The price is marked in plain figures on each piece, and in comparison with the quality will be found to be

ASTONISHINGLY LOW!

Ask your friends and neighbors who have availed themselves of this

GREAT CHANCE,

or come and see for yourselves after examining other stocks, that this is no fancy-dream or fiction; but a palpable fact, that you can buy CLOTH FOR GARMENTS of all qualities at so low a figure that EVERYBODY can afford to clothe themselves. Those of a limited means will find it a comfort to their children and themselves without exhausting their stamps. We lose no money by it, assisting others to do the same by selling them any CLOTH FOR CLOTHES. Every sensible Man, Woman and Boy will at once see that we can sell any of our READY-MADE

DRESS UP

Custom Clothing!

AT LOW PRICES, when we have had the chance to make them up of fine First-Class Materials at half price. This is no place to overpay; only that it would be disparaging to the intelligence of our customers to argue the point. Our assortment of

Gentlemen's Fine Garments,

Business Suits, and Garments Suitable for Mechanics, Laborers and Farmers is extensive and varied and made up so wear, and those who buy of us will get their money's worth.

We sell no Bankrupt Stock or stock made up of faded goods. We do not wish to shock the sensibilities of our customers with fancy tales of dire distress of some distinguished or imaginary unfortunate traders and his losses. We do not take stock in it. Our Stock and Goods are

NEW, NICE, WELL-MADE AND TRIMMED,

Cost us less than expected, and we sell them so cheap that our customers are cheerful and pleased at our success in business. We make a specialty of

BOYS' AND YOUTHS' SUITS

and guarantee a good fit, at prices from 6 to 15 Dollars, a suit—Coat, Vest and Pant custom made, at low prices, and a complete assortment of

UNDERSHIRTS AND DRAWERS, AND GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS.

We Cut and Trim Garments at reasonable charges for customers who make up their goods, and Make Garments to Order at the lowest cash prices and work.

City Council.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, the petition of Robert C. Sides and others for a sewer in Union street; that of J. S. Hunt and others for the opening of Mt. Vernot street to the South pond; and the subject of a sidewalk at the Cabot street school house—were severally referred to the committee on streets. The same committee was directed to have the sidewalk in front of Exchange buildings relaid.

Relays of sidewalks was granted to S. W. Webber, Hanover street, and to Daniel E. Leavitt, State street.

A concrete sidewalk was granted to Alexander Robinson, Islington street.

A crosswalk was granted on Union and Austin streets at their junction.

SENSIBLE.

The Board voted it inexpedient to widen Hanover street near Vaughan.

A report was accepted recommending an appropriation of $300 for sprinkling streets.

A bill relating to the duties of Harbor Master was passed.

GOOD ENOUGH.

The Lamplighter was instructed to light the street lights every stormy and dark night.

Mayor Miller and Aldermen Sise and Hayes were appointed a committee to have the census of the city taken.

IMPROVING.

Voted, that the City refit the store under the City rooms and that the Solicitor notify the tenant that it must be vacated.

THAT BRIDGE.

The Board voted to carry the appeal from the City's order for a bridge to be built by the P. & D. R. R. at the highway to Freeman's Point, to trial before the County Commissioners.

IMPORTANT REFERENCES.

That part of the Mayor's adddress relating to the City Farm, was referred to the Committee on lands and buildings; that portion referring to water, etc., was referred to Aldermen Sise and Lafavour; and that portion relating to the proposed History of Portsmouth, was referred to Aldermen Sise and George.

Laconics.

It is always gratifying to be able to record instances of honesty, particularly in young lads, for an honest boy will be very likely to develop into an honest man in time. Frank Muchemore, a son of Mr. Joseph C. Muchemore, recently found on the street a pocket-book containing $5.75, and carried it at once to the police station, delivering it up to Asst. Marshal Shannon, who advertised it and next morning had the pleasure of handing it to the owner.

Dr. Preston notifies the thirsty that they can procure cool soda with the choicest syrups, at the Congress Block drug store, for five cents per glass.

Gouvion's gift show this evening.

The most eminent medical authorities assert that there is nothing so tends to shorten the lives of old people and injure their health, as the practice of sitting up late evenings. This is especially the case where there is a grown-up daughter in the family. We publish this item at the earnest request of several young men who are directly interested in the matter.

Vesper services will be held on Sunday afternoons, hereafter, at five o'clock, in the Unitarian chapel, until further notice.

The Journal enters public life once more in favor of a horse railroad. It will now be built!

The total amount of subscriptions to the New Orleans fund in this city is $1539, which is considered about the fair thing.

Constructor Theo. G. Wilson succeeds Constructor Thos. E. Webb at this station. Mr. Webb is one of the ablest officers of his class in the naval service. Success to him in every way. He goes to Rio Janeiro.

The Journal appears to think that dying is a more serious matter than living.

Schooner "Ed. Waite," with coal for E. F. Sise & Co., arrived at this port from New York, Wednesday night, bringing the largest cargo (800 tons) ever delivered here by a sailing vessel. The "Ed. Waite" is a three-master, which reminds us that predictions of foul weather on the arrival of three-masted schooners are not so numerous as of yore, for "Old Probabilities," even, could not keep up his increase of storms to a comparative degree with the multiplication of three-masted schooners, teams loaded with ladders, and Barrington basket teams; but "O. P." has done his level best to do so.

The first chowder party of the season will take place at Gerrish's island—soon.

Quarterly Meeting at Pearl St. Church.

This meeting commenced Wednesday at 10 o'clock, A. M. The organization consists of fourteen churches; Rev. L. L. Harmon was chosen Moderator, and reports in writing were made from the churches, mostly of an encouraging character. In the afternoon Rev. A. S. McLean of Acton, Me., gave a discourse on the text "Wherefore is light given to man?" The sermon was interesting for its scientific character and the application of scientific views of light to moral and religious subjects. In the evening Rev. A. L. Gerrish of Pittsfield, Me., preached. On Thursday Rev. J. A. Lowell of Danville and Rev. A. P. Tracey of Haverhill, Mass., preached. A collection of fourteen dollars and six cents was taken for Foreign Missions. J. F.

The Eastern R. R. Conductors.

[Brunswick Telegraph.]

Of the merits of the controversy involved the public can know nothing; it can only infer that the managers of the road believe the discharged conductors to be thieves, inefficient, careless or negligent. Admitting all that is charged, it appears to us that there is a better way of settling the matter, both for the road and men. The row attracts unpleasant notice to the road and calls up statements which are damaging, whether true or false. For example, a correspondent of the Argus of Monday says that the books of the Eastern railroad show the current expenses for March to be $64,000 in excess of the receipts. We cannot believe such a statement, though it is known that the Eastern road has a heavy load to carry. One may say, if expenses so exceed receipts it is high time to put a stop to stealing.

But do all conductors steal?—"knock down" is the softer way of putting it. We cannot believe it, though all alike are credited with that amiable propensity. Those who steal should be discharged, and the guilty parties be fully exposed. Therefore when railroad managers strike, they should strike only where evidence is clear, full, conclusive, and make as little stir as possible over their action. Conductors have heavy responsibilities imposed upon them, daily and hourly hold their lives in their hands when on duty, and handle first and last large sums of money. Are they paid in proportion to work and responsibilities? We think not. Would better pay ensure a better class of conductors? In many cases most assuredly, not in all, for money or rather its search is playing the very devil with all classes in the land. Under the present system the honest suffers far more than the thieving conductor. This much is clear that railroad directors are themselves largely culpable when they employ a man as conductor who cannot keep his own money, but is profligate in its use. Such an one never should hold a responsible position in any corporation.

The Railroad Ticket Business.

[Portland Press.]

Just now there is great activity in the sale of railroad tickets between here and Boston and also on other lines. It is well known that at nearly every station east of here, there is a person who offers tickets from Portland to Boston over the Boston and Maine for $1.75. These tickets change hands a few times and when they are offered for sale here they sell for $2.50. Thus a good profit is made and still they are sold for fifty cents less than they can be bought at the depots in this city or in Boston Within a day or two a great demand has gone forth for Eastern tickets, so that customers may buy by either road. One firm on Exchange street advertises to sell tickets by either road for $2.50.

The officials on the several roads are getting their eyes open and now refuse to sell unless the purchasers are to use the tickets themselves. But not to be behind hand the ticket men interview passengers who are waiting around the depots and get them to purchase one, two or three tickets. There appears to be a good deal of money made by somebody in this business. The result is that a great many people ride on the roads just now at very low prices.

—"Come and enjoy yourselves. Come and see the Witch of End—her, the Ghost of the man who struck Billy Patterson, Spirits from the vasty deep, the Siamese twins—or any other man." The above choice sentiment is from a "bill" of a masquerade sociable, given by ladies of a church in Illinois to raise money for religious purposes. Who says we do not need home missionaries?

HENDERSON & CO.,
ANNOUNCE THEIR
SPRING OPENING
—OF—
Bonnets, Hats,
Flowers and
Ribbons.
The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.
The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a
NEW BONNET.
It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:
First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.
Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.
Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.
Hats, not trimmed,
From One Cent to One Dollar.
Hats, trimmed,
From 50 cts. to $10.00.
And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

More of the Crusaders.

[Cincinnati Times.]

Mine was a desperate case, and desperate cases require desperate remedies. Six weeks had already elapsed since Polly sallied forth on a crusade. Counting Sunday, there are seven days in a week; six times seven are forty-two; forty-two days tries a man's fortitude. Gentle reader, if you happen to be a man, how would you like to be a woman (this is a conundrum), and be confined for forty days?—confined to the house, I mean,—baking and brewing, washing and stewing, and tending a cross baby? That's what I want to know.

Six weeks had been telling a tale—baby was wasting away. I had tried hard to be a little soldier and not complain, but while my shadow was continually growing less and less Polly's faith in the Crusade was waxing stronger and stronger, and, as practice makes perfect, her prayers were at least ornamental, if not useful.

As not a single saloon thus far had been closed, and as self-preservation is the first law of nature, I began to cast about for relief. My own temporal salvation demanded instant attention; it was wicked, I know, to allow my mind to be troubled about my own affairs when the affairs of my neighbors seemed to be so out of joint; but I was growing desperate, and to win Polly back again I had to resort to strategy. Now, strategy is not just the fair thing; but with me it was Polly come back or desolation and dissolution.

Jane McCormic is a buxom widow. I knew her as Jane Baxter, before she married McCormic. The Widow McCormic lives just on the opposite side of the street. Polly's hair is as black as the raven's wing, while Mrs. McCormic's, like Halstead's heroine of the "Blue Miami," is red. I don't think Polly is naturally jealous-hearted, but if she ever had any misgivings of that sort, I have sometimes thought the widow was the innocent cause of them.

My sister Jerusha, many years ago, went West with her young husband, to grow up with the country. When she left I retained a lock of her hair as a keepsake. That lock of hair was red. I brought forth the flaming ringlet from its secret hiding-place, and placed it upon the light-stand in the full glare of the lamp, labeled as follows: "To memory dear, Jane Baxter's hair." I then gave baby a double dose of parigoric and went to bed, but not to sleep. The night was cold and raw, and Polly returned from "picket duty" earlier than usual. The parigoric had "done" for the baby, and I was sound asleep,—except a small opening in the northwest corner of my eye, just sufficient to watch Polly's manœuvering when she came in. As she approached the light-stand, and her black eye caught a glimpse of the red ringlet, her face turned as white as a sheet; and when she bent down and read the label, it turned again, but this time as red as a beet. She went to work, however, very deliberately, and with a long hair-pin she lifted the offending curl, and in the blaze of the lamp the act of cremation was scientifically accomplished.

Then turning to the bed, in a husky voice she said:

"Browd (my name is Brown, but Polly is troubled with catarrh, and 'picket duty' after night is bad for catarrh,) oh, Browd, Browd," continued Polly, "how could you deceibe me so?"

"Deceive you, Polly; why what do you mean?"

"Oh, Browd, I am goding to leabe you."

"Going to leave me! What! going out again to-night?"

"I never suspected that of you, Browd!"

"Suspected what, Polly? Do, for the Lord's sake, explain yourself."

"Explain myself, Browd! You are the one who ought to explaid. I have been a faithful wife to you, Browd. I am at home more than half the time, and am seldom out later than 10 o'clock at night. Oh Browd! Browd! how could you deceibe your Polly so?"

"I deceive my Polly? Polly you are sick, come to bed."

"Never! Browd; never will I come to your bed agaid. How come you by a lock of Sally Baxter's hair—red hair at that? Will you answer me, Browd?"

"Why, Polly, I never had a lock of Sally Baxter's hair in my life."

"Liar! liar! liar! I will pray for you, Browd!"

"For Heaven's sake, don't do that, Polly. Kill me with cruel words, but don't pray for me—pray don't, Polly. Prayer has gone down wonderfully of late. The market is glutted. The fact is, Polly, the supply for the last three months has been greater than the demand, and to-day prayer isn't worth fifty cents on the dollar. Polly if you won't come to bed, sit down a moment, and I will tell you something that will quiet your nerves. That innocent lock of hair that you but a moment ago unmercifully burned was given to me by my sister, when she left for the far West years ago. I felt very lonely to-night, Polly; it seemed to me that God was not paying much attention to your prayers, and if you intended to continue until the saloons were closed, the crusade would never end. I loved my sister Jerusha; she was a good woman, and as I gazed upon that lock of hair, I wondered if the Ohio female lunacy had reached Nebraska; and I further wondered if Jerusha had deserted her husband to engage in this new service of the Lord. Then a wicked thought struck me, but I said, the end would justify the means. I wanted to win you back to me, Polly, and I used a little strategy to that end. Do you love me, Polly?"

"I do, Jod (my name is John;) God knows my heart, I do love you, Jod; and if I have done wrong may the Lord forgive me, as I know you will. Henceforth and forevermore I am yours. Lie over a little, Jod, I am coming to bed."

Presto! What a change in a short week has wrought in the affairs of our house! Polly's mind is gradually being restored, and her feet are almost warm.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's Island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-Office.

Nellie Grant's Wedding

Took place in the east room of the White House, at eleven o'clock, Thursday. The Boston Herald says:

The executive mansion had been extensively decorated for the occasion. Flowers adorned the doorways and hanging baskets were pendent from the centre of each. The east room was resplendent with its many mirrors, lace draperies at the seven large windows, three crystal chandeliers, each containing forty burners, which sparkled like diamonds. All the mantels and woodwork were of white and gold. The double window midway down the room (which is one hundred by forty feet in dimensions and has a ceiling twenty-three feet in height) was entirely concealed by the bank of blooming plants. Just in front of this was a slightly raised dais, which was handsomely carpeted. Above this dais hung a marriage bell of white flowers.

The number of guests present was comparatively small, only about 160 invitations having been accepted of the 300 issued. Among those present were Sir Edward Thornton and the members of the British legation, General Sherman, the justices of the Supreme Court, Vice-President Wilson, Speaker Blaine, about a dozen senators and representatives, officers of the army and navy and marine corps in full uniform, ex-Secretary Borie, George W. Childs, A. J. Drexel, Mr. Haley's and Mr. Murphy's families of New York, and other persons, friends of the President, and the young gentlemen and lady residents who have been the intimate friends of the bride.

A few minutes before eleven o'clock there was a perceptible movement among those gathered in the room. Rev. Dr. Tiffany of the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal church entered and stood at the foot of the dais. Mr. Sartoris in full evening dress, accompanied by his best man, Colonel Frederick Grant, in full uniform, now appeared, passing through the suite of parlors, while the bridal party entered the large folding doors which are opposite the dais. The first in the procession were the bridesmaids, Miss Conkling and Miss Frelinghuysen being in the advance. They paused as they passed just beyond the central chandelier. Miss Porter and Miss Sherman came next, and advanced beyond the first two. Then followed Miss Drexel and Miss Dent, then Miss Barnes and Miss Fish, and lastly the bride with her father. As she passed between her bridesmaids and reached the dais, Mr. Sartoris stepped forward and received her from her father. They mounted the dais, and the bridesmaids formed a circle. The bride and groom knelt during the exhortation. The service was performed after the form of the Methodist church. The vows were exchanged, the ring was given as a pledge, and the words were uttered that made the two man and wife. Then came the solemn injunction: "Those whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder." The President gave his daughter a fervid embrace and her mother's emotions almost overcame her.

The bridal robe was of rich white satin, with a train three yards long. The skirt was entirely covered with round point lace flounces, so fine and exquisite that they might be mistaken for wreaths of mist. These flounces were headed by sprays of orange blossoms, that at intervals became clusters of flowers, with a tiny orange in the centre. The sleeves were trimmed with point lace and flowers to match the skirt. The trail was of illusion, which was fastened with a wreath. The ornaments consisted of a necklace and pendant of pearls and diamonds with earrings of the same. The bride carried a superb white bouquet, and a pearl fan which was covered with white point lace.

The bridesmaids were all dressed alike in white silk, over which was illusion ruffled with narrow plisses. The sashes were of white silk, lined and artistically fastened at the sides, passing under the pouf at the back, and the fringed ends falling on the train, where they were kept in place by a spray of flowers. Flowers trimmed both sides of the skirts and were worn on the bosom and sleeves. The waists of these dresses were low neck, white silk, with the illusion high, and finished with a ruff of the tulle. All these waists were open in front, and fastened by the bouquet de corsage. Four of the bridesmaids wore pink flowers and four blue.

After the ceremony the company adjourned to the state dining room, where the usual breakfast was in readiness. At noon the bride and groom left the table to prepare for their journey. At half-past twelve they reappeared, the bride in a travelling dress of brown silk with ruffles on the skirt and a polonaise of another shade of brown camel's hair elegantly embroidered. Hat and gloves matched the dress. Tearful farewells were spoken, and the President entered the coach-and-four with his daughter and accompanied her to the special train, which left at 1:40 for New York. The President and Mrs. Grant left for New York to take leave of the young couple on their embarkation for Europe at noon on Saturday.

The bridal trousseau is costly and elaborate, consisting of the greatest variety of silk dresses for dinner, evening, carriage or reception wear. The fond father's gift consists of two complete sets of lace, one white and the other black. This lace was selected in Brussels, and, it is said, cost $10,000. Besides the expensive wedding dress, there is a white silk which is trimmed with black lace; there are also a white silk, brocaded in colors, one lavender colored silk, three blue silks, one of which is trimmed with Valenceinnes lace, and bands of gauze embroidered in straw color. There are pink silks of different shades, gold colored silks, some embroidered and others with lace and bugles. There are all the tints of silks for carriage and visiting dresses. There are white muslin watteaus, many with lace and puffs; there are others embroidered; there are morning robes of cashemere; there are linen dresses of wondrous texture; there are three India shawls; there are hats for every daylight dress; shoes for every evening dress, gloves by dozens, handkerchiefs of lace, embroidery, and all the new styles; there are two lace parasols, one of white lace and the other of black; there are fans, one of which was a present from General Badeau—and the lingerie is the most exquisite imaginable.

One room could not contain all the presents. Mr. George W. Childs of Philadelphia sent a large walnut case, lined with rose-colored satin, containing seven dozen forks and spoons in oxidized silver and gold, with a large centre piece for fruit—all of sterling silver; Mr. A. J. Drexel sent a full service of silver, consisting of ten pieces. They are in a very elegant walnut case lined with Nile green satin; Miss Drexel sent a large salad bowl in oxidized silver, with spoons to match; Mr. and Mrs. Creswell presented a solid silver ice cream set, consisting of fourteen pieces; Mr. Borie sent a diamond ring of fabulous value; Miss Conkling presented a gold necklace of great beauty and value; Miss Porter presented a necklace; Miss Barnes a blue enamel locket; Miss Richardson presented a silver tete a tete set. But it is impossible to enumerate all the presents. Bailey & Co., of Philadelphia furnished articles which in the aggregate cost $15,000. New York and other cities are yet to be heard from.

The steamer Baltic of the White Star line is the vessel selected by Mr. Sartoris as the one in which he and his wife will cross the ocean. She arrived at New York on Monday and preparations were immediately begun for the accommodation of the distinguished passengers. Captain Charles M. Kennedy has given up his cabin on deck, which is fitting up as a boudoir for the bride and the ladies accompanying her. The internal fittings have been altered and adorned, and the room before the upholsterers leave it will be as handsome a boudoir as is to be found in Fifth avenue. A rich Turkey carpet covers the floor; lace and crimson damask curtains hang at the windows, and from the ceiling are suspended several bronze lamps of an antique pattern. The furniture of this apartment is a lounge which at night can be turned into a bed, and an elaborately carved walnut toilet-stand. Stateroom No. 1 has also been secured for the party. It is almost as large as three ordinary state-rooms, and is so situated that no motion of the vessel is perceptible to its occupants. The room was fitted up for the accommodation of a party of Englishmen on the last trip of the Baltic. The room has been entirely refitted. Only two of the berths remain, and as these fold up into a settee the apartment will be used as a reception room. The furniture is of walnut, and consists of two sofas, easy chairs, card-tables, a writing table, and a liqueur rack. The walls are covered with mirrors, the ceiling is snow-white, relieved with pink, and several statuettes adorn the angles of the room. Mr. Sartoris and his bride will dine with the other cabin passengers, their seats being on either side of Captain Kennedy at the head of the table. As is customary on all the European steamers, the evening in the cabin will be devoted to musical and elocutionary entertainments. Already the Baltic's passengers have prepared a programme which is to supply amusement to the travellers each evening of their voyage, Sundays alone excepted, on which day divine service will be held by Captain Kennedy in the main saloon.

Bostons 6, Atlantics 2. Baltimores 9, Hartfords 7.

A large representation of Indiana editors, with their wives and friends, arrived at New York Thursday evening, and expressed themselves delighted with the receptions, en route, from their journalistic brethren, especially in Philadelphia. They visit Boston.

Jerome Hillman, when a little way from home in Skinnersville, heard the Williamsburg bells ringing, and, looking up, saw the coming destruction. Knowing there was no time to lose, he leaped on his horse and rode at the utmost speed to warn the villages below. To him the people in the Haydenville factories are indebted for the warning which saved their lives. But Hillman's wife was lost in the flood, which swept away his home and robbed him of all he had on earth.

The bill finally reported by the committee on naval affairs for the relief of the widow of Captain Hall authorizes the Secretary of the Navy to purchase the manuscript of her husband at $15,000, and pay her the salary which would have been due him had he arrived with the remainer of the rescued party.

The Boston base ball club met with its first defeat at home on Saturday, the Atlantics scoring 9 to the Bostons 8.

The Senate passed the civil rights bill on Saturday by a vote of 29 to 16.

Railroad Reports.

CONCORD RAILROAD.

The directors of the Concord Railroad corporation have rendered their annual report for the year ending March 31, 1874. The receipts for the first six months of the year show a gain of over $33,000, as compared with those of a corresponding period of the preceding year. The monetary panic of last fall has had a depressing effect on the business of the road since, as shown by a comparative falling off of nearly $32,000 in receipts of the last six months; notwithstanding the dullness of trade the receipts of the whole year exceed those of the preceding year. The following is a summary of the financial exhibit:

Total earnings,	$1,041,438.72
Total expenses,	736,696.99
Leaving a balance of,		$304,741.73
From which been paid taxes on capital stock,		$32,406.89
Northern Railroad on Vermont Central contract,		5,700.00
Manchester and Lawrence Railroad,		46,679.26
Rent on Concord and Portsmouth Railroad,		25,000.00
On account of the construction of Sunnock Valley Railroad,		3,871.74
		$133,657.89
Receipts over expenses,		$171,083.84
From which was received and appropriated for new iron and steel rails,	$18,000.00
For unsettled claims,	2,000.00
Paid two dividends of 5 per cent. each,	150,000.00
		$170,000.00
Balance carried to contingent fund,		$83.84

The expenses include the unusually large disbursements of $110,291.96 for new locomotives, new passenger and freight cars, and $75,138.67 for new rails. The disbursement also include nearly $10,000 for incidental and other expenses of former years, and $16,000 for a new engine house at Concord.

Considerable addition has been made to the rolling stock of the road during the past year; 1397 tons of new rails have been laid, and 1412 tons repaired and relayed. Five hundred tons of steel rails have been ordered, and will be laid during the summer; and in continuation of those heretofore laid, will nearly complete one track of steel between Concord and Manchester.

Total tonnage of freight transported during the year, 730,741 991-2000, equal to 20,666,524 tons transported one mile. Total number of passengers carried 614,327, equal to 13,653,612 carried one mile. Total mileage during the year, 800,934. The annual meeting of the stockholders occurs on Tuesday, the 26th inst.

NORTHERN RAILROAD.

Twenty-ninth annual report of the Northern Railroad Corporation has been issued. It shows the total receipts of the road during the year to have been $707,760.09 and the expenses, including State taxes and new rails, $491,953.13. The net earnings are $215,806.96, to which add the balance of interest account, $15,520.99, making the total net income $231,327.95, which with the balance of income, as per report, $56,578.74, makes the full amount $287,906.68. From this amount were paid two dividends of $119,924.09 each, leaving the balance of income account $48,058.67.

The foregoing statement represents the accounts of the year as they appear on the Treasurer's books. It includes all the receipts from the business of the road during the year, but not all the income which has actually accrued to the company within that time.

The interest account, which is included in the statement of the year, has come in part from the loans to the Sugar River Road; and a larger sum has accrued during the year from the same source, but which is not yet included in the accounts of this company because it has not been fully adjusted with the new corporation. Besides, the sum of $25,000 will come to the company from the rent of the Sullivan Road during the past year. The addition of these amounts to the statement at the commencement of this report, would be necessary in order to show the total income of this company during the past year.

During the year, 609 tons of new rails and 42,536 new sleepers have been placed in the track; and about 6400 tons of rails have been taken up, repaired and relaid. One new passenger and also one new freight engine, and one baggage car have been built, and additions made to the furniture of the road, and one passenger and twenty-eight merchandise cars have been built to replace old ones. The road and its furniture are in good condition. Number of passengers carried one mile, 8,177,480; number of tons of merchandise carried one mile, 23,721,128.

State News.

The old courthouse at Plymouth—the first one built in the country, and older than the revolution—has recently been purchased by Col. H. W. Blair, one of the leading lawyers of the district. In this building the great statesman Daniel Webster made his first plea before a jury in a murder trial. In it also Jeremiah Mason, Sullivan and other great men of that and after days tried and plead causes. It is the intention of Col. Blair to have the building taken down and re-erected in some suitable spot in the town, and preserved as long as possible. It has been used for the past fifty years as a wheelwright shop, and a sign which has been over the door for forty years has the name of "H. Farnum, Wheelwright."

A cat in Pelham, despoiled of her family—no unusual thing—adopted a litter of red squirrels, and is getting along nicely.

A lad seven years old, named Cassidy, son of widow Ann Cassidy, died on Sunday the 10th, in Dover, from congestion of the brain caused by drinking liquor which he purchased with money taken from his mother's pocket.

James Shores of Nashua, while engaged in sowing down a piece of land met with an accident which will probably prove fatal. In throwing down the bag in which the seed was carried out, the horse became frightened and running, drew the harrow against a tree, overturning it in such a manner as to catch him on one of the teeth, in which position he was dragged nearly thirty rods. His bowels were penetrated, and he received some frightful injuries that medical skill cannot reach.

A lawyer in Strafford County wrote to the Postmaster at Milan, enquiring where one S. F. Mathes now is and what he is doing. The postmaster replied as follows: "Well now, those are tough questions. Samuel F. Mathes died and was buried with Masonic ceremonies six years ago in a little graveyard on the banks of the Ammonoosuc river, and I suppose he is there now. And as to what he is doing, I suppose it must depend on circumstances. He was station agent. Now if I believed in future existence I should suppose he had charge of some aerial station, where the angels stop and talk and smoke and buy their tickets."

Seven Millions of Pores.

All day and all night the exhausted particles of every human system are passing off through seven millions of quarter-inch hose—that being about the length of the sweat-ducts connected with the pores. If these are obstructed, sickness ensues; if they were sealed up, the consequences would be death. It is one of the properties of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to keep the superficial escape pipes open, as well as those larger excretory organs, the bowels. The stomach and the skin sympathize, and it is through the stomach that the Bitters act upon the cuticle, keeping it moist, elastic and unfevered. The famous vegetable invigorant is a marvellous medicine; no other preparation known contains such a variety of curative and preservative elements, or acts, at the same time, in such a variety of beneficial ways. In dyspepsia it strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite, and controls the liver; in fever and ague, it breaks up the fits; in cases of physical prostration it is literally a vital specific.

Heimbold's Buchu is still in the zenith of its popularity. Notwithstanding the absence of Dr. Heimbold, the celebrated medicine is still manufactured at the laboratory at Philadelphia, and is sold by all respectable druggists. It is warranted for all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs. Beware of counterfeits. Genuine has proprietors' private stamp. John F. Henry, New York, Sole Agent.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore no hope in Gilbert's Vertiflex Belts? Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Reader, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

$10,000 reward can safely be offered for a more infallible cure for PILES than ANAKESIS. The cures performed by this wonderful remedy are simply miraculous. THE "LIGHT RUNNING"

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

It affords me great pleasure to be able to announce to my friends (and to all others interested,) that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Company has fully resumed the manufacture of its UNRIVALLED MACHINE, and will expand its business with increased energy. Its new factories will soon be completed, and every machine will be as nicely constructed as possible. All who have used the Machine for four years or less, pronounce it

As applied to the "DOMESTIC" is made on an

ENTIRELY NEW PRINCIPLE.

No other Machine in the United States having any thing for this purpose that can be compared with this late invention. It is applied directly to the presser bar, and is operated by the movements of the Needle Bar.

ITS ACTIONS ARE POSITIVE—ITS MOTIONS PERFECT.

As some of my friends, connected with the sale of other kinds of sewing machines, have interested themselves so much during the past winter as to falsely represent that the "Domestic" S. M. Co. had failed, and that there could be no parts obtained for the "Domestic" Needles, etc., etc., I will state that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Co. has been making steady progress from the first, and as to parts of the machine, needles, etc., being obtained, I keep them constantly on hand. But although the "Domestic" where it has been sold may be run "from morn until eve" without tiring the operator. We have had scarcely any call for extra parts and are pleased to state that we have not so much business in that way as some of our neighbors. If however any one owning a "Domestic" should in any manner be disaffected, all matters will be made right by calling at my office. I will further state that as heretofore I shall keep on hand all kinds of City Affairs.

Mayor Miller's inaugural address, with the list of City officers for 1874, the financial report of the School Committee for the past year, and the appraisal of stock, etc., at the City Farm have just been issued in the usual form. The difference between the high appraisal of the late Overseers on Dec. 31st and that of the Aldermanic committee now, is very large, as may be seen by those interested. For instance, the pair of horses rated at $700 by the Overseers, are set down to $200 by the Aldermen; and the house furniture at the farm the Overseers call $1800, as had been done for years, while the Aldermen schedule it at $1072.01.

We copy from the Mayor's address a few paragraphs which were not included in the reports published at the time the city government was organized:

"While it is generally considered unfortunate, it may not always be culpable, to be so poor as to need aid. Hence alms-houses ought justly to be regarded as homes for all those who lack better ones of their own—where the Town or County should gather their entire families—rather than as places of unwilling and unhappy banishment for those persons only, who have no interested or influential friends to urge upon Overseers or Commissioners the allowance of outside aid in their especial cases. It should be borne in mind that nearly all cases are special to somebody, that no trade is easier to learn or harder to forget than beggary, and those who follow it most assiduously and persistently are often least worthy of public or private charity. The children and acquaintances of parties who have their fuel from the great free wood-yard and coal-bin of the City, will in their turn be pretty sure to call for a supply from the same easy source; and so with other supplies; while going to the alms-house is fortunately not so catching.

A very common argument is, with those who ask aid for their poor friends, that only a little help is desired or recommended—less perhaps per week, they say, than the cost of the parties at the almshouses. Now in this matter, as most others, there are higher considerations than money; and the saving of expenses should not be allowed to outweigh the real comfort of the poor, or to oppress any. Still it can clearly be shown by the figures, that all the individuals and families who last year received outdoor supplies in this city to the amount of more than $5000, could have been far better maintained at the City or County Farm for a great deal less money. And the greater cost is by no means the whole of the evil; for beggary, like all other vices, grows with what it has to feed on—and with such munificent encouragement, is ever on the increase.

That it is mainly unfounded prejudice, or lack of personal acquaintance with pauper institutions, which causes most of the intense opposition to entering them,—on the part of those really destitute or their friends,—is shown by the fact that the same inmates of our alms-houses, almost without exception, are contented and happy, however much they may have dreaded entering. It is not true, "Who enters here leaves hope behind;" and those who inculcate or fail to combat this idea, work unkindness to the poor and injury to the public.

No thoughtful and discreet official will desire to eradicate or lessen the feeling of true independence in any breast, however humble; but the idea that persons who are supported by charity, wholly or in part, are any the less paupers because they keep out of the almshouse—or are half as comfortable in their stinted homes as they would be there—tends to privation of the poor and increase of the public cost. Let all good citizens beware how they add to this prejudice, unless they would increase the tide of rampant beggary, which is almost irresistible to those who are governed by their feelings rather than knowledge and discretion.

The easiest and most popular course, doubtless, for those having charge of pauper business, is the too common one of granting all the aid asked; but a very little experience or observation will convince any intelligent and well-meaning person that neither just economy nor true charity lies that way.

And after all is said, there is little danger that any competent Overseer or Board will refuse any of the few worthy applicants to whom it is advisable to furnish outside aid. They are far more likely to err in the opposite direction, for next to its victims, none are so sure to sympathize with deprivation as those who best realize it from study."

At 'Em.

[Foster's Democrat.]

The Overseers of the Poor for last year and Mayor Miller, are having quite a little newspaper war over the expenditures of last year in the city and those of the county. Nobody will find any fault with the Mayor's economy; it is sadly needed not only in this branch of the city affairs, but also in some others. No Mayor ever gave so much personal supervision of affairs as he has since he assumed the duties of the office; and some of the leaky places have been pretty effectually stopped. Two months more of service will show whether he is to be a popular Mayor or not. There is one thing,—he isn't scared by anybody, and brooks no interference except he thinks it is right, no matter from what source it comes.

Portsmouth and the French Spoliation.

[Journal.]

Among a list of seventeen hundred American vessels and cargoes, estimated at fifteen million dollars, which were illegally captured by the French, prior to the convention with France of July 31, 1801, said list now being on file at Washington, we find the following belonging to this port, together with their captains and their owners at the time they were taken, this being the first local list yet published:

Vessels and Captains,	Owners,
Ship Apollo, Walker,	J. Sheafe and others.
" Aurora, Hall,	(not known.)
" Betty Jane, Neill,	J. Potter & others.
" Harriet, Orr,	A. Harris & others.
" Juno, Walker,	James Sheafe.
" Industry, Bodwell,	S. and W. Horn.
" Lydia, Moore,	R. Shapleigh & others.
" Mentor, Shapleigh,	R. Shapleigh.
" Royal Captain, Bryant,	John Bryant.
" Sterling, Seaward,	T. Manning & others.
Brig Abagail, Smith,	Eliphalet Ladd.
" Abiel, Hutchings,	Abiel Harris.
" Betsies, Blunt,	P. Wilson & others.
" Betsy, Turner,	R. Shapleigh & others.
" Clark Mendoza, Walker,	James Sheafe.
" Columbia, Fernald,	D. Huntress & others.
" Drake, Meredith,	Wm. Tredick.
" Dolphin, Rice,	J. & J. Goddard.
" Eagle, Rollins,	John Rollins.
" Fusileer, Shaw,	S. Chase & others.
" Good Intent, Blunt,	T. Lunt & others.
" Hero, Blunt,	George Blunt.
" Hannah, ——,	S. Tilton.
" Maria, Watts,	P. Wilson & others.
" Nancy, Prayor,	S. Chase.
" Oliver Peabody, ——,	Eph. Ashazem.
" Paragon, Gerush,	S. Hill & others.
" Ranger, Flagg,	T. & Wm. Sheafe.
" Rebecca, McClintock,	J. McClintock.
" Ranger, Trefallen,	Wm. Scavey.
" Sterling, Hampton,	Dan. Hunstress.
Sch. Adventure, Holmes,	Abel Holmes.
" Diana, Blunt,	D. Huntress, & others.
" Hope, Parsons,	(not yet known.)
" Lepper, Briard,	(not yet known.)
" Two Sisters, ——,	Thos. Roach.
" Thomas, Fernald,	Thos. Manning.
" Victory, Barnes,	D. & J. Cutter.
" Zephir, Briard,	John Wardrobe.
Sloop William, Mason,	John O'Harra.

From the above list it will be seen that there were (as far as the Department has been informed) 40 vessels, viz: 10 ships, 21 brigs, 8 schooners and 1 sloop, for which no provision or indemnity has yet been made to the several proprietors' heirs; nor has their remedy against France or their evidence of loss been restored to them, said evidence being still in France.

These vessels were generally laden with breadstuffs and provisions, and were light tonnage and moderate value. The entire list of 1,700 vessels and their cargoes now on register is estimated at nine thousand dollars each, or in the whole fifteen million dollars. The indemnity for these captures was arranged with France by mutual set-off in the final rectification of the convention of 1801, by which the United States became responsible to their citizens for their property. The above aggregate sum is now due to the claimants—whose memorials, above 5,000, are now on the files of Congress, praying for relief. A persistent advocate for the petitions has been Mr. James H. Causten, of Washington, who has at his office all the official documents relating to the claims, and very extensive data collected from all sources within the past fifty years. They are curious relics, and valuable in the establishment of claims. Portsmouth—at least some of her people—would be richer than now if these claims were allowed.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas to the still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Seed Corn.

[Cor. Cincinnati Gazette.]

The kernels growing near the lower end of the ear are decidedly the best for planting. Some years ago I planted four rows of corn through the centre of a field, the difference being that the four rows were planted with seed taken near the smaller end of the ear. The result was that owing to a frost on the 15th of September, not an ear of good corn was to be found on the four rows planted with kernels taken near the top of the ear. The growth was not as large, and it was two weeks longer in coming to maturity than the rest of the field, planted with kernels from the butt end. This experience at once convinced me which part of the ear ought to be planted. By noticing these results, and by carefully selecting the seed corn in the field, and by judiciously planting and hoeing, I have succeeded in raising seventy-five bushels of corn per acre. Before I understood this method I could only raise fifty bushels of corn per acre.

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

—OF—

Bonnets, Hats,
Flowers and
Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line at 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

A WAYSIDE PICTURE.

With long checked apron and flaxen head,
With saucy nose, and round cheeks rosy red,
A child plays by the door:
Just where the stone step slopes into the weeds,
A bit of sand she pounds and wets and kneads,
As I, in days of yore.

The bees and flies go humming round her face,
Drawn by the yellow bread and butter trace,
But never once heeds she;
Bright playmates these, for which she feels no fear,
As she will in some later, wiser year,
When mud-pies cease to be.

Two brown, bare feet, with little dimpled toes,
In reckless, balmy glee she upward throws,
Two tiny hands she claps,
With mud-pie oozing through her blackened thumbs,
Up to the clean white threshold bold she comes,
And gally raps and raps.

And says this wondrous mud pie is quite done,
She baked it 'neath the hot fires of the sun,
Beside the muddy brook.
And with a chip of plate, she toddling hastes
Where mother, smiling sly, the mud-pie tastes,
And hugs the cunning cook.

Maids vs. Widows.

The following is a veritable petition signed by sixteen maids of the town of Charleston, S. C., and presented to his Excellency Governor Johnson, of that province, in the year 1788:

"The humble petition of all the maids whose names are underwritten;

"Whereas, We, the humble petitioners, are at present in a very melancholy disposition of mind, considering how all the bachelors are blindly captivated by widows, and our more youthful charms thereby neglected; the consequence of this, our request, is that your Excellency will, for the future, order that no widow presume to marry any young man till the maids are provided for; or else to pay each of them a fine for satisfaction for invading our liberties, and likewise a fine to be laid on all bachelors as shall be married to widows, The great disadvantage it is to us maids is, that the widows, by their forward carriages do snap up the young men, and have the vanity to think their merits beyond ours, which is a great imposition on us, who ought to have the preference. This is humbly recommended to your Excellency's consideration, and hope you will permit no further insults. And we poor maids, in duty bound, will ever pray."

Steam to be Superceded.

A Philadelphia man named Kelly has invented an engine which scientific men, who have seen it, say will generally take the place of steam, than which it is more powerful and elastic, without the agency of other than merely mechanical appliances. Its vital principal is water, which the machine converts into a cold vapor of very extraordinary power. The inventor originally expected to obtain a pressure of about 500 pounds to the square inch, and applied it to a steam gauge which had a measuring capacity of 2,500 pounds; but the pressure produced was so enormous that the gauge was insufficient to register it, and he was compelled to construct a mechanism designed expressly for the purpose. He then found that he could produce a pressure of more than 10,000 pounds to the square inch, and that he could generate the power in any volume required. It is a peculiar quality of the vapor that it can be used at any pressure of from 10 to 10,000 pounds to the square inch, and when once generated it can be placed in receiving vessels and preserved without loss of energy for an indefinite period. In the course of his experiments Mr. Kelly has repeatedly charged an iron receiver of a capacity of 3 1-2 gallons with a pressure of 10,000 pounds to the square inch, and retained it without appreciable loss of energy for a fortnight at a time. Mr. Kelly is building an engine for practical purposes, and thinks that his invention will, at no distant date, supercede steam.

Nellie's Choice.

[Worcester Gazette.]

It is not the custom of modern republics to pension a poet-laureate, yet one might have found pleasant employment for his pen in celebrating the event of yesterday. For once the gloomy old White House was radiant with orange blossoms, and amidst the sympathetic smiles and tears of the fair guests and the less impulsive approval of the sterner sex, the only daughter of the President was united to Mr. Sartoris, a well-born young Englishman. There is no diplomatic significance in the marriage. It is one of the happy privileges of a President's daughter to be able to wed the man of her choice; whether he be of high or humble station, she has only her parents to consult. If Miss Grant had been of royal blood, the advice and consent of the ministry and great men of the realm must have been obtained, and it is quite certain that in this case they would to a man have shaken their wise heads. No one except the heir of a mighty throne would have been considered a fit match for the princess of this great nation, and kings' sons, outside of fairy tales, are not always charming either in face or morals. Fortunately, Grant is only a republican President, who will presently be only a private citizen. America is very well able to stand alone just now and needs no alliance with either the great powers of Europe, or the lesser dynasties of the Western continent. Miss Grant marries whom she wishes, and the ceremony takes place as privately and simply as is consonant with the high official position and wide acquaintance of the young lady's father. Yet it is an occurrence in which the whole country takes a pleasurable interest, and politicians as well as voters, putting aside for once old prejudices and animosities, wish the young couple a long and happy life.

The Massachusetts Flood.

Careful investigation by reporters of the Springfield Republican makes the total number of victims by the Mill River disaster 138, of whom 57 lived in Williamsburg, 4 in Skinnersville, 26 in Haydenville and 51 in Leeds. Of these the bodies of all but 14 have been recovered and identified, and the work of searching for the dead has been practically given up, as it is believed that most of the remainining bodies were swept out into the Connecticut, where one has already been seen, though not recovered. The reported contribution to the relief fund is about $65,000, of which $18,413 has actually been received by the central committee at Northampton. The relief committee report about 150 families, composed of about 700 people, utterly destitute, and think that the exigences of the case demand $100,000. The work of clearing up the debris and preparing for rebuilding is being actively prosecuted, and the restoration of the desolated villages is already assured.

George Raymond, city engineer of Fitchburg, Mass., who surveyed and made plans for the Williamsburg dam at the time it was first proposed, has visited the ruins and given his opinion of the cause of the disaster. His plans were rejected because it would take from $90,000 to $100,000 to build the dam he planned. Subsequently he drew plans for an earth dam to cost $75,000. This was also rejected, and a dam costing $35,000—a shabby structure from foundation to top—was built.

From a statement published by the Springfield Republican, it appears that the ruined reservoir was first inspected by the county commissioners, about a year and a half after its completion, when it was leaking in several places, and they refused to approve the work. The proprietors spent about $10,000 in repairs, and when the commissioners again viewed the reservoir the leaks were stopped, everything looked all right, and they formally accepted it.

Col. Joel Hayden, one of the sons of the late Lieut. Governor Hayden, owns a noble dog of the mastiff and St. Bernard species. He has for a long time been a village favorite and a pet of the school children who are taught near the Hayden residence. He was as punctual at their recesses as the foremost boy. The little ones could tie his tail with blue ribbon, wind their jump-ropes all about him, and throw him upon the green a captive; send him to fetch the stick, push him off the bank into the river, harness him up and run the streets with switch in hand; in fact do anything with him, but Bose was ever their close friend and protector. It is said of him that he had a special liking for little girls, and that one of his greatest favorites was the little Birmingham girl who was buried Monday. A pat from her hand was seemingly enough to repay him for waiting until school was out, when he would frolic as long as she felt in the mood. But he had another friend, Mr. Ira Bryant, the father of Mrs. Colonel Hayden, an elderly gentleman, something over sixty years of age. He was delighted to be with him, uneasy when Mr. Bryant was away, and always, when he could, accompanied him upon his walks about the village. Mr. Bryant was lost in the disaster, and so were many of the dog's friends. It is said no human being ever expressed a deeper sense of sadness than he. His movements, even in the bustle and confusion, were noticeable. He would go to the school house on Sunday, but came almost directly home. He intruded himself upon the domain of the family, was in every part of the house sniffing about. An old pair of boots of Mr. Bryant's received his repeated attention, as did articles of clothing. Sunday afternoon he started out and followed the searchers for bodies on the meadow lands. Tuesday forenoon he was seen on Miller's flats pawing in the sand, which caused an inquiry, and when he was visited it was found he had dug quite a trench. In this excavation the cause of the creature's vigorous efforts and his barking was explained. There were the lower portions of a man's limbs, the toes of the boots being upturned. They could hardly have been more than half way exposed to view when the dog discovered them. The next half hour revealed the form of Mr. Bryant. As the workmen prosecuted their digging around the body the dog lay down at their feet. As the face was exposed, he seemed for a second overjoyed, but when a cloth was wrapped around the rigid form and the removal was begun, the noble creature seemed bowed with grief, and followed sullenly the little party home. Diligent search, of course, had been made for these remains. It is hardly possible any human being would have found the imbedded corpse.

The Springfield Republican comes to the defence of the heroism of Collins Graves and Myron Day, which has been assailed by some of the papers, but hesitates to credit the heroism of Cheney, who does not seem by the most favorable account particularly good stuff for a hero. It says too many of the best men of Haydenville have testified to Graves' arrival in hot haste and his ringing cry; too many of the 220 workmen of the brass-works have said that they owed their lives to him; too many in Leeds also, have told of the warning shouts of Myron Day, the expressman, and of his close quarters with death in the narrow valley which he entered to save others,—to leave any room to doubt Graves and Day are not apocryphal heroes,—and the poets may sing on."

Jacob R. Huntington, Esq., the great carriage-maker, of Amesbury, Mass., contributed a three-spring phæton for the benefit of the sufferers by the Mill River disaster at Williamsburg; and it was sold at auction on Saturday in front of the old State House, Boston, by Samuel Hatch, for $190, to Brown & Jennethl. Capt. R. B. Forbes, of Boston, contributed the model of a yacht, rigged, made by himself, which was disposed of in shares for the same object, and realized a handsome sum.

A Murderous Affray.

A murderous affray occurred on board of schooner Annie B., of St. John, N. B., off Monhegan. The Annie B. was bound for Portland from St. John with old railroad iron, and before she sailed a man came on board and wanted to work his passage, which was permitted. At 12 o'clock Saturday night, when the mate's watch was called, the passenger, who was in the captain's watch, came aft and suddenly discharged a revolver at the captain, the ball grazing his head. The captain ran into the cabin and got his revolver, called to the mate, and coming on deck met the man coming aft again and discharged several shots at him without apparent effect, and was knocked down. The mate, Solomon Camp, coming out of the cabin-way, was struck a terrible blow on the back of the head with an iron bar, which fractured his skull, and the villain then fired a pistol shot into his head. The only other man of the crew was shot at without injury, and fled up the rigging where he remained during the affray. The captain exhausting his revolver was pursued to the cabin by the assailant, where a struggle took place between them, which was renewed on deck, the captain being reenforced by the cook, "a spunky boy." Failing in their efforts to get the man overboard, they retreated to the cabin. The assailant then cut the halyards and sheets, letting the sails down by the run, and getting into a boat, cut loose and left the vessel. At daylight signals of distress were set, and a New York vessel put a man on board the disabled craft, and she was taken into Rockland, Me., on Sunday. Surgical assistance was rendered to the mate, who will in all probability die. The captain is not seriously injured. It is thought that the assault was made with the intention of robbing the captain of freight money, which the passenger knew he had on board before sailing.

The London Times says there is now but too good reason to believe that the African mail steamer Liberia, which left Liverpool on the 11th ultimo, for Madeira and the West Coast of Africa, and which has not been since heard of, has been lost with all on board. The steamer Volta, which arrived at Liverpool May 11 from Africa, picked up about 200 miles off Scilly a box lid and some boxes which have been identified as belonging to the Liberia. The Liberia, in addition to a crew of forty hands, had twelve passengers on board. She was an iron vessel, built in Glasgow in 1870, and was 1470 tons gross. She belonged to Messrs. Elder, Dempter & Co., Liverpool and Glasgow. It is conjectured that the vessel came into collision with another, as some of the boxes found had been stowed low down in the ship.

Trial by Jury.

The verdict of guilty of manslaughter in the case of Thomas A. Pike, who was charged with killing his wife at Portland, Me., by throwing her on a sofa while she was drunk, is to be set aside, a remarkable discovery of how the virdict was reached being made. It is as follows: In an hour or so after the jury retired, a ballot was taken and it was found that 11 were for conviction on a charge of manslaughter and one for conviction on a charge of assault and battery. After some eight hours, session and much discussion it was agreed that eleven ballots marked guilty and one ballot marked not guilty should be put into a hat, and the juror in favor of conviction for assault and battery was to draw one. If he drew the ballot not guilty, then the verdict was to stand as it was, 11 to 1, but if he drew guilty, the verdict of conviction of manslaughter was to be rendered. He drew the latter and the verdict was so rendered. This affair became noised about, and one of the jurors being subpœned his affidavit was taken. Gen. C. P. Mattocks, attorney for Pike, brought the matter before Judge Symonds on Friday, who ordered the verdict set aside, and a new trial will be given at once. This affair creates considerable sensation in Portland, and is a novel and startling method of reaching verdicts.

Business Notices.

Seven Millions of Dollars. All day and all night the exhausted particles of every human system are passing off through seven millions of quarter-inch hose—that being about the length of the sweat-ducts connected with the pores. If these are obstructed, sickness ensues; if they were sealed up, the consequences would be death. It is one of the provinces of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to keep the superficial escape pipes open, as well as those larger excretory organs, the bowels. The stomach and the skin sympathize, and it is through the stomach that the Bitters act upon the cuticle, keeping it moist, elastic and unfevered. The famous vegetable invigorant is a marvellous medicine; no other preparation known contains such a variety of curative and preservative elements, or acts, at the same time, in such a variety of beneficial ways. In dyspepsia it strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite, and controls the liver; in fever and ague, it breaks up the fits; in cases of physical prostration it is literally a vital specific.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. HIS AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Reader, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

It affords me great pleasure to be able to announce to my friends (and to all others interested,) that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Company has fully resumed the manufacture of its UNRIVALLED MACHINE, and will expand its business with increased energy. Its new factories will soon be completed, and every machine will be as nicely constructed as possible. All who have used the Machine for four years or less, pronounce it

THE LIGHTEST RUNNING,
EASIEST TO KEEP IN ORDER,
THE MOST DURABLE,

—AND DECIDEDLY—

The Nearest to Perfection

of any Sewing Machine in the market. It is the intention to have the

"DOMESTIC" SEWING MACHINE

Supercede all others in this City and Vicinity.

—THE—

"DOMESTIC" SEWING MACHINE

—IS THE—

"Best Machine to Use,"

—AND THE—

EASIEST TO SELL.

IT IS DURABLE

AND WILL LAST A LIFE-TIME,

Every Machine

I sell is warranted to be all I claim for it, and a

Written Guarantee

WILL BE GIVEN TO PURCHASERS IF DESIRED.

ALL MACHINES ARE FURNISHED—WITHOUT EXTRA CHARGE—WITH CASTORS, A HEMMER AND FELLER, QUILTING GAUGE, BRAIDER, THUMB-SCREW AND GAUGE, A DOZEN OF ASSORTED NEEDLES, HALF A DOZEN BOBBINS, WRENCH, SCREW DRIVER, OILER, BOTTLE OF OIL AND BOOK OF INSTRUCTIONS.

THE "DOMESTIC" WILL

Hem, Fell,
Bind, Braid,
Cord, Quilt,
Tuck, Ruffle,
Embroider, Gather,

AND SEW ON AT THE SAME TIME.

THE GATHERING ATTACHMENT

As applied to the "DOMESTIC" is made on an

ENTIRELY NEW PRINCIPLE.

No other Machine in the United States having any thing for this purpose that can be compared with this late invention. It is applied directly to the presser bar, and is operated by the movements of the Needle Bar.

ITS ACTIONS ARE POSITIVE—ITS MOTIONS PERFECT.

As some of my friends, connected with the sale of other kinds of sewing machines, have interested themselves so much during the past winter as to falsely represent that the "Domestic" S. M. Co. had failed, and that there could be no parts obtained for the "Domestic" Needles, etc., etc., I will state that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Co. has been making steady progress from the first, and as to parts of the machine, needles, etc., being obtained, I keep them constantly on hand. But although the "Domestic" where it has been sold may be run "from morn until eve" without hiring the operator. We have had scarcely any call for extra parts and are pleased to state that we have not so much business in that way as some of our neighbors. If however any one owning a "Domestic" should in any manner be disaffected, all matters will be made right by calling at my office. I will further state that as heretofore I shall keep on hand all kinds of

SEWING MACHINE NEEDLES,
TUCKERS,
GATHERERS,
EMBROIDERERS,
HEMMERS,
BRAIDERS,
CORDERS,
ETC., ETC., ETC.

That "Elephant."

Some time ago a horse belonging to Mr. Theodore Johnson, of York, Me., was taken out of a wagon on Market street by the secretary of the long-named society, and lodged in Beacham's stable. This action has occasioned a vast amount of talk, and Portsmouth and York correspondents of the Dover Democrat and other papers have said a good deal about "stealing horses," etc., asserting that the aforesaid secretary made himself very officious, that his action was illegal, that the horse was all right, and that the society had an "elephant" of the very largest size and most enormous appetite on their hands. The fact that the horse was driven into town by women has also been referred to, in a manner not particularly flattering to the society. The facts in this much discussed case we believe are as follows: The society spoken of is organized to enforce one particular law of the State, and the secretary is a special police officer, and bound (the same as any other policeman) to proceed summarily whenever he sees the law being broken, without waiting to enter a complaint or receive a warrant; the horse referred to was hitched on Market street, and a prominent business man of that locality complained to the society that the animal was in a terrible condition and entirely unfit to be used; the society's agent took a look at the horse and then took him away, considering the merchant's complaint well-founded, and knowing nothing at the time as to whose charge the horse was in,—but on being informed as to the latter fact offered to put another horse in the wagon and drive the women to their homes, which offer was refused,—and ever since then the beast has been well cared for in Beacham's stable, costing the society a pretty penny, no doubt. As the owner of the animal lives in another State legal process could not be brought to bear effectually, so the society tried to buy the horse, in order that he might be killed; but Mr. Johnson refused to sell him for $50, so he continued to exist, enjoying probably the best time he ever had in his life. As the society did not care to have him on their hands as a pensioner, and the incensed owner refused to accede to their terms, a veterinary surgeon was called in on Friday, who pronounced the horse to be suffering from a complication of diseases, (his certificate states that the horse was ring-boned and spavined, had rupture of the sessamoid ligaments, thorough-pins on both hock joints and numerous other blemishes and ailments, incurable, and that in his opinion the horse could not walk without pain, and that he was and always would be entirely worthless,) and on Saturday the "elephant" went the way of all flesh, via a pistol bullet. This action puts a different face on the matter. If the law against cruelty to animals is unconstitutional Mr. Johnson has a good case against the secretary of the society; or, if the law is constitutional and it can be proved to the satisfaction of a jury that the horse was fit for use, his case will be equally as good; but the secretary now stands as defendant, in a suit which must be brought in this State if at all, and not as before, the plaintiff in a case where the defendant could not be reached, and in which the "costs" were rolling up all the time. Mr. Johnson will probably bring a suit against the secretary for damages, and the secretary will certainly defend the case stoutly, and the result will be that owners of crow-baits and societies for the prevention of cruelty to animals will each be taught exactly how far they can proceed without coming under the ban of the law.

Laconics.

Mr. Levi Clark, of Rye, accidentally shot himself in the leg below the knee with a revolver, on Sunday. Mr. Clark is employed as a barber, in this city.

The Portland Press says that by the provisions of the contract between the Eastern and Boston & Maine railroads the 3.15 P. M. trains from Boston and the 6 P. M. trains from Portland are to be discontinued. The first through train over the Eastern will leave Boston at 8 A. M., and the 6 A. M. train from Portland will be discontinued. The night Pullman train will leave Boston at 6.30 instead of 8 P. M. All other trains will run as at present.

The portraits of the three Governors Wentworth, by Tenny, will be on exhibition (by request of the city government) at the Common Council room on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, from 11 o'clock A. M. to 1 P. M., and from 3 o'clock until 6. Two of these portraits are full-length, and the third half-length,—all three are fine specimens of art, of course. All persons desiring to see them are cordially invited to do so, before they are removed to the State House at Concord, which will be done on Friday.

The half-term of Mr. Lamprey's juvenile dancing school commences on Wednesday, in Congress Hall.

Terrible Story from the Sea.

The ship Aracan sailed from Shields, England, in September last for Bombay, laden with coal. On the 14th of February the coal took fire, and the vessel had to be abandoned. The pinnace under the charge of the second mate, Mr Webster, provisioned for only seventeen days, drifted about in the Indian Ocean for thirty-three days until fallen in with by the City of Manchester, and landed at Calcutta. When picked up, the poor fellows were 600 miles from the nearest land, and were in a sad condition. Mr. Webster, in his statement says:

"In addition to myself, there were three men and a boy on board on the 10th of March. The men cast lots as to who should be killed, and the lot fell upon the boy. I would not allow them to kill him, and threatened to shoot the first man who should lay a hand upon him. Things went on this way for two days, when one of the men tried to sink the boat, and said he would have the boy's life in twelve hours. I presented my gun at him, and had no sooner done so than a bird flew over the boat. I fired and killed it. It was instantly secured and devoured, feathers, bones and all. We subsisted after this on barnacles, which adhered to the sides and bottom of the boat, and on sea blubber, which was ravenously laid hold of as it floated past. Delirious with hunger, one of the men, named Layford, asked to be killed. Another named Davies struck him on the head with a belaying pin. The blood was caught in a tin and drank between the two. I threw the tin overboard. The same day these two men fought and bit one another. They then shook hands and laughed and kissed each other like madmen. At last we were, through the mercy of God, picked up by Capt. Hardie, of the City of Manchester, by whom we were very kindly treated and brought to Calcutta."

The surgeon of the steamer which rescued the men says they were in a wretched condition. They could not stand on their feet, their eyes started from their sockets, and they were perfect skeletons. Altogether they presented the most painful sight he ever beheld. The most cautious treatment had to be employed in bringing about their recovery.

It is suggested that cremation would probably cause a consolidation between life and fire insurance companies.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1610 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1820—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well to commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the work of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so-called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Plus IX an Ex-Freemason.

[Translated from the Hanover Courier.]

It is a fact patent to the readers of the Ultramontane papers with what rage they persistently vilify the Freemasons, representing them and their society again and again as a conspiracy against the Church, Christianity and religion generally, as the source of each and every persecution, the authors of every scheme and plot against the clergy—in short, about as the bodily Anti-Christ. The question might be asked apropos, Do these papers know what the Bolletin Official de Grande Oriene Lusitano Unido, the organ of the Great Orient of Portugal, knows? In its July number of last year it contains the most interesting intelligence that in consequence of the condemnatory sentence repeatedly expressed against Freemasons by the Vatican, a lodge in Sicily has been induced to publish the fact that, some decennies since, they had received into their fellowship Brother John Mastai Feretti, the present Pope Pio Nono. Attached to the document is a portrait of the apostate brother in full regalia.

—The New York Mail is severe on the ladies of Gotham, of whom it says: "A very singular style of walking prevails to a great extent among the young ladies of New York who are pleased to call themselves fashionable. Arms akimbo, head tossed on one side and eyes turned Heavenward, they saunter down the street—an embodiment of impudence and sang froid painful to see among the ladies. The 'girl of the period' is unquestionably bold in looks, if not in manners."

—The Nashua Telegraph is responsible for the following: At the fire in Hudson in which there was so much valuable property lost, of course there was not so much attention paid to Mrs. Tabitha, the mother of four beautiful kittens, and it was supposed that she was burned with her family when the house was destroyed. But, to the surprise of the family, while at work about the ruins the other day, Mrs. Tabitha put in an appearance, alive and well, with her family, but pretty hungry. It seems upon investigation that she had, during the excitement, taken her little brood from the house and carried them all into the woods, a short distance from the house, to a place of safety, and there remained until the excitement was over.

PEYSER & KENNEDY,

The liberal settlement of the Eastern Railroad Company for our losses for Damage by Fire and Water at the East Boston Freight Depot, enables us to throw a few cases more of FINE WOOLENS, DOESKINS, DIAGONALS, MELTONS, KERSEYS, CASSIMERES, and SILK AND WOOL MIXTURES, into the market at a low appraisal. The price is marked in plain figures on each piece, and in comparison with the quality will be found to be
ASTONISHINGLY LOW!
Ask your friends and neighbors who have availed themselves of this GREAT CHANCE,
or come and see for yourselves after examining other stocks, that this is no fancy-dream or fiction, but a palpable fact, that you can buy CLOTH FOR GARMENTS of all qualities at so low a figure that EVERYBODY can afford to clothe themselves. Those of a limited means will find it a comfort to their children and themselves without exhausting their stamps. We lose no money by it, assisting others to PRACTICE ECONOMY these hard times. Every sensible Man and Woman and Boy will at once see that we can sell any of our READY-MADE Custom Clothing!
DRESS UP
AT LOW PRICES, when we have had the chance to make them up of fine First-Class materials at half price. This is so plain to everybody that it would be disparaging to the intelligence of our customers to argue the point. Our assortment of Gentlemen's Fine Garments,
Business Suits, and Garments Suitable for Mechanics, Laborers and Farmers is extensive and varied and made up to wear, and those who buy of us will get their money's worth.
We sell no Bankrupt Stock or shop-worn, old faded goods. We do not wish to shock the sensibilities of our customers with fancy tales of dire distress of some (let us hope imaginary) unfortunate trader and his losses. We do not take stock in it. Our Stock and Goods are
NEW, NICE, WELL-MADE AND TRIMMED,
Cost us less than expected, and we sell them so cheap that our customers are cheerful and pleased at our success in business. We make a specialty of
BOYS' AND YOUTHS' SUITS

Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons,
The Largest Stock, The Latest Styles, The Lowest Prices.
The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a
NEW BONNET.
It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:
First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.
Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.
Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.
Hats, not trimmed,
From One Cent to One Dollar.
Hats, trimmed,
From 50 cts. to $10.00.

STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE, } ROCKINGHAM, SS
BY THE JUDGE OF PROBATE FOR SAID COUNTY.

TO the heirs at law and creditors to the estate of CHARLES F. McLAUGHLIN late of Portsmouth in said County, deceased, intestate, and all persons interested in said estate, GREETING.

YOU are hereby notified that HAVEN L. SCOTT, Administrator of the estate of said deceased will present his account of administering said estate at a Court of Probate to be holden at Portsmouth in and for said County, on the second Tuesday of July next, at 10 o'clock, A. M., for examination and allowance.

YOU are therefore hereby cited to appear at said Court to be heard thereon, and to make such objections as you may then have. And notice is hereby required to be given by causing this citation to be published three weeks successively in the Daily Morning Chronicle a newspaper printed at Portsmouth in said County, the last publication whereof to be at least one week prior to said Court. Dated May 20, 1874. By order of the Judge.
THOMAS LEAVITT,
Register of Probate.

TO THE HON. JUDGE OF PROBATE FOR THE COUNTY OF ROCKINGHAM:

RESPECTFULLY shows MARCELLUS BUFFORD of Portsmouth, Administrator of the Estate of STEPHEN SMITH, late of said Portsmouth, deceased, that on the settlement of his account of administering said Estate this day there was found upon hand a balance of $670.11.

That said Stephen had the following named brothers and sisters: Mehitable Smith, Eliza Smith, Giddey Jacob Smith, Jere B. Smith, Olive Smith, and Irene Bressy, who upon inquiry he was led to believe were the only heirs at law of said Stephen. That since the appointment of your petitioner one Hannah Smith of Portsmouth claims to be the widow of said Stephen and that there is a minor son of said Stephen named Walter E. Smith, under guardianship of G. E. Hodgdon.

That as there are doubts as to the rights of said before named alleged heirs to share in said balance, he prays your Honor to examine the claims of the respective parties and to decree a distribution thereof of said balance, as may be legally made by him as administrator.
MARCELLUS BUFFORD,
May 12, 1874. Administrator.

ROCKINGHAM, SS.—Probate Court at Portsmouth in said County, on the 12 day of May A. D. 1874. Upon the foregoing Petition it is Ordered that a hearing be had thereon at a Court of Probate to be holden at Portsmouth in said County, on the second Tuesday of July next, at 10 o'clock, A. M.; and that the Petitioner notify all persons concerned or interested therein to appear at said Court, and show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of the Petition should not be granted, by causing said Petition and this order to be published three weeks successively in the Daily Morning Chronicle, a newspaper printed at Portsmouth in said County, the last publication whereof to be at least one week prior to said Court. By order of the Judge.
THOMAS LEAVITT,

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!
This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.
Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.
By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.
As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.
Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."
BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,
FOR THE WHISKERS.
This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

THE TOOTHACHE.

Gracious godfrey! How it pains me!
Lordy! Don't that old tooth jump!
Seems as though ten thousand devils
Pried with crowbars round its stump.

Whew! Can't some one give me something
Just to stop this blasted pain?
Hot drops! laudanum! cloves, or hop-bag!
Quick! or I shall be insane.

Stop that tarnal baby's squalling!
Jethrew! Don't my tooth ache sweet?
Darn that cat! I'd like to kill it,—
Always under some one's feet.

Jove! I'd like to fight with some one,
Just to get my jaw stove in;—
Fire! Murder! Godfrey diamonds!
Oh! its aching now like sin.

Howling, am I? Well, I know it,
Faith, I guess you'd howl some, too,
If you had a blasted toothache,
Same as this is, troubling you.

'Course I know it don't relieve me,
But I'm crazy with the pain.
A'int there anything to ease it?
Let me try the hope again.

There now, gently, place them easy.
Phew! they're hot! just let 'em cool!
Well, put 'em on,—you're bound to burn me,—
There! you've done it! Darn a fool!

Salem Post.

Rather Early.

[Helena (Montana) Herald.]

There is a young lady in this city who has the misfortune to talk in her sleep, and it is said she will answer, unconsciously, the questions which are secrets in her waking hours. She is waited on by a timid young man who has never been able to screw his courage up to the "sticking-place," and ask her to marry him. He went up one night last week, and entering the front door, as was his habit, without ringing the bell, he saw his dulcinea asleep on the parlor sofa. He hesitated a moment over the propriety of advancing without announcing himself, when he heard his own name softly expressed from between those coral lips. Immediately the pent-up burden of his heart broke out in words:

"Dearest, do you love me?"

"Yes," was the soft response from the sleeper.

"Will you marry me?"

"Yes."

"Shall it be in a year?"

"Any time."

"Let it be in six months."

There was a moment's silence and suspense, when the lips again moved and the young man heard distinctly the little word, "June." He stepped cautiously back and glided quietly from the house. He has been up every night since, but has not referred to the conversation with the sleeper. June is a very pleasant month, but the time is rather too soon for the young man.

Mary Washington's Unfinished Monument.

[Grace Greenwood.]

There is a romantic interest about the unfinished, neglected pile of Berkshire marble as it stands. Some forty years ago "there was a rich merchant in Gotham did dwell," which his name was Barrons—Silas E.—and it came to pass that he fell mortally in love with Miss Custis, and in order to advance his suit, and gratify the young lady's grand-filial piety, he commenced the erection of this monument to Mary,—the mother of Washington, which was to have cost $50,000. President Jackson went from Washington to lay the corner-stone, and had his nose pulled on the way by one Lieutenant Randolph, which was a bad omen—and before the year was out, I believe, Miss Custis grew tired of her Northern lover and rejected him, with the job still on his hands. If she only could have held out till the thing was finished! It seems the rich merchant lover was not of the sort to sit "like Patience on a monument, smiling at grief." He immediately turned his back on the young lady, and went back on her great ancestress, Mary the mother of Washington, abandoning his patriotic undertaking forever.

A High-Toned Ball.

What is termed the "grandest ball that Rawlins ever knew," occurred in that city recently, according to the Laramie (Wyoming) Independent. The modest writer says the Rawlins youth were "dressed in the height of fashion," and describes two of the participants in the following high-toned and Jenkinsey style:

Miss ——, from Wilder's Gulch, was elegantly attired in a handsome buff gros grained buckskin dress, with army blanket overskirt—bottom looped up with buckskin strings cut bias; hair dressed a la Red Cloud, in which was twined a few sprigs of sage-brush, the whole secured behind in a bunch with a handsome pin made with a splinter and a buffalo's ear. She wore a mountain cat-skin cap, festooned with antelope tails, secured under the chin with a rattlesnake skin. Her feet were encased in buckskin moccasins ornamented with beads and soldier buttons. She created a big sensation as she entered the ball, hanging upon the arm of H. Barton of Hallville, who was dressed in the style of his locality, buckskin breeches in boots, hunting-shirt of the same, ornamented with beads and tobacco juice. An army belt of the latest pattern around his waist, securing a pair of six-shooters and a huge bowie knife, which set off his gallant figure to good advantage. Envious glances from both sexes followed this couple round the hall. Several ladies and gentlemen from the mining districts were present and expressed themselves well pleased with the manner in which the ball was conducted. The frequent expressions of delight, such as "Red hot, you bet!" "Ain't it fruit, though?" "Hoop-la!" etc., plainly indicated that they were enjoying themselves in the best possible manner.

The Speakership.

If there is any dependence to be placed in the hints that the democratic leaders in this State throw out, 'Squire Hatch will not attain the title of "Hon." by being chosen Speaker of the House of Representatives. Some way or other Mr. Hatch slips up just before reaching the desired goal. A month or more ago, it seemed that he was to be nominated for Speaker with great humanity, just as he was to be nominated for Governor last year; but as June approaches, Joseph Burrows, Esq., of Plymouth, the nominee of last year, thinks his claims for a renomination should not be disregarded; and as 'Squire Hatch's railroad connections are not pleasing to the managers of the New Hampshire railroads a combined onslaught has been made on his redoubts, and his over-zealous fuglers find their unanimism melting away. Judge Roberts must be the next democratic candidate for Governor, for his friends, who placed him second (if not first) in the convention which renominated Mr. Weston, are too strong to be put aside, next year. But how to get rid of the Portsmouth aspirant for frequent honors agitates the considerate democratic mind! Recent developments go to show that 'Squire Hatch may be shelved with a seat on the Bench, while that popular and able young democrat, J. S. H. Frink, Esq., takes the nomination for Congress. Hon. James W. Emery of this city will doubtless be the republican candidate for Speaker, and perhaps go to Congress next year.

Readables.

A statistical report shows that as a rule in Indiana high taxes prevail in democratic counties, and low taxes in republican counties. Thus, the only counties in the State in which the tax is two dollars and over on the hundred are democratic. Out of twenty-five counties in which taxes are $1.50 on the hundred, seventeen of them are controlled by the democracy. In only fourteen counties are the taxes less than one dollar on the hundred, and nine of these are republican. This is rather curious for the party that does the groaning over extravagance, taxation, etc.

Mr. Beecher, in his last speech for woman's suffrage, gives the following agreeable little picture: "Do you think if the man should say to his wife, 'There is to be a primary meeting to-night, put on your things and let us go;' and they would meet their neighbor and his wife and the young man and his sweetheart, and they should go to the primary, that it would be carried on as it is now? Primaries are not very pleasant pictures now, but there is no reason why they should not be held in parlors."

It is said that Congress might pass a general amnesty bill if Jeff. Davis should die, but there are so many people who think he should have been "hanged to a sour-apple tree," that the measure is impracticable.

Time proves the correctness of the ideas of the Buffalo Express-man who refused to believe in the ride of Collins Graves because no milkman ever got away from water like that.

A Denver (Colorado) physician protests against Eastern doctors allowing their patients in the last stage of consumption to go to Colorado. The air is rarer and contains less oxygen, and is too trying if the disease is far advanced.

Mitchel, the great wheat grower of the Merced region, California, will sow this spring, in all, about fifty thousand acres of wheat.

The bogus Bender having been discharged is refreshing himself in the Labette County Alms House, Kansas.

Miss Kate Field will make her debut on the dramatic stage in Philadelphia on the 4th of June.

Strauss, the conductor, is on his way to Naples with his splendid band, numbering fifty-four instruments. He will give a short series of popular concerts and then proceed northward to Rome, Florence, Livorno, Venice, Milan and other towns. A sum of 50,000 francs is said to be guaranteed to him over and above all expenses for travelling and maintenance.

Gen. Butler was in his accustomed place in the House of Representatives, on Monday. His appearance showed him to be still a sick man.

Edward Dollard, a man of [illegible] years old, was kicked to death in the hospital of the Massachusetts State almshouse on the afternoon of March 12, by one Daniel Leary, who was then (and is now) hospital steward. Leary was suspended on Tuesday, and the case (which has only just come to light) is being investigated.

The Norwegian barque Fredsel reports that on the 3d inst., in latitude 45 46, longitude 43 49, she passed within two miles of a steamer of about 2000 tons burthen, apparently British, topsail schooner rigged, with bowsprit very deep in the water, foresail set, house amidships, painted yellow. She appeared abandoned. A large British ship was going to her. It coming on a thick fog the Fredsel could not get further particulars. It is suggested that this may be the missing Trojan.

Schooner Arrow of New Bedford, for New York, sprung a leak and sunk off Glen Cove, L. I., Monday night. Two sailors are supposed to be lost. The captain and rest of the crew were saved. The vessel was built a year ago and valued at $18,000. It is thought she can be raised.

A destructive fire took place in St. John, N. B., on Sunday night. The buildings were wooden, and old ones, chiefly occupied by laborers and their families, with a few stores in the lower part. Five firemen were precipitated into the fire, four of whom got out more or less burned or bruised; but the fifth lay with a heavy beam across one of his legs. The poor fellow was sensible, and implored assistance. A desperate effort was made to release him, but before he could be got out he was dead.

The Meriden Reflector says: One of our Meriden bank Presidents was taking his seat at his residence after having been on a voyage of discovery to his hennery, but suddenly arose from the chair with the exclamation: "Oh! I have sat on an egg, Mrs. B—, come quick and fix it for me," slowly walking toward the door to his room the while, and walking very sedately, his shoulders drawn up, and scarcely any motion visible except his legs walking slowly along, till he got the door partly open when he suddenly stopped and said: "Oh! I left it in my overcoat."

The person who committed the murderous assault on the captain and mate of schooner Annie B., Saturday night, was arrested at Rockland, on Monday evening, on board the Deer Isle packet. He is a young man of about 25 years, named Robbins, and belongs on Deer Isle. He has a pistol wound in the breast, in which the ball remains, and a grazing mark of a pistol shot on the side of the head and cuts on face. He admitted the assault to the officers, for which he said he had no cause, and was not in his right mind when he did it.

Mr. Sartoris, Nellie Grant's husband, parts his hair in the middle.

At Seymour, Ind., two men named Flutwood have been convicted of the murder of a little German boy a year ago, and sentenced to the penitentiary for life. The evidence showed that they enticed the child into a field, beat out his brains with a club, cut his throat, and threw the body into a creek. The object of the murder was the robbery from the child of two dollars.

The town of Independence, Iowa, was almost destroyed by fire on Monday. Over forty of the best business houses, and several dwellings, were burned. Loss $500,000. Three men were killed.

It is "positively announced" that Secretary Richardson will retire from the Cabinet this week, and the B. H. Bristow, of Kentucky, will be nominated for Secretary of the Treasury.

The British man-of-war Niobe is ashore at Cape Plane, Miquelon, and will probably be a total loss. Crew saved.

A man named Parker recently arrived at Los Pinos Indian Agency, Colorado, and told a fearful tale of suffering and cannibalism, by which five men lost their lives, he being the only survivor. He killed the last man within twenty miles of the Agency.

The murdered woman whose body was found in the river at Braintree, Mass., Sunday, has been identified as Julia Hawks, a domestic, of good character. The murderer has not yet been discovered.

—Because Judge Nott, of the Illinois Court of Claims, in his decision against the application of Mrs. Lockwood to practice law, said "that the masculine gender (which is generally used in the statutes) frequently embraces the feminine," the St. Louis Globe has come to the conclusion that it does—every time it gets a good chance.

—The Dresden papers report that seventeen experiments have been made during the present year with invariable success in the hospitals of that city to infuse lamb's blood into the human subject. In the first case tried the patient had long suffered from pulmonary disease, and the immediate effect of the operation was to raise the pulse and impart a sense of greater strength.

—An Indian paper says:—Tiger literature has a curious addition made to it in the shape of a story from Vizagapatam. A man and his wife were out in a forest when a tiger appeared and seized the man. "His wife, hearing him cry, ran up to the tiger, threw herself on his back, and yelled vociferously." Naturally the animal "was frightened," as the husband has always been when she has gone through the like performance upon himself.

Hints for Farmers.

Here is a remedy for lice on cattle which a farmer says is perfectly harmless to the animals, while it is "dead shot" to the vermin: Take half a pint of whale oil, and mix in all the black snuff you can and not have it too stiff, and apply with a swab, and rub in well. This will kill all the lice it comes in contact with for the time. After a few days apply again, and that will finish all that have hatched since the first application.

A Michigan dairyman doctors his cows in this way: For retention of after-birth he gives a strong dose of tansy tea, say three pints every twelve hours. Says he has never known the second dose given without effecting the desired result, and has used the prescription for thirty years or more. For garget he gives a tablespoonful of saltpetre every other day—say two or three doses—then after a few days, if a cure has not been effected, the doses are repeated. He recommends the giving of saltpetre to dairy cows occasionally, as a preventive of the garget.

Now, as the warm weather is coming on, we should look to our cellars. All the vegetable matter should be removed from them, except potatoes, and they should have the sprouts rubbed off as fast as they appear. After being thoroughly cleaned of everything offensive in the vegetable or any other line, whitewash them with two good coats, and you will have sweet cellars and run no risk of fevers and other illnesses arising from a neglect of these matters. Sinks about a house which become very offensive in hot weather, should also have a cleaning out, the water-course open, and all soil impregnated should be removed and used as manure. No careful farmer, no good housewife will allow any accumulation of filth of any kind to remain about the house.

Chickens want no food for many hours after they are hatched, as they are then digesting the yolk of an egg, which constitutes their first food, and acquiring strength to run about. When they begin to peck they should be fed with soft food, and very small grain. Unquestionably, the best soft food is an egg beaten up with a tablespoonful of milk and heated in the oven or by the side of the fire until it sets into a soft custard. Chickens fed partially on this make wonderful progress. If they are to make large fowls, they must be fed soon after daylight; if, as is too often the case, they are left hungry for three hours in the morning, they are always stunted in their growth. They must be fed the first thing, and, while they are young, every two or three hours during the day.

A Disgusted Southerner.

[Watterson at Washington.]

It makes a Southern man of liberal ideas and good intention, schooled in the dangerous field of practical revolution, sick to see the obtusity and callousness of the North in Congress. Take any or all of them—take such languishing idiots as Hoar and such protesting harlots as Hawley—twin representatives of the prevailing hypocrisy—and then jump to the rank and file of adventurers, democrats and republicans, and one is tempted to exclaim, "There is but one honest man at Washington, and that man is Ben Butler!" It is cruel, but it is at least half true, for they are for the most part humbugs or imbeciles, and it cannot be said, whatever his deformities may be, that Ben Butler is either.

Seven Millions of Pores.

All day and all night the exhausted particles of every human system are passing off through seven millions of quarter-inch hose—that being about the length of the sweat-ducts connected with the pores. If these are obstructed, sickness ensues; if they were sealed up, the consequences would be death. It is one of the provinces of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to keep the superficial escape pipes open, as well as those larger excretory organs, the bowels. The stomach and the skin sympathize, and it is through the stomach that the Bitters act upon the cuticle, keeping it moist, elastic and unfevered. The famous vegetable invigorant is a marvellous medicine; no other preparation known contains such a variety of curative and preservative elements, or acts, at the same time, in such a variety of beneficial ways. In dyspepsia it strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite, and controls the liver; in fever and ague, it breaks up the fits; in cases of physical prostration it is literally a vital specific.

A New York Physician, of many years' practice in the treatment of lung diseases, writes as follows to Messrs. Walter Baker & Co., of Boston, regarding their preparations of Chocolate and Cocoa which received a Medal of Merit from the Vienna Exposition: "Experience from many years' practice in the treatment of lung diseases has convinced me that as an article of diet for those suffering with any form of consumption, Chocolate is far preferable to Tea or Coffee; in fact, the two last mentioned articles are injurious in many cases, while Chocolate, being an aliment and analeptic, is particularly serviceable where digestion has been impaired by disease. Having examined several specimens of Chocolate, I find that Baker's may be conscientiously recommended to invalids."

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles blistered with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

Helmbold's Buchu is still in the zenith of its popularity. Notwithstanding the absence of Dr. Helmbold, the celebrated medicine is still manufactured at the laboratory at Philadelphia, and is sold by all respectable druggists. $10,000 reward can safely be offered for a more infallible cure for PILES than ANAKESIS. The cures performed by this wonderful remedy are simply miraculous. Lotions, ointments and internal remedies produce temporary relief, but ANAKESIS is an external remedy, a simple suppository, applied to the tumors, acts as a soothing poultice and medicine, gives instant relief, and cures absolutely. All Doctors prescribe it.—Price $1.00. Sold by Druggists everywhere, and sent free by mail from Principal Depot, 46 Walker str., New York.

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Reader, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

THE "LIGHT RUNNING"

"DOMESTIC"

KING OF 'SEWING Machines.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

It affords me great pleasure to be able to announce to my friends (and to all others interested,) that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Company has fully resumed the manufacture of its UNRIVALLED MACHINE, and will expand its business with increased energy. Its new factories will soon be completed, and every machine will be as nicely constructed as possible. All who have used the Machine for four years or less, pronounce it

EASIEST TO SELL.

IT IS DURABLE

AND WILL LAST A LIFE-TIME.

Every Machine

I sell is warranted to be all I claim for it, and a

Written Guarantee

WILL BE GIVEN TO PURCHASERS IF DESIRED.

ALL MACHINES ARE FURNISHED—WITHOUT EXTRA CHARGE—WITH CASTORS, A HEMMER AND FELLER, QUILTING GAUGE, BRAIDER, THUMB-SCREW AND GAUGE, A DOZEN OF ASSORTED NEEDLES, HALF A DOZEN BOBBINS, WRENCH, SCREW DRIVER, OILER, BOTTLE OF OIL AND BOOK OF INSTRUCTIONS.

THE GATHERING ATTACHMENT

As applied to the "DOMESTIC" is made on an

ENTIRELY NEW PRINCIPLE.

No other Machine in the United States having any thing for this purpose that can be compared with this late invention. It is applied directly to the presser bar, and is operated by the movements of the Needle Bar.

ITS ACTIONS ARE POSITIVE—ITS MOTIONS PERFECT.

As some of my friends, connected with the sale of other kinds of sewing machines, have interested themselves so much during the past winter as to falsely represent that the "Domestic" S. M. Co. had failed, and that there could be no parts obtained for the "Domestic" Needles, etc., etc., I will state that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Co. has been making steady progress from the first, and as to parts of the machine, needles, etc., being obtained, I keep them constantly on hand. But although the "Domestic" where it has been sold may be run "from morn until eve" without tiring the operator. We have had scarcely any call for extra parts and are pleased to state that we have not so much business in that way as some of our neighbors. If however any one owning a "Domestic" should in any manner be disaffected, all matters will be made right by calling at my office. I will further state that as heretofore I shall keep on hand all kinds of

SEWING MACHINE NEEDLES,

SUMMER is coming! I want a piece of ICE; where can I get it? Why, just send a boy to Perkins', No. 30 South St., and you are sure of it. The Subscriber, having purchased the entire interest of the Portsmouth Ice Co., would take this opportunity to thank his old customers for their past patronage, and would solicit the continuance of the same as well as that of the public generally. Situated as I am, with a large Ice House on Mt. Vernon St., I am prepared to deliver ICE out from pure spring water, in any part of the city, on the shortest possible notice. By strict attention to the wants of the public and by selecting honest and accommodating drivers, I mean to merit and hope to receive a large share of the public patronage. Memorial Day.

Arrangements for the celebration of "Decoration Day" in this city are being rapidly completed. A circular has been issued to all surviving soldiers and sailors resident in this city to participate in the services and they are earnestly solicited to meet at the Hall on Ladd street, on Thursday evening next, to make such preparations as are necessary.

Our citizens are invited to lend their assistance, and to contribute flowers, and we trust this invitation will meet with the same generous response as in former years. We are requested to state that those who wish to contribute money for the purchase of flowers, etc., can leave their subscriptions at the store of Mr. J. H. Hutchinson, on Market Square, who has been appointed a committee to receive contributions. Those who intend to aid in the arrangement of the evergreen and flowers will be duly informed of the place of meeting.

The above showing is praiseworthy, and the citizens' committee (and especially the treasurer, Hon. William Simes,) are entitled to much credit for their successful exertions in the matter. In addition to the foregoing list we may mention that Kearsarge Engine Co., No. 3, sent forward $85, the net proceeds of a ball given by them; and that the Ladies' Mission of the South Parish, in addition to their subscription as recorded above, have forwarded money and clothing to the sufferers by the flood at Williamsburg, Mass.

"Woodman, Spare that Tree."

For many years the trees of Portsmouth have been considered the glory and the beauty of the place, and have been a great source of pleasure to its inhabitants and to those who revisit it, perhaps after an absence of years. Trees have been planted with much care by the citizens, and at some expense to the city. It requires a long time for a tree to become a thing of beauty; what then can describe the indignation or regret of one who has watched it or thought of it as it has been growing during all that period, in seeing it cut down in one short hour? Some one has suggested that all the old cemeteries here be plauted with ornamental trees. What could more adorn them? And many of our old streets would present a much better appearance if their disfigurements were concealed by the works of nature—to the comfort also of the citizens during the hot season. Yet what would all this avail, if the trees are suddenly to be removed at the freak of some one not having the love of the community in his heart? Why will not the city government (mindful that what is everybody's business is nobody's) appoint a city forester, whose business it shall be to look after these matters? VIATOR.

Laconics.

Don't kill the birds.

The friends of that good soul and genial philosopher, B. P. Shillaber, Esq., will learn with pleasure that subscriptions to his forthcoming book have been made to such an extent that its success is warranted. It will doubtless be the crowning work of his life.

If there ever is a time when a man is justified in changing the subject suddenly, it is when his wife asks if he posted that letter to mother promptly.

The Journal says: "The new edition of Ordinances of the City of Portsmouth from the Journal press, is pronounced by many competent judges to be one of the finest pieces of printing ever done in this city." The work is very well done, certainly; but a still finer piece of work is the Report of the Centennial Celebration of the Universalist Church, printed by Mr. Wm. A. Plaisted, who has recently sold his office and business to Mr. Albert W. Ham. The cost of the Centennial Report we are informed was about $140 less than that of the same number of Ordinances, the latter containing a few more pages though probably less reading matter, being printed in larger type.

Lieut. Col. J. C. Duane has been ordered to relieve Lieut. Col. C. E. Blunt in charge of the fortifications in this harbor. Col. Blunt goes to Buffalo to relieve Major Franklin Harwood.

Show your tickets at the gate, is now the imperative rule of the Eastern railroad at the Boston station.

The annual meeting of the Concord Railroad stockholders was held in Concord on Tuesday. John E. Lyon, Onslow Stearns, James W. Johnson, Fred. Smythe, Jas. P. Pitman, John A. Burnham, and Samuel Bell were chosen directors.

—Tichborne is so mad that he will eat nothing but bread.

—Millions for moieties, remarks Congress, and not one centennial.

—Prof. Swing says there are a hundred gates to salvation, and he proposes to Swing some of them wide open.

—Business is increasing on the Union Pacific. Four men were run over and completely mashed the other day.

—A Missouri editor has offered Bret Harte fourteen dollars a week to go out there and write up the local column.

—Piatt spells Perkins "Perquins," and Eli spells Piatt's front name "Dun." And so these intellectual giants wage their mighty warfare.

—Balzac said any man can marry any woman, and we believe it since a pretty girl in Springfield, Ohio, married a man named Popcock.

—A paper at Elgin, Ill., says that a man's social standing in that town is graded by whether he puts a ten-penny nail or a quarter into the contribution-box.

—Charles Cracken, a negro boy, aged 19, went to sleep on the top of a brick wall 70 feet high, in Nashville, and was awakened by striking the ground with his body.

—Mrs. Williams, of LaCrosse, talked too much, and her husband filled her mouth with wafers, but the court decided that this wasn't no wafer to stop her and fined Williams $25.

—The romantic youth who hankers to be a canal boat driver and encounter typhoons, etc., ought to know that every canal boatman is knocked down an average of twenty-one times per month.

—It runs in the family. Mrs. Jury, sister of the claimant and one of the witnesses in the Tichborne case, was before a London police court recently, charged with stealing sheets and pillow-cases from her lodgers.

—The New York World says "the democratic party will prove in the future, as it has proved in the past, the stubbornest of things," and the Pittsburg Commercial wants to know if a jackass is meant by the stubbornest of things.

—If there be any sight in this world which can justly be called perfectly sweet, it is the spectacle afforded by three young men, dressed precisely alike, walking down town Sunday morning, to buy the cigars necessary for the proper enjoyment of the day.

—A regulation black-and-tan poodle, to be worth $100, must have a head about the size of a black walnut; eyes that stand outside of their sockets; a tail about the size of a lead pencil, and legs so attenuated that the animal falls over on his back every time he lifts his head to bark.

—A Cincinnati preacher mixed things pretty badly by saying: "Hampden in England said he would not pay tax. King John said he should. Men rallied around him; Magna Charta was the result." There was only four hundred years between King John and Magna Charta and Hampden.

—George Lawrence of Macon, Georgia, has a couple of mocking birds who got jealous of each other the other day, and had a desperate fight. One of them getting the worst sung out plainly "quit, quit." This failing to stop the fight, he sang out "police, police;" when a policeman passing that way parted the combatants.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period it is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's Island, &c.
The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1820—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a deceased son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.
Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.
THOS. F. MOSES.

Sherman at the Circus.

[Cincinnati Commercial.]

Let me tell what I saw, not long ago, at a circus. Sitting in front of us was General Sherman, and with him quite a number of children whom he had gathered from the "byways and hedges." We saw him look down under the seat, and then haul out a dirty, ragged little darkey, who had crept in under the tent, and then seat him at his feet, where, by crowding, was made a place for the little rascal. "Now," said the General, "sit there, my boy, and see everything. Bless me! many a time I have done just the same thing, and many a thrashing have I had." He seemed like a child; everything pleased him, and we wondered where was the vanity of which people talked so loudly. Who has a better right to be vain than Sherman; vain of his valor, vain of his deeds, vain of his wife, vain of his children, and vain of the love of his country-people?

Feeding Oats to Colts.

[Maine Farmer.]

I have always found that generous feeding pays the best, and I have found nothing so good for colts as a generous supply of oats regularly fed: There is not much danger of feeding too many. The danger is in the opposite direction. The most critical part of the colt's life is perhaps the first winter when he should be liberally fed with oats or oatmeal, with a few potatoes, and have daily exercise. One of your correspondents prefers carrots to other roots for feed. This does not agree with my experience. After giving carrots a fair and thorough trial, extending through three winters, I came to the conclusion (and I think intelligently) that carrots, as a feed for horses and colts, are entirely worthless. The more oats you feed to your colts the more muscle, the more size, the more power, the more endurance, the more style and speed you obtain, and the more money you get when you sell them.

is extensive and varied and made up to wear, and those who buy of us will get their money's worth.

We sell no Bankrupt Stock or shop-worn, old faded goods. We do not wish to shock the sensibilities of our customers with fancy tales of dire distress of some (let us hope imaginary) unfortunate trader and his losses. We do not take stock in it. Our Stock and Goods are

NEW, NICE, WELL-MADE AND TRIMMED,

Cost no less than expected, and we sell them so cheap that our customers are cheerful and pleased at our success in business. We make a specialty of

HENDERSON & CO.,

ANNOUNCE THEIR
SPRING OPENING
—OF—
Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons.
The Largest Stock, The Latest Styles, The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,
From One Cent to One Dollar.
Hats, trimmed,
From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH of the city of Portsmouth call the attention of the public to the following sections of City Ordinances No. 4 and No. 100, and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the City to aid them in the execution of their duty.

ORDINANCE No. 4.

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or slip, or into any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 11. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 14. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

SEC. 17. Any person or persons who shall violate any rule or regulation, or commit any act forbidden in any section of this ordinance, to which no special penalty is annexed, shall forfeit and pay a sum not less than one dollar nor more than twenty dollars, to be recovered by complaint before the police court of this city.

ORDINANCE No. 100.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.

It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.

It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes healthy and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,
FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

The Rose of Tuolumne.

BY BRET HARTE.

It was nearly two o'clock in the morning. The lights were out in Robinson's Hall, where there had been dancing and revelry, and the moon riding high painted the black windows with silver. The cavalcade that an hour ago shocked the sedate pines with song and laughter, were all dispersed; one enamored swain had ridden east, another west, another north, and another south, and the object of their adoration, left within her bower at Chemisal Ridge, was calmly going to bed.

I regret that I am not able to indicate the exact stage of that process. Two chairs were already filled with delicate enwrappings and white confusion, and the young lady herself, half hidden in the silky threads of her yellow hair, had at one time borne a faint resemblance to a partly-husked ear of Indian corn. But she was now clothed in that one long, formless garment that makes all women equal, and the round shoulders and neat waist, that an hour ago had been so fatal to the peace of mind of Four Forks, had utterly disappeared. The face above it was very pretty; the foot below, albeit shapely was not small. "The flowers, as a general thing don't raise their heads much to look after me," she said with superb frankness to one of her lovers.

The expression of "The Rose" to-night was contentedly placid. She walked slowly to the window, and, making the smallest possible peep-hole through the curtain, looked out. The motionless figure of a horseman still lingered on the road, with an excess of devotion that only a coquette or a woman very much in love could tolerate. "The Rose" at that moment was neither, and after a reasonable pause turned away, saying quite audibly, that it was "too ridiculous for anything." As she came back to her dressing-table it was noticeable that she walked steadily and erect, without that slight affection of lameness common to people with whom bare feet are only an episode. Indeed it was only four years ago that "The Rose" without shoes or stockings, a long-limbed, colty girl, in a waistless calico gown, had leaped from the tail-board of her father's emigrant wagon when it first drew up at Chemisal Ridge. Certain wild habits of "The Rose" had outlived transplanting and cultivation.

A knock at the door surprised her. In another moment she had leaped into bed, and, with darkly-frowning eyes, from its secure recess demanded:

"Who's there?"

An apologetic murmur on the other side of the door was the response.

"Why—father—is that you?"

There were further murmurs, affirmative, deprecatory, and persistent.

"Wait," said "The Rose" and she got up, unlocked the door, and leaped nimbly into bed again, and said, "Come."

The door opened timidly. The broad stooping shoulders and grizzled head of a man past the middle age appeared; after a moment's hesitation a pair of large diffident feet shod with canvass slippers concluded to follow. When the apparition was complete it closed the door softly, and stood there—a very shy ghost indeed, with apparently more than the usual spiritual indisposition to begin a conversation. "The Rose" resented this impatiently, though I fear not altogether intelligibly:

"Do, father, I declare!"

"You was abed, Jinny," said Mr. McClosky, slowly, glancing with a singular mixture of masculine awe and paternal pride upon the two chairs and their contents. "You was abed and undressed."

"I was."

"Surely," said Mr. McClosky, seating himself on the extreme edge of the bed and painfully tucking his feet away under it. "Surely." After a pause he rubbed a short, thick stumpy beard, that bore a general resemblance to a badly-worn blacking brush, with the palm of his hand, and went on, "You had a good time, Jinny?"

"Yes, father."

"They was all there?"

"Yes, Rance and York and Ryder and—and Jack."

"And Jack!" Mr. McClosky endeavored to throw an expression of arch inquiry into his small, tremulous eyes, but meeting the unabashed, wide-opened lid of his daughter, he winked rapidly and blushed to the roots of his hair.

"Yes, Jack was there," said Jenny, without change of color, or the least self-consciousness in her great gray eyes. "He came home with me, and asked me that same question again, father, and I said 'Yes.' It's to be—soon. We're going, to live at Four Forks in his own house, and next Winter we are going to Sacramento. I suppose it's all right, father, eh?" She emphasized the question with a slight kick through the bed-clothes as the paternal McClosky had fallen into an abstract reverie.

"Yes, surely," said Mr. McClosky, recovering himself with some confusion. After a pause he looked down at the bed-clothes, and patting them tenderly, continued:—"You couldn't have done any better, Jinny. They isn't a girl in Tuolumne ez could strike it ez rich ez you hev—even if they got the chance." He paused again and then said, "Jinny?"

"Yes, father."

"You'se in bed and undressed?"

"Yes."

"You couldn't," said Mr. McClosky, glancing hopelessly at the two chairs and slowly rubbing his chin, "you couldn't dress yourself again—could yer?"

"Why, father?"

"—Kinder get yourself into them things again?" he added hastily. "Not all of 'em, you know, but some of 'em. Not if I helped you?—sorter stood by and lent a hand now and then with a strap or a buckle, or a necktie, or a shoe-string," he continued, still looking at the chairs, and evidently trying to boldly familiarize himself with its contents.

"Are you crazy, father?" demanded Jenny, suddenly sitting up with a portentous switch of yellow mane. Mr. McClosky rubbed one side of his beard, which already had the appearance of having been quite worn away by that process, and faintly dodged the question.

"Jinny," he said, tenderly stroking the bed-clothes as he spoke, "this yer's what's the matter. Thar is a stranger down stairs—a stranger to you, lovey, but a man ez I've knowed a long time. He's been here about an hour, and he'll be here until four o'clock, when the up stage passes. Now I wants ye, Jinny dear, to get up and come down stairs and kinder help me pass the time with him. It's no use, Jinny," he went on, gently raising his hand to deprecate any interruption, "It's no use—he won't go to bed! He won't play keerds; whisky don't take no effect on him. Ever since I knowed him he was the most onsatisfactory critter to hev round—"

"What do you have him round for then?" interrupted Miss Jenny, sharply.

Mr. McClosky's eyes fell. "Ef he hedn't kem out of his way to-night to do me a good turn, I wouldn't ask ye, Jinny. I wouldn't, so help me! But I thought ez I couldn't do anything with him, you might come down and sorter fetch him, Jinny, as you did the others."

Miss Jenny shrugged her pretty shoulders.

"Is he old or young?"

"He's young enough, Jinny, but he knows a power of things."

"What does he do?"

"Not much, I reckon. He's got money in the mill at Four Forks. He travels round a good deal. I've heard, Jinny, that he's a poet—writes them rhymes, you know." Mr. McClosky here appealed submissively, but directly, to his daughter. He remembered that she had frequently been in receipt of printed elegiac couplets known as "mottoes," containing inclosures equally saccharine.

Miss Jenny slightly curled her pretty lip. She had that fine contempt for the illusions of fancy, which belongs to the perfectly healthy young animal.

"Not," continued Mr. McClosky, rubbing his head reflectively, "not ez I'd advise ye, Jinny, to say anything to him about poetry. It ain't twenty minutes ago ez I did. I set the whisky afore him in the parlor. I wound up the music-box and set it goin'. Then I sez to him, sociable-like and free, 'Jest consider yourself in your own house and repeat what you allow to be your finest production,' and he raged. That man, Jinny, jest raged. That's no end of the names he called me. You see, Jinny," continued Mr. McClosky, apologetically, "he's known me a long time."

But his daughter had already dismissed the question with her usual directness. "I'll be down in a few moments, father," she said after a pause, "but don't say anything to him about it—don't say I was abed."

Mr. McClosky's face beamed. "You was allers a good girl, Jinny," he said, dropping on one knee the better to imprint a respectful kiss on the forehead. But Jenny caught him captive. "Father," said she, trying to fix his shy eyes with the clear steady glance of her own, "all the girls that were there to-night had some one with them. Mame Robinson had her aunt, Lucy Rance had her mother, Kate Pierson had her sister—all except me had some other woman. Father, dear," her lip trembled just a little, "I wish mother hadn't died when I was so small. I wish there was some other woman in the family besides me. I ain't lonely with you, father dear; but if there was only some one, you know, when the time comes for John and me—"

Her voice here suddenly gave out, but not her brave eyes, that were still fixed earnestly upon his face. Mr. McClosky, apparently tracing out a pattern on the bed-quilt, essayed words of comfort:

"There ain't one of them gals ez you've named, Jinny, ez could do what you've done with a whole Noah's ark of relations at their backs! Thar ain't one ez wouldn't sacrifice her nearest relation to make the strike that you hev. Ez to mothers, may be my dear, you're doin' better without one."

He rose suddenly, and walked toward the door. When he reached it he turned, and, in his old deprecating manner, said: "Don't be long, Jinny," smiled, and vanished from the head downward, his canvas slippers asserting themselves resolutely to the last.

When Mr. McClosky reached his parlor again his troublesome guest was not there. The decanter stood on the table untouched, three or four books lay upon the floor, a number of photographic views of the Sierras were scattered over the sofa; two sofa pillows, a newspaper, and a Mexican blanket lay on the carpet, as if the late occupant of the room had tried to read in a recumbent position. A French window, opening upon a veranda, which never before in the history of the house had been unfastened, now betrayed by its waving lace curtain the way that the fugitive had escaped. Mr. McClosky heaved a sigh of dispair; he looked at the gorgeous carpet purchased in Sacramento at a fabulous price, at the crimson satin and rosewood furniture unparalleled in history of Tuolumne, at the massively-framed pictures on the walls, and looked beyond it, through the open window, to the reckless man who, fleeing these sybaritic allurements, was smoking a cigar upon the moonlit road. This room, which had so often awed the youth of Tuolumne into filial respect, was evidently a failure. It remained to be seen if "The Rose" herself had lost her fragrance. "I reckon Jinny will fetch him yet," said Mr. McClosky, with parental faith.

He stepped from the window upon the veranda, But he had scarcely done this before his figure was detected by the stranger, who at once crossed the road. When within a few feet of McClosky he stopped. "You persistent old plantigrade," he said, in a low voice, audible only to the person addressed, and a face full of affected anxiety, "why do you not go to bed? Didn't I tell you to go and leave me here alone? In the name of all that is idiotic and imbecile, why do you continue to shuffle about here? Or are you trying to drive me crazy with your presence, as you have with that wretched music box I've just dropped under yonder tree? It's an hour and a half before the stage passes; do you imagine for a single moment, that I can tolerate you until then—eh? Why don't you speak? Are you asleep? You don't mean to say that you have the audacity to add somnambulism to your other weakness; you're not low enough to repeat yourself under any such weak pretext as that—eh?"

A fit of nervous coughing ended this extraordinary exordium, and half sitting, half leaning against the veranda, Mr McClosky's guest turned his face and part of a slight elegant figure toward his host. The lower portion of this upturned face wore an habitual expression of fastidious discontent, with an occasional line of physical suffering. But the brow above was frank and critical, and a pair of dark mirthful eyes sat in playful judgment over the super-sensitive mouth and its suggestion.

"I allowed to go to bed, Ridgeway," said McClosky, meekly, "but my girl Jinny's jist got back from a little tear up at Robinson's, and ain't inclined to turn in yet. You know what girls is. So I thought we three would have a social chat together to pass away the time."

"You mendacious old hypocrite, she got back an hour ago," said Ridgeway, "as that savage-looking escort of hers, who has been haunting the house ever since, can testify. My belief is, like an enterprising idiot that you are, you've dragged that girl out of her bed that we might mutually bore each other."

Mr. McClosky was too much stunned by this evidence of Ridgeway's apparently superhuman penetration to reply. After enjoying his host's confusion for a moment with his eyes, Ridgeway's mouth asked grimly:

"And who is this girl, anyway?"

"Nancy's."

"Your wife's?"

"Yes. But look yar, Ridgeway," said McClosky, laying one hand imploringly on Ridgeway's sleeve, "not a word about her to Jinny. She thinks her mother's dead—died in Missouri. Eh?"

Ridgeway nearly rolled from the veranda in an excess of rage.

"Good God! Do you mean to say that you have been concealing from her a fact that any day, any moment may come to her ears? That you have been letting her grow up in ignorance of something that by this time she might have outgrown and forgotten? That you have been, like a besotted old ass, all these years slowly forging a thunderbolt that anyone may crush her with? That"—but here Ridgeway's cough took possession of his voice, and even put a moisture into his dark eyes, as he looked at McClosky's aimless hand feebly employed upon his short beard.

"But," said McClosky, "look how she's done. She's held her head as high as any of them. She's to be married in a month to the richest man in the county," he added cunningly; "Jack Ashe ain't the man to sit by and hear anything said of his wife or her relations, you bet. But hush—that's her foot on the stairs. She's comin'."

She came. I don't think the French window held a finer view than when she put aside the curtains and stepped out. She had dressed herself simply and hurriedly, but with a woman's knowledge of her best points, so that you got the long curves of her shapely limbs, the shorter curves of her round waist and shoulders, the long sweep of her yellow braids, the light of her gray eyes, and even the delicate rose of her complexion, without knowing how it was delivered to you.

The introduction by Mr. McClosky was brief. When Ridgeway had got over the fact that it was two o'clock in the morning, and that the cheek of this Tuolumne goddess nearest him was as dewy and fresh as an infant's—that she looked like Marguerite, without probably ever having heard of Goethe's heroine, he talked, I dare say very sensibly. When Miss Jenny, who from her childhood had been brought up among the sons of Anak, and who was accustomed to have the supremacy of our noble sex presented to her as a physical fact, found herself in the presence of a new and strange power in the slight and elegant figure beside her, she was at first frightened and cold. But finding that this power, against which the weapons of her own physical charms were of no avail, was a kindly one, albeit generally, she fell to worshipping it, after the fashion of women, and casting before it the fetiches and other idols of her youth. She even confessed to it. So that in half an hour Ridgeway was in possession of all the facts connected with her life, and a great many, I fear, of her fancies—except one. When Mr. McClosky found the young people thus amicably disposed, he calmly went to sleep.

The loss of the schooner Isaac W. Seymour, and many lives, is reported.

Governor Weston will be inaugurated next Thursday.

The senate has passed the bill reported from the naval committee by Mr. Cragin, for the relief of contractors of vessels of war and steam machinery. The provisions allow claimants to institute proceedings in the court of claims, and in event of any of them having been paid more in amount than the losses sustained by reason of delays occasioned by the Naval department and the incident rise in labor and material entering into the construction of vessels, the court is authorized to render judgment against such claimants in favor of the United States, for excess. The bill is general in its terms and has been before Congress for a long time. Many eastern and western ship-builders are interested in it.

A Bad Boy.

CHAPTER I.—INTRODUCTORY.

His name was John Henderson Tompkins, and he was going on thirteen years old. He had freckles all over his nose, chewed plug tobacco, and loafed around select schools and put tin ears on boys smaller than himself. His father was killed by a Canada saw-log, his only sister slept in the silent tomb, and his mother divided her time between gossiping and canvassing money for the heathens in Africa.

CHAPTER II.—THUSLY.

Thus it will be seen that there was no one to give John Henderson Tompkins any domestic attention beyond an occasional whack with a slipper, which made him the worse. He wasn't sent to school; never had to take a dose of castor oil; was allowed to go around with a letter in the post-office and his pants supported by a magnificent belt of sheep-twine, and if he wasn't home at ten o'clock at night his mother felt perfectly sure that he would dump down someyhere and be home in time for codfish and potatoes in the morning.

CHAPTER III.—SHAMEFUL NEGLECT.

John Henderson Tompkins' mother never took him on her knee and asked him if he knew what was beyond the bright stars, and if he knew where he'd go to if he grew up an awful liar and horse-thief. She never told him about the Children of Egypt, Moses in the bulrushes or Daniel in the lions' den, and it is no wonder that he grew up to be a bad boy. She didn't never have sticking plasters ready when he got a cut, and Sunday mornings there was no one to rub him behind his ears, fill his eyes with soap and water and comb his hair the wrong way.

CHAPTER IV.—HIS PECULIARITIES.

Every thing which happened in the village was laid at John Henderson Tompkins' door. "It's some of that boy's work," they said whenever a bushel of plums, a watermelon or a peck of peaches mysteriously disappeared. He was probably guilty of everything charged, as when he died they found where he had hidden seventeen stolen cow-bells, forty axes, ever so many sawbucks, fifteen or twenty front gates and I can't remember how many snow shovels.

CHAPTER V.—DOWN ON HIM.

In time, as the reader was informed in a previous chapter, the adult male population of the village got down on John Henderson Tompkins. Old maids jabbed at him with umbrellas; merchants flung pound weights at him; shoemakers dosed him with strap-oil, and grocers always looked around for John Henderson when they wanted to heave out bad eggs and spoiled fruits.

CHAPTER VI.—HIS AMBITIONS.

You might think that they would have eventually succeeded in breaking the boy's spirit and dashing his hopes, but they couldn't do it. He had the ambition which nothing could check. He wanted to be a bold pirate and sail the raging main, and he was patiently waiting for the time to come when he could wear No. 10 boots and swear in a voice like the echoes of a bass viol. He would be content to crawl into a hen roost and to creep around horse barns for a few years, but then—but then—

CHAPTER VII.—EFFORTS AT REFORM.

Some of the more philanthropic citizens made strenuous efforts to reform the boy. They locked him up in a smoke-house for a week; then clubbed him until he couldn't yell; and they held him under a pump until he was limp as a rag, but as soon as they let him go he went right back to his old habits again.

CHAPTER VIII.—NEARING HIS END.

John Henderson Tompkins had kept this thing up for eight or nine years when our story opens, and he was nearing his end. Justice overtakes the guilty sooner or later, and justice was laying low for this bad boy. He had the cheek to believe that he would live to be a hundred years old, but he was to be taken down a peg or two and his mother left an orphan.

CHAPTER IX.—THE END.

One day while in the heyday of his wickedness, John Henderson Tompkins came upon something new in the line of plunder. It was a pile of little cans labeled "Nitro-Glycerine—Hands off—Dangerous Poison," &c., but he couldn't read and he didn't care a copper. He carried a can behind the meeting-house and sat down on a rock to open it. There wasn't any guardian angel around to tell him that he'd get busted if he fooled with that can, and so he spit on his hands and gave it a whack on the stone.

CHAPTER X—OBITUARY.

The folks all ran out, and after a good deal of trouble they found and separated the pieces of meeting house from the pieces of boy, and they got together enough of John Henderson to fill a cigar box and answer as the basis of a funeral. They buried the remains in a quiet nook, and the grave-stone marker put a little lamb on the head-stone to show that John Henderson Tompkins was meek and lovely.

—The following persuasive and encouraging note was attached to a baby left on a doorstep in St. Louis: "Sir: Please accept this orphan child. If you should despise the gift, give it to some one who will appreciate it. 'From the little acorn the mighty oak towers above.' This waif may yet be a Washington." Now the gentleman and his wife thus appealed to already had of their own eleven possible Washingtons (or Martha Washingtons,) and might have passed the little stranger over to the police but they didn't do it. They saw the arithmetical loveliness of the number 12, and kept and comforted the small unit.

Business Notices.

Important to the Sensitive.

Persons with active brains and of a delicate organization should never be subjected to violent purgation or any other treatment calculated to prostrate them. Leeching, cupping, starving, and intestinal rasping, are of doubtful expediency in any case, but they are almost certain death to the sensitive and fragile. What such persons need is stimulation, and the very best invigorant they can take is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. To give depleting medicines to the nervous, the debilitated, the infirm, the emaciated, the desponding is like firing broadsides into a sinking ship. Thousands of dyspeptics are killed every year by medicines that sap the physical and constitutional stamina which, if reinforced by that powerful vegetable tonic, would soon prove an overmatch for the disease. It is true that the bowels require to be relieved and regulated, and the liver controlled, as well as the stomach to be toned and the system strengthened, and let it be borne in mind that the Bitters accomplish these objects gently and surely.

20,000 Cures of PILES have been recorded during the past five years by ANAKESIS, the happiest discovery in medicine ever made. No disease is more painful and vexatious than PILES, and lotions, ointments and quack nostrums always make them worse. ANAKESIS is an infallible, painless, simple permanent cure, acts as a bougee, soothing poultice and medicine. The relief from pain is instantaneous and cure certain. All Doctors recommend it.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. ANAKESIS Depot, 46 Walker str., New York.

Teeth like orient pearls set in cushions of rose;
A breath like the perfume the toilet bestows;
These are charms to win hearts, when all other charms fade,
But they can't be preserved without SOZODONT'S aid.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

Helmbold's Buchu is still in the zenith of its popularity. Notwithstanding the absence of Dr. Helmbold, the celebrated medicine is still manufactured at the laboratory at Philadelphia, and is sold by all respectable druggists. It is warranted for all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs. Beware of counterfeits. Genuine has proprietor's private stamp. John F. Henry, New York, Sole Agent.

A Crown of Glory.—Nature's dowry to all her children is a fine head of hair. Kings cannot give, nor wealth purchase this inestimable gift. Take care of it, lest you lose it. BEARINE is a healthful invigorating Dressing. 4

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His ASTH CURE is said, by those who use it, to cure. All Reader, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

It affords me great pleasure to be able to announce to my friends (and to all others interested,) that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Company has fully resumed the manufacture of its UNRIVALLED MACHINE, and will expand its business with increased energy. Its new factories will soon be completed, and every machine will be as nicely constructed as possible. All who have used the Machine for four years or less, pronounce it

ENTIRELY NEW PRINCIPLE.

No other Machine in the United States having any thing for this purpose that can be compared with this late invention. It is applied directly to the presser bar, and is operated by the movements of the Needle Bar.

ITS ACTIONS ARE POSITIVE—ITS MOTIONS PERFECT.

As some of my friends, connected with the sale of other kinds of sewing machines, have interested themselves so much during the past winter as to falsely represent that the "Domestic" S. M. Co. had failed, and that there could be no parts obtained for the "Domestic" Needles, etc., etc., I will state that the "Domestic" Sewing Machine Co. has been making steady progress from the first, and as to parts of the machine, needles, etc., being obtained, I keep them constantly on hand. But although the "Domestic" where it has been sold may be run "from morn until eve" without tiring the operator. We have had scarcely any call for extra parts and are pleased to state that we have not so much business in that way as some of our neighbors. If however any one owning a "Domestic" should in any manner be disaffected, all matters will be made right by calling at my office. I will further state that as heretofore I shall keep on hand all kinds of Local Matters.

Getting Ready.

Steamer Appledore has arrived here from Boston, where she has been undergoing extensive alterations and improvements. The old boiler has been replaced by a much larger one; a large and commodious house has been built on deck, containing a gentlemen's saloon and engineer's room; and a new hurricane deck, extending nearly the whole length of the vessel, and a new pilot house, add much to the appearance of the steamer while greatly increasing her passenger accommodations. The wood work is done with black walnut and white ash, and all the arrangements are well designed and carried out, the "Laighton Boys" having spared no expense to secure the comfort and convenience of their guests or transient passengers, while on their boat.

Very extensive improvements have also been made in the Appledore House since the close of "the season" last year, which will enable the popular and good-tempered Vikings, Oscar and Cedric, to accommodate many more visitors than ever before; but the very large proportion of their rooms already engaged indicates that during the height of the summer travel they will be compelled to hang a large number of surplus guests on the fence and to the hooks in the office, as in years past. But visitors to the Appledore can always be sure of a good dinner, and courteous attention from the landlords, even if there isn't room enough to go all 'round.

Shipbuilding.

Mr. William F. Fernald, the builder of ship Jean Ingelow, has contracted to build another ship on the same model, the Jean Ingelow having proved herself a first-class ship in every respect,—a large carrier, a good sailer and a splendid sea-boat. The new vessel will be commanded by Capt. Matthews, who has commanded the brig Sally Brown successfully for a number of years past.

The three-masted schooner now on the stocks at the same yard (Raynes') will probably be launched on Tuesday, June 2d.

Laconics.

Very many citizens availed themselves of the opportunity to see the portraits of the three Governors Wentworth at the Common Council room, on Tuesday and Wednesday. To-day (Thursday) between the hours of 11 A. M. and 1 P. M., and from 3 o'clock until 6, these splendid pictures will be on free exhibition at the same place,—the last chance to see them before they are removed to the State House at Concord.

Lent's New York Circus will show here on the afternoon and evening of Friday, June 5th.

The Portland Advertiser understands that the recent change in the position of master carpenter at the navy yard was made at the instance of Congressman Burleigh, to "equalize the distribution of patronage between Maine and New Hampshire." The Advertiser is in error. Mr. Noyes, the removed, and his successor, Mr. Fernald, are both Maine men. We hope the latter will not allow any New Hampshire man to dictate him in selecting workmen.

Mr. George Hobbs of Wells, Me., succeeds Mr. Samuel A. James of Kittery as weigher and receiver in the steam engineering store at the navy yard.

The third and last exhibition of the Court street sabbath school comes off this evening. Admission 10 cents. The previous exhibitions have been very interesting.

A Portsmouth hairdresser opened the season by having his head shaved. Already, bleak signs of recuperation have set in.

When the versatile and ever-restless compositor changes the meaning of our remarks on the "Speakership" by inserting the word "humanity" for "unanimity," and, a correction being marked in proof, chooses to "correct" the wrong word and makes "enthusiasm" read "unanimiasm," we are careless as to the time when incineration wendeth its way hitherward.

"Old Aunt Sally," as she has been called, who for years past has roamed the streets of Boston and Portsmouth with a bundle of something or other in her arms and a torrent of imprecations and incessant mutterings pouring from her lips, has been transferred to Tewksbury, Mass., where she will hereafter be supported at the expense of the State. She has been insane for years, but until recently has been a nuisance only to herself. So many complaints have been made, however, that it was decided to remove her from Boston.

We are requested to inform those who propose to contribute flowers for Memorial Day, that they can be left at the Ward Room on State street during the morning of Saturday. The ladies are requested to aid in the preparation of the evergreen and flowers, and it is desired that they meet at the Ward Room, for that purpose, on Friday, and on Saturday morning. Wreaths and bouquets for special graves it is desirable should be distinctly marked.

The legislators and county commissioners meet at Brentwood to-day on invitation of the commissioners.

Some idea may be formed of the great amount of pleasure riding in our city from the fact that in the Rockingham stables, owned by R. H. Beacham, which is the best arranged and kept of any of them, there is used sixty tons of hay and over three thousand bushels of grain a year. Mr. Beacham has sixty carriages in his houses and his stock is the finest in this section.

The sum of $500,000 has been appropriated for this navy yard for the ensuing year.

The pigeon nuisance at the North Church, which has occasioned so much feminine discontent and masculine profanity, is to be abated if possible, workmen having been engaged for several days in putting up wire gauze in such a way as to prevent the objectionable birds roosting exactly over the sidewalk and the front door of the church.

The NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE for this week contains seven columns of local news.

An Acknowledgment.

In Wednesday's CHRONICLE we stated that the Ladies' Mission of the South Parish had sent aid to the sufferers by the Massachusetts flood, and to-day we publish a letter of acknowledgment for the same as follows:

NORTHAMPTON, MASS., May 23d.

To the Treasurer of the Ladies' Domestic Missionary Society of the Unitarian Parish of the city of Portsmouth, N. H.

I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter enclosing check for Thirty Dollars, together with a list of articles of clothing which have been forwarded per express, for the relief of the suffering ones in Mill River valley, so many of whom had in a moment swept from them every thing they possessed save the clothing in which they fled for their lives. While we who are in the midst of so much suffering, and have witnessed the anguish of the living in their search for the dead of their own families among the piles of debris along the river's bank for miles, have sought to render all the aid in our power, we have been cheered beyond expression in our work with the words of sympathy and material aid which has flowed upon us from far and near. It is truly wonderful, to witness the quick response to the call of the suffering ones. I should be glad to give you an exact description of the terrible devastation of this once beautiful valley, if language could express it. I have yet to hear of a single person who has been over the ground, saying that any published account was an exaggeration.

From the best data that we can get, one hundred and forty-six lives were lost,—in several instances every member of a family. One hundred and thirty-five bodies have been recovered. From a very careful investigation made by our relief committee, it appears there are six hundred and forty-five persons who are destitute, made so by this disaster. The estimated loss of property to these people (which does not include the manufacturers or public property of any description) is Two Hundred and Forty-Seven Thousand Dollars.

Will you please convey to the ladies of your society, our thanks for their contribution of money and clothing, all which shall be faithfully applied for the relief of suffering. Very truly yours,

H. K. STARKWEATHER,
Chairman of Relief Committee.

Contributions — liberal ones — will be needed for some time yet, to alleviate as far as possible the suffering caused by the disaster; and money or clothing forwarded to Mr. Starkweather at Northampton, Mass., will be faithfully and judiciously distributed.

Cruelty of Isabella.

[Eugene Lawrence, in Harper's Magazine for June.]

The Jews were the favorite victims of the Inquisition. When history shall cease to be as unreal as a fairy tale, and when crime shall no longer find its defenders, it will be related that "the gentle and virtuous" Isabella inflicted heavier wops upon the human race than Messalina or Mary Tudor. In 1492, in the dawn of a new civilization that was to overthrow at last the dark places of cruelty, and crush popes and inquisitors in a general uprising of the nation, Isabella, the foundress of the inquisition, decreed the banishment of the Jews from Spain. No pity had she for mothers who were to be torn from their prosperous homes to perish of hunger and thirst on the African shores, who were to leap into the blue Mediterranean to escape the insults of their captors, to see their babes die in their arms, their children sold into a fatal slavery; no compassion for the throng of learned and famous men who were to founder in the crowded ships or languish with disease and starvation in a foreign land. It is not told that the bigoted queen ever felt any remorse for her cruel deeds, or was ever willing to soften the woes she had inflicted needlessly on the most valuable portion of her subjects. At the famous meeting when Abarbanel, the most eminent of the Jews for scholarship and virtue, begged on his knees for pity for his people from the attentive sovereigns, when he offered an immense ransom for their preservation, when even Ferdinand hesitated, it was the queen who urged the relentless enforcement of the decree, and the stern Torquemada flung on the table a crucifix. "Sell him if you will," he cried, and terrified the king into obedience to the voice of the Church. The decree was published, and every Jew commanded to embrace Christianity or leave the realm.

Health Regulations.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH of the city of Portsmouth call the attention of the public to the following sections of City Ordinances No. 4 and No. 100, and invite all interested in the preservation of health in the City to aid them in the execution of their duty.

ORDINANCE NO. 4.

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within ten day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three for more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 11. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 14. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

SEC. 17. Any person or persons who shall violate any rule or regulation, or commit any act forbidden in any section of this ordinance, to which no special penalty is annexed, shall forfeit and pay a sum not less than one dollar nor more than twenty dollars, to be recovered by complaint before the police court of the city.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to 20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated barge at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with wooden and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," as called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

A String of Pearls.

An obedient wife commands her husband.
The discontented man finds no easy chair.
The man who pardons disappoints his foe.
None knows the weight of another's burthen.
Wherever the speech is corrupted, so is the mind.
Diligence is a fair fortune and industry a good estate.
When you have no observers, be afraid of yourself.
To those whose god is honor, disgrace alone is sin.
To a gentleman, every woman is a lady in right of her sex.
He who chatters much to no purpose climbs a tree to catch fish.
He that finds a thing steals it if he endeavors not to restore it.
The ancients dreaded death; the Chirstian can only fear dying.
A laugh is worth a hundred groans in any market.
Happiness can be made quite as well of cheap materials as of dear ones.

—"Would my little Ezra," asked a fond mother, out on West Hill, "like to be a missionary, and go and preach to the poor, suffering little heathen?" Tears—bright, pearly drops of feeling—glistened on little Ezra's eyes as he murmured: "Naw, I wouldn't; but I'd like to be on the perlice long enough to put a tin roof on the big lummax that stuck shoemakers' wax on my seat to-day. You hear me."

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.
Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.
It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.
It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.
By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.
As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.
Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

HENDERSON & CO.,

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

— OF —

Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons.

The Largest Stock, The Latest Styles, The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

SASH RIBBONS.	25 cents per yard.
SILK TIES	20 cents each.
FRAMES	15 cents each.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

The Rose of Tuolumne.

BY BRET HARTE.

It was a pleasant time to each. To Miss Jenny it had the charm of novelty, and she abandoned herself to it for that reason much more freely and innocently than her companion, who knew something more of the inevitable logic of the position. I do not think, however, he had any intentions of love-making. I do not think he was at all conscious of being in the attitude. I am quite positive he would have shrunk from the suggestion of disloyalty to the one woman whom he admitted to himself he loved. But like most poets, he was much more true to an idea than a fact, and, having a very lofty conception of womanhood, with a very sanguine nature, he saw in each new face the possibilities of a realization of his ideal. It was, perhaps, an unfortunate thing for the women, particularly as he brought to each trial a surprising freshness which was very deceptive, and quite distinct from the blase familiarity of the man of gallantry.

It was this perennial virginity of the affections that most endeared him to the best women, who were prone to exercise toward him a chivalrous protection—as of one likely to go astray unless looked after—and indulged in the dangerous combination of sentiment with the highest maternal instincts. It was this quality which caused Jenny to recognize in him a certain boyishness that required her womanly care, and even induced her to offer to accompany him to the cross-roads when the time of his departure arrived. With her superior knowledge of woodcraft and the locality, she would have kept him from being lost. I wot not but that she would have protected him from bears or wolves, but chiefly, I think, from the feline fascinations of Mame Robinson and Lucy Rance, who might be lying in wait for this tender young poet. Nor did she cease to be thankful that Providence had, so to speak, delivered him as a trust into her hands.

It was a lovely night. The moon swung low and languished softly on the snowy ridge beyond. There were quaint odors in the still air, and a strange incense from the woods perfumed their young blood and seemed to swoon in their pulses. Small wonder that they lingered on the white road, that their feet climbed unwillingly the little hill where they were to part, and that when they at last reached it, even the saving grace of speech seemed to have forsaken them.

For they stood, alone. There was no sound nor motion in earth, or woods, or heaven. They might have been the one man and woman for whom this goodly earth that lay at their feet, rimmed with the deepest azure, was created. And seeing this, they turned toward each other with a sudden instinct, and their hands met, and then their lips in one long kiss.

And then out of the mysterious distance came the sound of voices and the sharp clatter of hoofs and wheels, and Jenny slid away—a white moonbeam—from the hill. For a moment she glimmered through the trees, and then, reaching the house, passed her sleeping father on the veranda, and, darting into her bedroom, locked the door, threw open the window, and, falling on her knees beside it, leaned her hot cheeks upon her hands and listened. In a few moments she was rewarded by the sharp clatter of hoofs on the stony road, but it was only a horseman, whose dark figure was swiftly lost in the shadows of the lower road. At another time she might have recognized the man, but her eyes and ears were now all intent on something else. It came presently, with dancing lights, a musical rattle of harness, a cadence of hoof beats that set her heart in unison, and was gone. A sudden sense of loneliness came over her, and tears gathered in her sweet eyes.

She arose and looked around her. There was the little bed, the dressing table, the roses she had worn last night, still fresh and blooming in the little vase. Everything looked strange; the roses should have been withered, for the party seemed so long ago; she could hardly remember when she had worn this dress that lay upon the chair. So she came back to the window and sank down beside it, with her cheek, a trifle paler, leaning on her hand, and her long braids reaching to the floor. The stars paled slowly, like her cheeks; yet with eyes that saw not, she still looked from her window for the coming dawn.

It came, with violet deepening into purple, with purple flushing into rose, with rose shining into silver and glowing into gold. The straggling line of black picket-fence below, that had faded away with the stars, came back with the sun. What was that object moving by the fence? Jenny raised her head, and looked intently. It was a man endeavoring to climb the pickets, and falling backward with each attempt. Suddenly she started to her feet, as if the rosy flushes of the dawn had crimsoned her from forehead to shoulders; then she stood, white as the wall, with her hands clasped upon her bosom. Then, with a single bound she reached the door, and with braids and fluttering skirt, sprang down the stairs and out in the garden walk. When within a few feet of the fence she uttered a cry—the first she had given—the cry of a mother over her stricken babe, of a tigress over her mangled cub, and in another moment she had leaped the fence and knelt beside Ridgeway, with his fainting head upon her breast.

"My boy—my poor, poor boy! who has done this?"

Who, indeed? His clothes were covered with dust, his waistcoat was torn open; and his handkerchief, wet with the blood it could not staunch, fell from a cruel stab beneath his shoulder.

"Ridgeway!—my poor boy—tell me what has happened."

Ridgeway slowly opened his heavy blue-veined lids, and gazed upon her. Presently a gleam of mischief came into his dark eyes, a smile stole over his lips as he whispered slowly:

"It—was—your kiss—did it—Jenny, dear! I had forgotten—how high priced—the article was here. Never mind, Jenny!"—he feebly raised her hand to his white lips—"it was—worth it," and fainted away.

Jenny started to her feet and looked wildly around her. Then, with a sudden resolution, she stooped over the insensible man, and, with one strong effort, lifted him in her arms as if he had been a child. When her father, a moment later, rubbed his eyes and woke from his sleep upon the veranda, it was to see a goddess, erect and triumphant, striding toward the house with the helpless body of a man lying across that breast where man had never lain before—a goddess at whose imperious mandate he arose and cast open the doors before her. And then when she had laid her unconscious burden on the sofa, the goddess fled, and a woman, helpless and trembling, stood before him. A woman that cried out that she had "killed him"—that she was "wicked! wicked!" and that, even saying so, staggered and fell beside her late burden. And all that Mr. McClosky could do was to feebly rub his beard, and say to himself, vaguely and incoherently, that "Jenny had fetched him."

Before noon the next day it was generally believed throughout Four Forks that Ridgeway Dent had been attacked and wounded at Chemisal Ridge by a highwayman, who fled at the approach of the Wingdam coach. It is to be presumed that this statement met with Ridgeway's approval, as he did not contradict it, nor supplement it with any details. His wound was severe, but not dangerous. After the first excitement had subsided, "more was, I think, a prevailing impression, common to the provincial mind, that his misfortune was the result of the defective moral quality of his being a stranger, and was in a vague sort of way a warning to others, and a lesson to him.

"Did you hear how that San Francisco fellow was took down the other night?" was the average tone of introductory remark. Indeed, there was a general suggestion that Ridgeway's presence was one that no self-respecting, high-minded highwayman, honorably conservative of the best interests of Tuolumne County, could for a moment tolerate.

Except for the few words spoken on that eventful morning, Ridgeway was reticent of the past. When Jenny strove to gather some details of the affray that might offer a clue to his unknown assailant, a subtle twinkle in his brown eyes was the only response. Or when Mr. McClosky attempted the same process the young gentleman threw abusive epithets, and eventually slippers, teaspoons, and other lighter articles within the reach of an invalid, at the head of his questioner. "I think he's coming round, Jenny," said Mr. McClosky, "he laid for me this morning, with a candlestick."

It was about this time that Miss Jenny, having sworn her father to secrecy regarding the manner in which Ridgeway had been carried into the house, conceived the idea of addressing the young man as "Mr. Dent," and of apologizing for intruding whenever she entered the room in discharge of her household duties. It was about this time she became more rigidly conscientious to those duties, and less general in her attentions; it was at this time that the quality of the invalid's diet improved, and that she consulted him less frequently about it. It was about this time that she began to see more company, that the house was greatly frequented by her former admirers, with whom she rode, walked, and danced. It was about this time also, and when Ridgeway was able to be brought out on the veranda in a chair, that, with great archness of manner, she introduced to him Miss Lucy Ashe, the sister of her betrothed—a flashing brunette and terrible heart-breaker of Four Forks. And in the midst of this gaiety she concluded that she would spend a week with the Robinsons—to whom she owed a visit. She enjoyed herself greatly there, so much indeed, that she became quite hollow-eyed, the result, as she explained to her father, of a too frequent indulgence in festivity.

"You see, father, I won't have many chances after John and I are married—you know how queer he is—and I must make the most of my time," and she laughed an odd little laugh, which had lately become habitual to her. "And how is Mr. Dent getting on?" Her father replied that he was getting on very well indeed, so well, in fact, that he was able to leave for San Francisco two days ago. "He wanted to be remembered to you, Jinny—'remembered kindly,' —yes, they is the very words he used," said Mr. McClosky, looking down and consulting one of his large shoes for corroboration. Miss Jenny was glad to hear that he was so much better. Miss Jenny could not imagine anything that pleased her more than to know that he was so strong as to be able to rejoin his friends again, who must love him so much and be so anxious about him.

Her father thought she would be pleased, and now that he was gone there was really no necessity for her to hurry back. Miss Jenny, in a high metallic voice, did not know that she had expressed any desire to stay—still if her presence had became distasteful at home—if her own father was desirous of getting rid of her—if, when she was so soon to leave his roof forever, he still begrudged her those few remaining—if—"My God, Jinny, so help me!" said Mr. McClosky clutching despairingly at his beard, "I didn't go fur to say anything of the kind. I thought that you—" "Never mind, father," interrupted Jenny magnanimously, "you misunderstood me; of course you did, you couldn't help it—you're a Man!" Mr. McClosky, sorely crushed, would have vaguely protested, but his daughter, having relieved herself after the manner of her sex, with a mental persoual application of an abstract statement, forgave him with a kiss.

Nevertheless, for two or three days after her return, Mr. McClosky followed his daughter about the house with yearning eyes, and occasionally with timid, diffident feet. Sometimes he came upon her suddenly at her household duties with an excuse so palpably false, and a careless manner so outrageously studied, that she was fain to be embarrassed for him. Later he took to rambling about the house at night, and was often seen noiselessly passing and repassing through the hall after she had retired. On one occasion he was surprised first by sleep, and then by the early-rising Jenny as he lay on the rug outside her chamber door.

"You treat me like a child, father," said Jenny. "I thought Jinny," said the father, apologetically, "I thought I heard sounds as if you was takin' on inside, and listenin' I fell asleep." "You dear old simple-minded baby," said Jenny, looking past her father's eyes, and lifting his grizzled locks one by one with meditative fingers, "what should I be takin' on for? Look how much taller I am than you," she said, suddenly lifting herself up to the extreme of her superb figure. Then rubbing his head rapidly with both hands, as if she were anointing his hair with some rare unguent, she patted him on the back and returned to her room.

The result of this, and one or two other equally sympathetic interviews was to produce a change in Mr. McClosky's manner, which was, if possible, still more discomposing. He grew unjustifiably hilarious, cracked jokes with the servants, and repeated to Jenny humorous stories, with the attitude of facetiousness carefully preserved throughout the entire narration, and the point utterly ignored and forgotten. Certain incidents reminded him of funny things, which invariably turned out to have not the slightest relevancy or application. He occasionally brought home with him practical humorists, with a sanguine hope of setting them going, like the music-box, for his daughter's edification. He essayed the singing of melodies with great freedom of style and singular limitation of note. He sang "Come Haste to the Wedding, Ye Lasses and Maidens," of which he knew a single line, and that incorrectly, as being peculiarly apt and appropriate.

Yet away from the house and his daughter's presence he was silent and distraught. His absence of mind was particularly noticed by his workmen at the "Empire Quartz Mill." "E' the old man don't look out and wake up," said his foreman, "he'll hev them feet of his yet under the stamps. When he an't givin' his mind to 'em, they is altogether too promiskuss."

A few nights later, Miss Jenny recognized her father's hand in a timid tap at the door. She opened it, and he stood before her, with a valise in his hand, equipped as for a journey.

"I takes the stage to-night, Jinny dear, from Four Forks to 'Frisco. Maybe I may drop in on Jack afore I go. I'll be back in a week. Good-by."

"Good-by." He still held her by the hand. Presently he drew her back into the room, closing the door carefully, glancing around. There was a look of profound cunning in his eye as he said slowly:

"Bear up and keep dark, Jinny dear, and trust to the old man. Various men has various ways. Thar is ways as is common and ways as is uncommon; ways as is easy, and ways as is oneasy. Bear up and keep dark." With this Delphic utterance he put his fingers to his lips and vanished.

Despatches from Calcutta state the distress from the famine in India is increasing. Nearly three million of people are dependent upon the government for food.

A despatch from Washington announces the death in that city of Rear Admiral William Bradford Shubrick, the senior officer on the retired list of the navy, in his 84th year. He was made a midshipman in 1806, and was rapidly promoted. While serving as a lieutenant in 1813, he commanded a battery of one gun on Craney Island in the repulse of the British forces, and two years later he was on board the Constitution in her memorable action with the Cyane and Levant.

The coming session of the legislature will be fraught with interest. Full reports of the proceedings will be furnished by the Concord Patriot, Monitor and People for 50 cents for the session. The Nashua Telegraph will also have its correspondent, a most readable writer, on the ground, who will present matters in a republican point of view.

The Arkansas correspondent of the New York Times says that the Brook-Baxter confusion has so broken up party lines, united old factions, and created new ones, that to-day, strictly speaking, there is no republican and no democratic party in the State.

While two men named Edward Scandelberry and Thomas Frethway were descending the shaft of a mine at Wilkesbarre, Pa., the rope attached to a bucket broke, precipitating the men to the bottom, a distance of one hundred and fifty feet. One of the men was instantly killed; the other will die.

In fifteen elections under the local option law in California the anti-liquor people carried eleven.

Up to Saturday night over $1600 had been paid over to the Clerk of Courts at Alfred, Me., as fines in liquor cases.

Broadway, New York's great thoroughfare, is without stages,—an omnibus is in Gotham a "stage." The cause is a little singular. The drivers for many years received only $1.75 per day, for fourteen or sixteen hours work. The men took their own fares, and helped themselves to what they thought they ought to have over their wages. By "knocking down," or as blunt people would say, by stealing, they made their pay average $3 as they acknowledge and their employers knew. Lately the stages were furnished with locked boxes, such as are used on one-horse horse-cars, in which passengers deposited their fares. The "bosses," acknowledging tacitly the loss which this would cause the drivers, raised their pay to $2.50 per day. The drivers have at length come to the conclusion that this is not enough, and have struck for $3. The stage owners still hold out, and propose to import drivers from Boston.

One Costelley, a hotel keeper at Hanover, Mass., has been arrested for the murder of Mrs. Hawkes, whose body was found in the river at Braintree on Sunday, May 24th. She was in his service just before her death.

The new finance bill in the House, known as the Blaine compromise, was defeated by a vote of 117 to 112, on Thursday, the extremists of both sides uniting to do so. A conference committee was ordered, as the Senate bill was also defeated by a vote of 164 to 70.

The Maine Senatorship.

[Portland Advertiser.]

As the summer approaches, the political thermometer is rising, and all signs indicate hot weather in Maine, with occasional thunder showers. The Senatorial succession is the principal event of the year, and for the last ten days rumors touching the canvass for Mr. Hamlin's seat have run from mouth to mouth, and crept into the newspapers, one contradicting another, until plain people, with a lively choice but no special opportunity to obtain correct information, have fallen into great confusion of mind and no longer know what to believe.

It has been reported that the office of Commissioner of Pensions has been tendered to Mr. Perham, and would probably be accepted by him, in which case he would cease to be a candidate for the Senate. It has been said that Mr. Hamlin, on looking over the ground, had become discouraged and would withdraw, and that thereupon Mr. Hale, backed by Mr. Blaine's powerful influence, would appear as the eastern candidate, leaving the succession in his Congressional district to Mr. William McGilvery of Searsport. Mr. Washburn has been announced in the Boston papers as a candidate, and the announcement has been contradicted. Coupled with the contradiction, has come the report that Mr. Spring of Portland would be a candidate, and that the Press would presently bring out his name in a set editorial article. It has been whispered about that Mr. Drummond is only a decoy candidate, and will withdraw at the most favorable time for Mr. Hamlin. Governor Dingley has been represented as waiting for an opportunity to descend into the troubled pool, and General Chamberlain has been pictured as an astrologer patiently watching the political skies. One paper has even intimated that a veteran democrat, like Mr. Bion Bradbury, or Mr. E. F. Pillsbury, may be preferred to Senator Hamlin by exasperated republicans.

The situation, notwithstanding its apparent intricacy, is really very simple. It was understood, six years ago, that Mr. Hamlin would not be a candidate for reelection. Many of his supporters at that time consider his present attitude as involving a violation of personal faith, and he will be opposed to many who were foremost in urging his claims in 1868. On the other hand he has an immense advantage in occupying now the seat which was then held by his competitor. He controls now the patronage which was then available against him, and no Senator knows better how to use it. His appointees throughout the State are and have long been busy, and he is to-day stronger than any candidate in the field, and has not the slightest thought of abandoning the contest.

For the opposition, Mr. Drummond has been announced as a candidate for some months, and we are authorized to say, what anybody who knows him would know without being told, that his name has not been used and will not be used for any purpose of deception. He is a candidate because his friends believe he would be a useful Senator and mean to elect him if they can. Governor Perham, so far as we can learn, has no intention of accepting the office which is said to have been tendered to him. The contradictory reports concerning Mr. Washburn are of course unauthorized, but appear to indicate what we have no doubt is true, that there is a strong desire in various quarters to see his rare talents once more employed in active public service. Mr. Spring, it is well known, will cordially support Mr Washburn, if an opportunity offers. The other gentlemen named may come forward, if some crisis should open the way for them, but at present have no organized support, though it is not improbable that they may all have some votes in the Legislature.

He Didn't Like the Newspaper.

[Cor. Toledo Blade.]

At Springfield there is a delay of half an hour, and one is glad to stretch his legs by a walk up and down the street. Springfield is more like a western city than any place I have been in east of Buffalo. The streets are not built up solidly, like Hartford, but are fast being so. The United States arsenal and the railroad shops have built up the city. It is quite a railroad center, and will grow more in the next ten years than in the last. Many manufactories are starting and the people are enterprising. Insurance is quite a leading business, but the Republican has done more to make Springfield known throughout the country than aught else. It is the best paper in New England, and one of the best edited papers in the country.

I supposed every one in these parts liked the Springfield Republican, but found one man who didn't. He got on at Thompsonville, and I offered him a Republican I had finished reading, but he handed it back when he read the name, saying:—

"I dont want any news from that paper."

"I supposed that everybody read it in these parts," I answered. "Has it been pitching into you?"

"Pitching into me? Great Cæsar! I should say it had. If it had only pitched into me, I wouldn't care. But just let me meet Bowles."

"You never make anything by striking an editor," I said; "better grin and bear it."

"Yes; that's all right for you to say; but just let me meet Bowles! I'll show him how to run a paper."

"What did he do?"

"Do? He did a good deal. Here's how it is: I often went up to Springfield on the last train at night, did my business in the evening, and came home on the first morning train. Well, one night, I met an old crony and we went to Music hall to the theatre. When we came out we met two girls that Jim said were his cousins, but they weren't, it was all a fraud. I didn't know it, and when Jim offered his arm to one girl, I did the same to the other. They took us to their rooms, and I saw how it was. Of course I couldn't get right out, so I treated; then Jim treated; then the girls treated; in fact we were having a pretty good time, when some fellows came in and began to raise a row. In less than no time the police were in and had us. The next morning I was hauled before the court and fined $7.40. I didn't care much, because I gave a false name, and I knew my wife couldn't find it out, but, the next morning I'll be eternally flunked if that Republican didn't have it all in and my own name, too."

"Did your wife see it?"

"I should say she did."

"Did she make a fuss?"

"Fuss, Godfrey, Elisha! Are you married?"

"Yes."

"Then you know how it is. I have to go to Springfield in the day-time now. Just let me see Bowles!"

"But," said I, feeling I ought to take a newspaper's part, "you can hardly blame him, you know. It was only the proper enterprise."

"Enterprise! Enterprise be d—d! There's such a thing as having too much enterprise."

Important to the Sensitive.

Persons with active brains and of a delicate organization should never be subjected to violent purgation or any other treatment calculated to prostrate them. Leeching, cupping, starving, and intestinal rasping, are of doubtful expediency in any case, but they are almost certain death to the sensitive and fragile. What such persons need is stimulation, and the very best invigorant they can take is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. To give depleting medicines to the nervous, the debilitated, the infirm, the emaciated, the desponding, is like firing broadsides into a sinking ship. Thousands of dyspeptics are killed every year by medicines that sap the physical and constitutional stamina which, if reinforced by that powerful vegetable tonic, would soon prove an overmatch for the disease. It is true that the bowels require to be relieved and regulated, and the liver controlled, as well as the stomach to be toned and the system strengthened, and let it be borne in mind that the Bitters accomplish these objects gently and surely.

Teeth like orient pearls set in cushions of rose;
A breath like the perfume the toilet bestows;
These are charms to win hearts, when all other charms fade,
But they can't be preserved without SOZODONT'S aid.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. s29 4w

20,000 Cures of PILES have been recorded during the past five years by ANAKESIS, the happiest discovery in medicine ever made. No disease is more painful and vexatious than PILES, and lotions, ointments and quack nostrums always make them worse. ANAKESIS is an infallible, painless, simple permanent cure, acts as a bougie, soothing poultice and medicine. The relief from pain is instantaneous and cure certain. All Doctors recommend it.—Price $1.00. Sold by druggists everywhere. ANAKESIS Depot, 49 Walker str., New York.

A Crown of Glory.—Nature's dowry to all her children is a fine head of hair. Kings cannot give, nor wealth purchase this inestimable gift. Take care of it, lest you loose it. BEARINE is a healthful invigorating Dressing. 4

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Reader, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

Lent's Circus.

Concerning its exhibition the Boston Advertiser says: The New York Circus still maintains its old reputation as the most classical and aristocratic of circusses. Like Mrs. Jarley's even more famous establishment it justifies its claim to be "the delight of the nobility and gentry," because everything in it and about it is decent and respectable. The show, too, is good this year. There is a great variety in the programme, which includes every form of leaping and tumbling, both "ground and lofty," trapeze acts, cannon-ball feats, performances upon the flying cord, and riding of every sort and kind. The most remarkable single act is that of the Brazilian Martinho Lowande, whose bare-back riding when he is accompanied by his five year old boy is terrible to behold, especially at the last when the little fellow stands erect and unguarded upon his own feet on top of his father's head. The performance upon the trapeze by the graceful Mlle. Celeste and Mr. Forest is impressive, even in this day of similar wonders; and Mr. Ducrow's act upon the "corde volante" is novel and interesting. Fritz and Cassman's gymnastic feats are ingenious and brilliant; and Natalio Lowande's posturing upon the elevated "hoop perch," supported from his brother's belt, recalls the similar acts of the incomparable Buislay family. The "battoute" leaping of the company averages extremely well, and comes to a fine climax in the pair of "double somersaults forward," turned by Mr. Carson.

History Repeats Itself.

We have received a copy of the Logansport (Indiana) Star, accompanied by an earnest enquiry if a late Mayor of this city has gone West. On looking over the paper we "see the point" at once, the Mayor of Logansport having recently refused to entertain a motion on the ground that it was out of order, and then ruled an appeal from his ruling to be out of order, also! The Logansport Solon next declared the Council adjourned, (though the members declined to be adjourned,) refused to entertain a demand for the yeas and nays, and vacated the chair; and on the Council choosing a temporary chairman to take his place, declared that proceeding out of order also, and ordered a policeman to arrest the usurper! Not bad, that, for a western mayor, but not quite up to the performance of that Portsmouth Mayor who vetoed a refusal of the Board of Aldermen to sustain his ruling on a point of order, and afterward refused to entertain a demand for the yeas and nays because the demand was not seconded.

Laconics.

There is to be a meeting of the stockholder in the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth railroad at Kittery on Monday next.

The voters in the 9th School District in Kittery having voted to establish a free high school are now undecided just where to locate it. After spending $200 or $300 in fitting up Armory Hall for the purpose they came to the conclusion but few scholars in the district will be accommodated.

Stratham Grangers, William G. Brown, Master, were entertained as the guests of Portsmouth Grange No. 22, Haven L. Scott, Master, Wednesday evening, and the festivities were very enjoyable.

Mr. Jos. H. Gardiner has been appointed Deputy by the President of the national council for the counties of Rockingham, Strafford, Belknap and Carroll, with full power and authority to organize subordinate councils of the Order of Sovereigns of Industry.

Work in all departments will be suspended, at the navy yard, on Memorial Day.

Lieut. Comdr. Geo E. Wingate, U. S. N., of this city, has been ordered to the Norfolk yard.

A Thrilling Escape.

[Springfield Union.]

The marvelous escape of young Dunning at Leeds has already been alluded to, but his story is so interesting that it is worth giving in detail. When the alarm was given he was at his work in the spool room of the Nonotuck silk works. Rushing out of the mill his first thought, of course, was for his family. He found that his father, wife and three children had all left the house. He shouted to them to run for their lives, at the same time pointing to them what direction to take. His wife and children obeyed him and were safe; but his father, an old man of seventy-eight, thinking that something might be got out of the house before the flood reached it, went back. In dashed his son after him, begging him to leave the doomed building, and, why, he knew not, raising one of the windows. As he did so the floor gave way beneath their feet, and his father disappeared from his sight. The young man had just time to clamber out of the window, and as the house tipped, crawl up its side to the roof, as the building broke up, leaving him but a fragment to cling to for his life. And on he went, sailing down that awful flood in full sight of his wife and children, who, as they looked on in terror and agony, expected momentarily to see him sink beneath the surging mass. In a few seconds his frail raft was crushed like an egg-shell, but his presence of mind never deserted him, and he jumped for another, and when that was gone, for yet another. He was hastening down with the current at terrific speed, and intent on the fearful task he had in hand, never once thought of the dams toward which he was hastening. The first one is reached. In the awful crash and jam he is hurled seemingly twenty feet in the air, to come down and be submerged for the first time, far beneath the waves. As he came to the surface again, and clasped another piece of driftwood, he realized with an intensity unimaginable by those whose lives have never been imperilled, that another and higher dam was but a short distance below, and that he had absolutely no hope for life, unless he escaped from the flood before that point was reached. Most fortunately the swollen mass of water and debris at that moment surged toward the shore, and seizing an opportunity which seemed to be providentially presented, he clambered across some broken roofs which served him as a bridge, and, with a leap, again had a foothold on the earth. The feelings of a man, who, like him, had scarcely a hope of life, on finding himself escaped from the jaws of death, cannot be depicted. Only a cool and intrepid man could have passed through that experience, and possibly Mr. Dunning could not, but for his service, years before, as a raftman in Canadian waters. He had been swept half a mile down the river, and was utterly exhausted by intense strain on mind and body, nerve and muscle; yet as he lay on the bank for a moment to get his breath, he could not suppress a smile at the appearance of a man who escaped from the flood near the same place by seizing hold of the limbs of a large tree on the bank. Fleshy though he was, this man went up that tree like a squirrel, and did not stop until at least thirty feet above the water! Mr. Dunning describes as the most appalling incident of that memorable ride, the heart-rending screams and groans of women and children in houses that were swept down with him, and seemed to be beneath him. He says they will ring in his ears till the latest day of his life.

An Imported Nuisance.

[Elizabeth (N. J.) Journal.]

It seems to be only a question of time when the slaughter of the English sparrows shall be commenced. In this city they are now recognized as little better than unmitigated nuisances. Scarcely a niche or crevice in any of the buildings but is filled with their nests, and in the immediate neighborhood of these it is far from safe to walk if the matter of cleanliness is at all considered. Besides this the object for which they were brought into this country is not attained. It was supposed that they would clear the trees of worms but they seem to clear away everything else but worms, and drive away the birds that would clear them off.

Only a few days ago a gentleman living in the First Ward saw a couple of American birds come into his yard and commence to build a nest. They were peaceful little fellows, and their singing, when they did sing, was sweet music compared with the noisy squabble and chatter of the sparrows. They had not been long in the yard before the sparrows found them out and attacked them. The mother bird fought bravely, but the sparrows came by the half dozen and actually killed her, and then took noisy possession of the place. Last year this same gentleman could get no fruit from his trees, and it was so unusual that he knew not what to make of it. He found out a day or two ago. His wife was watching at the window, and she saw the sparrows in the pear trees pulling off the blossoms. She called her husband to see, and while he was watching he saw one of the birds light near a bunch of half a dozen or more blossoms, and actually pull them all off the stem and fly away with them.

In speaking of these noisy and already troublesome birds, the same gentleman said that where we used to have a number of blue birds and robins and "chipples," birds that do pick the worms from the trees, there is not now one to be found. In Germany, he said, the sparrows are such a nuisance that there are laws for killing them. In certain sections every boy between specified years of age is obliged to bring to the official of the borough in which he lives at least twelve sparrows, dead or alive, every week, and in other sections where they are excessively numerous, the girls are obliged to do the same. The only way they can protect the grape vines in some sections of Germany is by covering them with netting to prevent the sparrows from tearing off the blossoms or ripening fruit. As for fruits, they can't raise any. Whole fields of rye and wheat are destroyed in a short time by the sparrows. They pull it up when it is just sprouting, and carry it away. This last little practice of the sparrows has been exhibited in this city. A gentleman sowed a bed of lettuce. When it began to come up the sparrows got at it and have pulled up nearly every sprout. It will be almost worthless.

Between their filth, their war upon the other and prettier and far daintier birds, and their destruction of fruits and young plants, it seems not improbable that when the sparrows have increased to a few hundred thousand more in each city, and carry on their depredations accordingly, the work of ruthlessly slaughtering them will be a necessity, both for the sake of cleanliness and economy.

—A Milwaukee man has applied for a patent on a fountain pen, which, by the pressure of the thumb on a small rubber ball, projects a stream of ink through the holder and into the face of the fellow who is looking over your sholder while you are writing. It lacks one essential however; it makes no provision for the afterclap.

ORDINANCE No. 4.

SEC. 3. All waste water of houses, yards, cellars, sinks, pumps, etc., shall be conveyed by their owners or occupiers to the common sewers, or to such places as the Health Officers may direct.

SEC. 4. No person shall be allowed to throw any vegetable or dead animal substance, or any other matter capable of producing infection, into any street, lane, alley or dock, or upon any wharf, but shall bury them or throw them into the river below low-water mark.

SEC. 5. The contents of vaults and privies shall not be permitted to rise within one foot of the surface of the earth. And all owners or occupiers of buildings having such vaults or privies as may require it, shall cause them to be emptied within the day from the promulgation of this ordinance, and in future on or before the first day of May in each year. And any such owner or occupier neglecting so to do, shall forfeit and pay for every such neglect a sum not less than three nor more than twenty dollars, and a like sum for every week's neglect after the time specified.

SEC. 11. The health officers may give written notice to the owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure, to remove or destroy any nuisance or other things deemed by them, on examination, to be injurious to the public health, within a certain time limited therein; and in case such owner or occupier—the said notice having been given to him, or left at his usual place of abode—shall neglect to comply therewith, the said health officers may by direction of the mayor and accompanied by the city marshal, forcibly enter such building, vessel or enclosure, and cause the said nuisance or other thing aforesaid to be removed or destroyed.

SEC. 14. The owner or occupier of any building, vessel or enclosure shall be liable to pay the expense of the removal or destruction of any such nuisance or other thing, as aforesaid, including fees of the health officers who order or cause the same to be removed; and the same may be recovered by action to be brought in the name of the city.

SEC. 17. Any person or persons who shall violate any rule or regulation, or commit any act forbidden in any section of this ordinance, to which no special penalty is annexed, shall forfeit and pay a sum not less than one dollar nor more than twenty dollars, to be recovered by complaint before the police court of this city.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1836—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-Office.

Spring Maladies.

[Science of Health.]

In the olden times, the opinion generally prevailed, that as the thermometer rose above the degree marked temperate and lighter clothing became comfortable, something must be done to purify the blood, but, unfortunately, the means then resorted to do not command the admiration of a modern hygienist. There were bleeding and salts, calomel and jalap, and pills innumerable. There was, however, a basic truth in the idea that the more sedentary and in-door habits of the cold season and the still worse habit of extra hydro-carbonaceous feeding—butter, sugar, lard, pork, gravy, etc.,—occasioned obstructions in the excretory organs, the liver, skin, kidneys, bowels and lungs, rendering special attention to the general depurating function expedient.

But, thanks to the health educators of the race, the people are rapidly learning better preventives of disease, and better remedies than poisonous drugs. Few persons seem to be aware that the whole range of maladies which are more prevalent in early spring, are attributable to personal habits; and very few physicians ever intimate, if they are aware, that what the people eat and drink during the winter is the most efficient cause of what they suffer in summer.

The preventative measures, therefore, may be all summed up in the words, wholesome regimen.

But when the spring maladies appear, whether in the shape of humors, boils, catarrh, influenza, epizooty, pneumonia, rheumatism, erysipelas, sick headache, etc., "Do thyself no harm." Take no drug stuff. Lose no blood. Submit to no blistering. Neither vomit nor purge. Sweat not. Swallow no hard cider. Do not even bother with herb tea. But bathe daily, diet abstemiously, exercise moderately, prefer vegetable food, drink only water, eschew seasonings, give nature a chance.

These terrible ailments, for which so many are drugged to death every spring of every year, are manifestations of a remedial process—an effort of the vital organism to rid itself of noxious matter. Do not thwart this process, nor arrest it, nor suppress it, nor cure it. But favor it in all possible ways, that purification may be complete and restoration to health perfect.

—"My son, you look like a boy who has been brought up by affectionate parents," said a kindly stranger to a golden-haired child, and the latter, in an ecstatic exclaimed, "Do I? Just look at my back."

HENDERSON & CO.,

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

—OF—

Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.
